Surviving Rejection

Learning to take hold of one’s life is very difficult in a culture that values property over life. - Hadi R. Madubuti

“See back then, was when entertainers had talent,” I argued showing more than a little generational bias. “They sang instead of talked! Y’see that fine sister right there? That’s Jody Watley. You don’t find them like her today. She could sing AND dance.”

While watching old episodes of Soul Train, I was trying to stir up a friendly debate among a group of post-boomer generation friends and relatives in hopes of lifting spirits after news of the loss of yet another black male to gun violence.

The Los Angeles coroner had ruled that Don Cornelius, the legendary creator, host and producer of that unapologetically black television program, which was designed “to do for soul music what American Bandstand and Dick Clark did for mainstream audiences,” died from a self-inflicted gunshot to the head.

Soul Train, with its diverse, trend-setting and bold expressions of black culture, aired first run episodes from 1971 to 2006 making it the longest continuously running first-run syndicated television program in history.

Yet much more than the music, clothing, dancing and talent level of the entertainers has changed.

Suicide, once taboos in the black community, evidenced by rates of 5-6/100,000 compared to 12/100,000 for Caucasian Americans (American Association of Suicidology, 2008), is rising and becoming an epidemic among black men.

While a critical health issue for the community, particularly among young youth, suicide has not received the media attention or public response to spur the prevention and intervention efforts necessary to reduce or arrest this disturbing trend.

What lies beneath the rise?

Since details of the Cornelius tragedy are unknown and little evidence-based inquiry exists concerning African-American suicide, no one can offer explanations with certainty.

However, extreme hopelessness, rooted in shame and lack of self-worth emerging from feelings of rejection, ridicule and hostility in interpersonal and group encounters is likely at the core of the problem.

The current period contains more extreme and concentrated poverty than that of the past and comes at a time when resentment has replaced sympathy for the poor and people of color.

The loss of hope that accompanies the unprecedented loss of jobs and homes and the rise in despair commensurate with mounting bills and debt in tough economic times are apt to plunge even those who are emotionally strongest into a state of utter hopelessness.

The American ethos and patriarchal culture which link success and masculinity to a man’s ability to make money are also likely to leave one depressed when employment is unavailable, particularly in a society that strives to be tax-free and whose presidential candidates publicly state that they are “not concerned about the poor.”

Additionally, perceived burdensomeness and lack of belongingness are likely to produce despair, demoralization, depression and psychological changes.

Another risk factor is due to growing up in today’s poverty because it often increases exposure to lead paint and other environmental contaminants which are linked to mental disorders.

When the easy access to guns in the black community is added to economic stress and the above risk factors, suicide rates are bound to rise.

What about the resiliency of the past which seemed to provide African Americans with an immunity against suicide?

Certainly, the coping strategies and resiliency resources from previous generations are missing from today’s community.

The past generations were able to ascribe setbacks to systemic structures of racism and discrimination. But the gains of the civil rights movement, in many ways, raised the “personal expectations, achievement opportunity and aspirations of blacks” (Joe, 2006).

Many black persons today believe that their lack of opportunities and success are unavailable, particularly in a society that strives to be tax-free and whose presidential candidates publicly state that they are “not concerned about the poor.”

What lies beneath the rise?

Since details of the Cornelius tragedy are unknown and little evidence-based inquiry exists concerning African-American suicide, no one can offer explanations with certainty.

What’s in Your Safety Net?

By Lafe Tolliver, Esq
Guest Column

Well, recently we have still another rich, fat cat Republican putting both of his feet, one arm and three fingers into his gold-plated mouth with the now ill famed utterance, “I am not concerned about the very poor, they have their safety net…”

Now, I expect ultra-rich Republicans to say such goofy things but to couple such an elitist remark with the caveat that this “safety net” will be their financial cure-all or panacea is “stupid as stupid does.”

Have you ever witnessed such a person as Mitt Romney falling all over his face trying to be hip and cool with people who earn less than a million bucks a year. He simply cannot do it. Try all he can, Romney gets twitchy and twitches when he has to go to a soup kitchen or go to a car dealership showroom that sells Fords or Kias.

That simply ain’t him and his body language and subsequent gaffes indicate that this man is not at home on the range but rather is home only in the Hamptons or in monitored gated communities.

When asked about the definition of a “safety net,” Romney had that glazed look in his eyes and thought that the safety net was the net that you see under the circus performers who do high wire trapeze shows.

So, as a journalist with a steady commitment to ferretting out truth so that the reader can be informed and also participate in this discussion, I have assembled the below Safety Net quiz so that you can see exactly how Romney thinks when these same questions were placed before him.

The answers that he gave (which are at the end of this column) will show that Romney needs to have someone put a net over him and take him off of the public stage.

Reluctantly, Romney’s staff personnel allowed their candidate to take this quiz about what’s in your safety net; and then to give us the results. Here they are. Read them and weep.

QUESTION ONE:  Which of the following food jointstakes food stamps (snap card):
(1) Four Seasons
(2) Vito’s Pizza
(3) Five Guys
(4) Krogers
(5) don’t know….should I? What’s a Kroger?

QUESTION TWO:  If you suddenly take ill, what do you do if you have no health insurance?
(1) pray without ceasing
(2) go to the local ER
(3) stay in bed and hope for the best
(4) make out your will
(5) who doesn’t have health insurance?

QUESTION THREE:  If your employer closes down, what do you do next?
(1) network to find a new job
(2) get a taxecking cap mask and find a nearby bank
(3) file for unemployment benefits
(4) have your kids at school apply to become janitors
(5) everyone can always find work if they really really want to!

QUESTION FOUR: Your landlord evicts you. What do you do?
(1) go live with grandma until things get better
(2) find a suitable card-board box and make the best of it.
(3) if you got a car, move into it
(4) panhandle near a busy intersection
(5) I have four houses, what’s your problem!

QUESTION FIVE:  Your funding for schooling has been reduced. What’s next?
(1) drop out and live off of the fat of the land
(2) sneak into the classroom to continue your education
(3) understand that this your destiny and accept it
(4) apply for more loans and have more debt stress
(5) quit complaining and start your own school!

QUESTION SIX:  Your childcare and day care benefits are being stopped. What now?
(1) place the kids up for adoption
(2) give twice daily plasma donations to raise money
(3) have the kids apply to become janitors at the daycare center
(4) quit working and stay home
(5) my kids are fine! what is wrong with yours?

Well, needless to say I was not impressed by the answers (see below) that Romney provided back on this quiz. It clearly shows that he is out of touch with the poor and is clueless as to how to fix anyone’s “Safety Net.” Romney’s history does not have the proverbial Horatio Alger’s, “rags to riches” story. No, for him, it has always been, “riches to riches.”

And now he has the audacity to pontificate that poor people have a safety net and with that net they should be content and satisfied and stay in the ‘Net’.

He does however indicate that if the ‘Net’ has any holes in it, he will fix it.

When you read his below answers to the above quiz, how’s about those answers for his fix to your ‘Net’ problems?

Not answers to help you move up and out from the confines of the ‘Net’ as a result of any Romney inspired programs that can assist you but rather he states in the same sentence that the very rich are fine as they are… but as to poor people.

Well, that is a horse of a different color. With a Romney presidency, the only ‘net’ that you will find will be on a basketball court.

Toledo Community Coalition Calling for Coalitions to Merge

By Artisha S. Lawson
The Sojourner’s Truth Reporter

In a city where coalitions form often, Toledo Community Coalition is urging other neighborhood coalitions to join forces. During the February 3, 2012 conference, coalition leaders and members gathered to report on their progress thus far, to create vision statements per targeted task forces, and to submit their request to other Toledo-area coalitions and community-minded organizations.

Among the five task forces, quality of life task force has met consistently since the coalition’s formation in August 2011. The group has compiled a list of six community-minded facilities where a need has been identified, these facilities are Bethesda Christian Center Cathedral in South Toledo, Frederick Douglass Community Association in Central City, James M. Caldwell Center and The Friendly Center in North Toledo, the Grace Community Center in northwest Toledo, and Monroe Street Neighborhood Center in west Toledo.

The group also identified 15 services that are lacking in these communities. The list includes transportation, access to medical care, legal aid and youth after school programs. In addition, the committee is working to reduce the impact of gangs, arsons, break-ins, and slow response of city services.

“The city of Toledo will be a safe model of collaborative community where open communication, partnership, love, and second and third chances are no longer the dream but the reality of life,” said Rev. W.L. Perryman, pastor of Jerusalem Baptist Church.

In addition to quality of life task force, the Toledo Community Coalition is currently working in four other areas: education, economic development, health and housing. This coalition grew from a group of Toledo-area pastors to also include several agencies, major funders to identify and address concerns in the African American community of Toledo says the coalition’s press release.

In the education task force, Rev. John C. Jones of the Greater Toledo Urban League is working to combat some key issues. “Our vision is a community in which all children have equality access in which to compete in a global society,” said Jones.

The coalition is open to individuals and organizations willing to dissolve, work in harmony for the betterment of Toledo.

“Our group is blessed because we want to bring everyone together, we’re not creating another group, and we want to be the group that brings groups to the table. You do not need all these groups, just all the groups’ members talking to each other. We are meeting with Toledo-area coalitions in the coming weeks. We meet every other Saturday at 9:00 a.m. the next meeting is in April 2012. Join us,” said coalition member Juanita Green, former director of the City of Toledo’s Board of Community Relations.

The National Sorority of Phi Delta Kappa - Beta Gamma Chapter - held Teach-A-Rama 2012 on Monday, January 30, 2012 at the Sanger Branch Library in order to address the theme of “Enhancing Collaboration between General Education Teachers and Teachers of Students with Special Needs.”

Teach-A-Rama, a national program of Phi Delta Kappa, was initiated to acquaint teachers, parents and the community with various aspects of the field of education and over the years has addressed a variety of teaching issues such as classroom management, skills in the use of new materials, cultural enrichment and current issues affecting minorities in education, to name a few.

Last week’s session at Sanger brought together a range of presenters including Lynn McCain, State of Ohio Support Team I; Ellen Lamm, Burndale special education teacher; Desiree Carn, Scott High School special education teacher/school counselor; and Betsy Hood, WGTE education specialist.

Closing remarks were offered by Paula Martin, a member of the Beta Gamma Teach-A-Rama committee. Other members of the committee were Chairman Linda Collins, Rachelle Dunning and Bessie Mack. Phi Delta Kappa is a professional association for teachers. For more than 100 years, Phi Delta Kappa has focused its work on the tenets of service, research and leadership. Phi Delta Kappa is one of the largest education associations in the world with thousands of members dedicated to improving education, including teachers, principals, superintendents and higher education faculty and administrators.

Deborah Washington, PhD: Harvard Principal Promotes a Successful Learning Environment

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

February 08, 2012

As we tour Harvard Elementary School on Glen dale Avenue, the route takes us past a first-grade classroom full of quiet, smiling six-year-olds.

One of the first graders is Principal Deborah Washington’s grand daughter.

“She has transformed to a K-8 format and eliminated free-standing middle schools, standing middle schools, and eighth graders back into the more rigid elementary school structure. Older students may have thought they had escaped. Once the teachers were identified to work with the older students, Washington and her staff worked through the summer to plan their approach to instruction, deciding to ‘departmentalize’ instruction at Harvard. That is, each of the five teachers instructs in one subject, and students in both the seventh and eighth grades.

“We met and worked it out among us,” says Washington. “The district encouraged departmentalization.”

Of course, students at Harvard, even those who transferred in “out-of-district,” have a substantial advantage over many other schools in the TPS system — “a very involved community” as Washington says.

Harvard, part of the Bowsher feeder pattern, reflects the community activism that is so pervasive in that part of town.

Even parents who are out-of-district, when they come into our community, they blend into the culture,” says Washington who frequently pulls aside such out-of-district students to gauge their reaction to their new surroundings.

“Dr. Washington, it is so different,” she recalls new students saying so frequently.

People treat each other with respect, I can learn here.”

That speaks volumes for us,” says Washington of the effort the staff of Harvard is putting forth. “We must be doing something good in this district.”

Washington recalls a recent incident with a new fourth grade student who had not yet become accustomed to that culture. When asked to perform a task by his teacher, the student declined.

“I make it a point to know each of my students names,” she says. “I certainly know all my students names,” she adds. And, success, of course.

And one of Washington’s ingredients for success is her effort to get to know as many of her students — approximately 450 attend Harvard — as possible.

“I make it a point to know all my students names,” she says. “I certainly know all their first names. There is an African proverb: ‘If you don’t have anything, your name is what you have.’”

Knowing and using a child’s name, says Washington, “personalizes” that child.

It’s entirely apt that Washington would quote an African proverb. A native of Monrovia, Liberia, Washington left her homeland in 1972 to come to America. Here in the U.S., she met Leonard, her husband of 38 years, also a native of Liberia. They have raised four children and have 11 grandchildren.

What’s next for the longtime TPS administrator?

“My goal when I retire is to transition into higher education,” she says, possibly to a nation south of the Sahara.

Active in the Toledo community on a variety of levels, Washington was recently elected president of the local chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc, the nation’s oldest Greek-letter African-American sorority.
TPS Foundation Announces 12th Round of Grants, New Named Scholarships

Your Library Observes Black History Month!

By Rhonda B. Sewell, Library Media Relations Coordinator

Special to The Truth

The annual observation of Black History Month was originated in 1926 by African American historian Carter G. Woodson, as “Negro History Week.” Woodson chose February because it marked the birthdays of President Abraham Lincoln and abolitionist Frederick Douglass; two Americans who Carter believed influenced the lives of black Americans.

Discover more about the contributions of black Americans during Black History Month as the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library brings you the following sample of FREE activities:

- Friday, February 10 – 9 a.m. – 5:30 p.m.: What’s Your Black History Month IQ (Intelligence Quotient)? Test your knowledge with our quiz and earn a sweet treat. Birmingham Branch Library, 203 Paine Ave. Info: 419.259.5210.

- Friday, February 10 – 9 a.m. – 5:30 p.m.: Famous African Americans! Stop in to identify famous African American inventors and their great inventions. Win a prize for each correct guess. Reynolds Corners Branch Library, 4833 Dorr St. Info: 419.259.5320. (Grades K-12)

Friday and Saturday, February 10 & 11 – 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.: Black History Contest! Test your knowledge of black history by completing a contest form. Participants will be rewarded with a special treat. Sanger Branch Library, 3030 W. Central Ave. Info: 419.259.5370. (Grades 6-12)

- Saturday, February 11 – 2-3 p.m.: Hidden Genius: Frank Mann, the black engineer behind Howard Hughes. With the help of his trouble-shooting engineer Frank Mann (1908-1992), Hughes helped revolutionize the world with unique inventions and designs. Because Frank Mann was African American, he did not always receive the credit that he deserved. Few people today know of the accomplishments of this talented aeronautical and aerospace engineer, award-winning sports car designer, soldier of fortune in the second Italian-Ethiopian War, World War II officer, and primary civilian instructor for the Tuskegee Airmen. Author H.T. Bryer, will tell the story of how his brother and collaborator, Paul Bryer, met this Renaissance man and share their quest to bring Frank Mann’s remarkable story to the world. The presentation will include a 15-minute video of news footage, interviews and highlights of Mann’s many accomplishments. Bryer’s debut book Hidden Genius will be available for purchase after the presentation. Bryer, who was reared in Texas, has spent most of his adult life in the Toledo area. His work has been published in academic journals on subjects such as ethnic history, language, and folklore. Sanger Branch Library, 3030 W. Central Ave. Info: 419.259.5370.

- Saturday, February 18 – 1-3 p.m.: Whence You Came. A workshop on how to productively research your African American genealogy. SAAB Men Assist TPS at Community Appreciation Luncheon

Sojourner’s Truth Staff

The men of SAAB (Student African American Brotherhood) lent a hand to Toledo Public Schools on Tuesday, January 31 by serving as ushers, greeters and speakers (Vince Hill and Joshua Dunn) for the community appreciation luncheon held at the Summit Annex Building. TPS held the luncheon in order to start expanding partnerships in the community and to obtain an idea of the kinds of programs and services community partners might be able to provide to students, said Romules Durant, Ed.D., assistant superintendent of elementary education.

Library’s Recommended Book for February

Special to The Truth

For the month of February, the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library recommends Henry Louis Gates Jr.’s, Ph.D., latest book, Life Upon These Shores: Looking at African American History (1513-2008), which gives readers an illustrated landmark book tracing African-American history from the arrival of the conquistadors to the election of United States President Barack Obama.

Life Upon These Shores, informed by the latest, sometimes provocative scholarship and including more than seven hundred images—ancient maps, fine art, documents, photographs, cartoons, posters—this book focuses on defining events, debates, and controversies, as well as the signal achievements of people famous and obscure. Dr. Gates takes us from the 16th century through the ordeal of slavery, from the Civil War and Reconstruction through the Jim Crow era and the Great Migration; from the civil rights and black nationalist movements through the age of hip-hop to the Joshua generation. By documenting and illuminating the sheer diversity of African American involvement in American history, society, politics, and culture, Dr. Gates bracingly disabuses us of the presumption of a single “black experience.”

Life Upon These Shores is a book of major importance, a breathtaking tour de force of the historical imagination.

The Library and The Blade are scheduled to feature Gates for a talk here in Toledo at 7 p.m. on Thursday, May 3 for their Authors! Authors! Spring Series at the Stranahan Theater, 4645 Heatherdowns Blvd. Visit toledolibrary.org for the entire spring lineup of authors, which kicks off on Monday, March 5. Tickets are currently on sale for Authors! Authors! and can be purchased at any library location for $10 or $8 for students.
Yesterday, you were a famous singer. People around the world wanted to hear your voice. Concerts were sold out everywhere and you signed so many autographs that you thought your fingers would break, but the best thing about it was performing on stage. Well, that, and when JLo called. That was pretty cool, too.

Of course, Mom always said you had a good imagination.

Maybe tomorrow, you can be a famous basketball star or, if you find What Color is My World? by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Ray Obstfeld, illustrated by Ben Boos & A.G. Ford, you can read a book by one.

Ella and Herbie were not impressed with their new home. Mama said to give it a chance. The place had potential, though it was dirty and kinda creepy. Things would change. Mama said, when Mr. Mital arrived. He was a handyman they'd met at church, and he'd help fix things up.

No doubt about it, Mr. Mital was a nice man, and he could sense that the twins were less than thrilled about their new home. He heard them grumble and grump, but he knew that Herbie and Ella were missing something important: this new house had history, and more.

Mr. Mital was a crafty one, and as he began telling the twins about things around their home, he was also telling them about African-American inventors. Take, for instance, light bulbs. Of course, the new house had them but without an African-American inventor’s work, Thomas Edison’s light bulb might not light. And while the twins knew about Edison, without the “Black Edison,” communication might be different, too.

Herbie and Ella loved their computers, but without Dr. Mark Dean, those devices might not be quite as useful. Movies and video games wouldn’t be the same without Dr. Valerie L. Thomas’s work, and race car driving changed because of James E. West. The way we eat, play, live and stay safe might all be different without African Americans.

So who was this mysterious Mr. Mital, who knew so much? Ella and Herbie couldn’t believe what they found out...

Got a kid with a variety of interests and a restless taste in reading? Then grab this book, because What Color is My World will fill a lot of slots.

Author Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is a big proponent of “standing on the shoulders of giants,” and this book definitely reflects that. With his co-author Raymond Obstfeld, Abdul-Jabbar tells the story of inventors who learned from their predecessors - both black and white - and refined common, everyday things to make them more widely useable.

In the process of this telling, the authors also mix in a little humor and trivia, a bit of mystery, and wonderful artwork by Ben Boos and A.G. Ford.

I liked the variety of this book, its interactive presentation, and the fact that imaginative children will find a lot to learn here. If your seven-to-11-year-old has a curious mind, in fact, then being without What Color is My World? will leave him blue.
Owens Findlay-area and Toledo-area Campuses Present
A Conversation with Holocaust Survivor Irving Roth, Feb. 14

Area residents interested in receiving a firsthand account of the horrors of the Holocaust and anti-Semitism are invited to a free lecture featuring Holocaust Resource Temple of Judea of Manhasset Director and Holocaust survivor Irving Roth at Owens Community College’s Findlay-area and Toledo-area Campuses on Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Presented by the College’s Office of Student Activities and the Department of Social and Behavioral Sciences, Roth’s lecture presentation will occur at 11 a.m. in the Conference Center Room 111 on the Findlay-area Campus. A second lecture event will take place at 2 p.m. in the Center for Fine and Performing Arts Mainstage Theatre on the Toledo-area Campus. Owens’ Findlay-area Campus is located on Bright Road in Findlay, while the Toledo-area Campus is located on Oregon Road in Perrysburg Township. Admission to both events is free and the public is encouraged to attend.

Roth was born in Kosice, Czechoslovakia on Sept. 2, 1929 and arrived in New York City in 1947 via Auschwitz and Buchenwald concentration camps in Germany. The memories of his experience in the concentration camps has never faded as he devotes his time and efforts to educating people on the horrors of the Holocaust and the evils of prejudice and anti-Semitism.

Roth currently serves as the director of the Holocaust Resource Temple of Judea of Manhasset (Manhasset, N.Y.) and an adjunct professor at the University of Maine. He is a recognized speaker on anti-Semitism and the Holocaust and is a frequent lecturer at colleges and universities. Roth provides personal testimony on his experiences during World War II.

His honors include receiving the Spirit of Anne Frank Outstanding Citizen Award from The Anne Frank Center USA for promoting human rights, social justice and initiating the Adopt a Survivor Program, which has been instituted nationally and internationally in public and parochial high schools as well as in colleges and universities. Additionally, Roth has presented at such international conferences as the Yad Vashem in Jerusalem.

Roth edited and coordinated the publishing of the book titled Adopt a Survivor – An Antidote to Holocaust Amnesia. He and his son, Rabbi Edward Roth, Ph.D., co-authored and published Bondi’s Brother, a book about Roth’s experiences before, during and after the Holocaust. They also published a Holocaust Study Guide for Social Studies and Language Arts Teachers, which encompasses a complete curriculum on the Holocaust and is taught in conjunction with “Bondi’s Brother” in elementary, middle and high schools as well as in colleges and universities. Roth obtained his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn.

For additional information about the lecture presentations, call (567) 429-3029 or 1-800-GO-OWENS Ext. 3029.
Lourdes University celebrates African-American History Month

Documentary, community concert, national read-in and Book discussion planned

Lourdes will host the following events in honor of the 2012 African-American History Month:

- February 15
  - Sponsored by the Black Caucus of National Council of Teachers of English, Lourdes University will be part of the 23rd national African American Read-In. Members of the community can choose from nearly 70 titles including fiction, non-fiction and poetry pieces such as “Nonviolent Resistance Must Remain a Civil Rights Principle” by Martin Luther King, Jr.; “Dream Deferred” by Langston Hughes and “A Lesson Before Dying” by Ernest Gaines. Ebeid Student Center in the lower level of Delp Hall, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

- February 16
  - Presented by the Black Student Union, will take as its theme “It’s Not Just a Black History Month: It’s Black History Every Month.” Students will have an opportunity to visit the Motown Museum and The Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History in Detroit, MI. Founded in 1985, the Motown Museum preserves the legacy of Motown Record Corporation and culture through exhibits and programs that promote the values of vision, creativity and entrepreneur- ship. The Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History is the world’s largest institution dedicated to the African American experience. Open to Lourdes community only.

- February 21
  - Lourdes University annual Celebration of Black History Month will feature guest speaker The Honorable Kevin Hofmann. His book Growing Up Black in White addresses the issue of racial diversity and shares Hofmann’s first-hand account of being raised in a diverse household. Born to a white mother and black father in Detroit in 1967, only weeks before the race riots that brought a major city to its knees, the author was taken to a foster home and then adopted by a white minister and his wife. In this fascinating memoir, Hofmann reveals the difficulties and joys of being part of this family, particularly during a time and in a location where acceptance was tentative and emotions regarding race ran high and hot. 2 p.m. in the Dan at Lourdes Commons. Free and open to the public – but please RSVP to tcolbert@lourdes.edu or mtcolbert@lourdes.edu

For more information or for tickets for the concert can be purchased by calling St. Martin de Porres Parish, 419-241-4344, during regular business hours.

BGSU Celebrates Black History Month

Special to The Truth

Bowling Green State University kicks off Black History Month with the Black Issues Conference and other events to celebrate aspects of African-American life.

The 13th annual Black Issues Conference, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Feb. 11 in the Bowen-Thompson Student Union, will take as its theme “It’s Not Just a Black Issue: Politics, Leadership, Civil Rights.” The conference is co-sponsored by the Black Student Union and the Office of Multicultural Affairs and will include a keynote address by attorney Walter T. Madison, president of the Board of Trustees of the Akron Law Alumni Association, Foundation Board member of the Akron Bar Association, board member of the Akron Law Library Association and District Counselor for the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc.

The conference will offer three concurrent sessions, ending with a closing panel discussion. For more information about the day’s events, call Chad Coates at 419-372-9645.

A Visions of Legacy Dinner, sponsored by HUE (Hon- oring, Urging and Empowering: Queer People of Color) will be held Saturday (Feb. 4) in McFell Center Gallery to celebrate LGBT African-Americans who serve as impor- tant contributors to the U.S. and the world. The dinner begins at 6 p.m., followed by the show at 7. Student tickets are $5 in advance and $10 at the door. Faculty tickets are $15. Tickets will be sold from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. until Feb. 3 at the Student Union tables. For more information, contact Tiffany Smith at tfsmith@falcon.bgsu.edu.

The Office of Residence Life and the SMART (Stu- dents of Color Mentoring, Aiding, Retaining and Teach- ing) Program will sponsor a Taste of February: A Cultural Journey from 6-8:30 p.m. on Feb. 16 in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the Union. Contact Ana Brown for more information at gboywnn@bgsu.edu.

Sheila Brown, associate director of BGSU’s Office for Multicultural Affairs, has been working with Bowling Green High School and Middle School to develop a number of activities throughout the month. These culmi- nate with the third annual Bowling Green High School and Middle School Black History Month Program, at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. on Feb. 21 in the high school auditorium. The show will include the anthem “Lift Ev’ry Voice and Sing,” a step routine, performance of an origi- nal song called “Preparing for Tomorrow,” a short skit about Rosa Parks, a spiritual performed by The Shades of Brown and a short tribute to black athletes who broke the color barrier in professional sports.

For updates about the month’s events, visit www.bgsu.edu/blackhistorymonth.

22nd Annual “Evening with Toledo Symphony” honoring Black History Month at St. Martin de Porres Church

Special to The Truth

Wil Clay, artist and illus- trator, and Michael Youngblood, who is direc- tor of the Office of Black Catholic Ministries for the Catholic Diocese of Toledo, will be honored, posthu- mously, when St. Martin de Porres Parish, the Toledo Diocese and The Toledo Symphony partner for the 22nd Annual Neighborhood Concert in honor of Black History Month.

The concert, held at the Church, 1119 W. Bancroft Street, will begin at 5:00 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 26th. The Cen- tral Catholic High School Gospel Choir, under the di- rection of Derrick Hammon, will be featured in the sing- ing of “Lift Ev’ry Voice and Sing,” the African-American Anthem. Clay and Youngblood will be honored with the Katharine Drexel Award. Katharine Drexel, born and raised in Philadelphia, de- voted her life and fortune to the Indian and African-American missions. She was noted for her educational ef- fort. During her lifetime, approximatley 60 schools were opened by her congregation. The most famous founda- tion was made in 1915; it was Xavier University, New Or- leans, the first such institu- tion for black people in the United States. Those who receive the Katharine Drexel Award are recognized for their work as educators. This annual concert fea- tures compositions which reflect the contributions of Af- rican Americans to the clas- sical music repertoire. Jeffery Pollock, resident conductor of the orchestra, and Marvin Sui, artistic director, have chosen a program which highlights the theme, “Lift Ev’ry Voice and Sing.” One of the featured compositions is: “John Brown’s Body” by Puts, with Symphony mem- ber Robert Clemens as nar- rator. The Scherzo movement of the “Afro-American Sym- phony” by Still will begin the second half of the program.” Selections from Porgy and Bess,” “A Salute to Ray Charles” and “Oh Happy Day,” will round out an ex- citing and inspirational evening.

For more information or for tickets for the concert can be purchased by calling St. Martin de Porres Parish, 419-241-4344, during regular business hours.
The Internet, the Idea of On Line Piracy and What It Means To You

By Michael Hayes

Minister of Culture

The company behind the com- laws you didn’t even know ties contact you. Within days, federal authori- button allowing you to now so you click the “SHARE” as this song has you feeling deprived of feeling as good Facebook friends should be thoughtful, you see no rea- enjoying some music. go to youtube and now you’re since you haven’t heard it in a year. You open a separate browser tab or application, a separate product it spent tons of money to create. Quite the ghastly situation, isn’t it? Well this isn’t reality. Yet. But it came close just a few weeks back when Rep- publican-backed legislation in the U.S. Congress threat- ened to change the Internet as we know it. S.O.P.A. (Stop Online Piracy Act) and P.I.P.A. (Pro- tect I.P. Act) were defeated before they could become law. Public outcry, digital pro- test from Internet giants like Wikipedia and Google along with President Obama him- self denouncing the legisla- tion all helped to keep our Internet experience the way we’ve grown accustomed to hitting it. But I have a feeling this fight is just beginning. IT’S LIKE JUNGLE SOMETIMES. The Internet is something like international waters. There’s some loosely de- fined, universal rules that keep it from becoming com- pletely chaotic. But for the most part, anything goes. It’s a jungle, but safe passage is possible with just the slight- est use of common sense. Child predators, racist extremist groups and virus riddled spam emails are just a few of what I personally feel are serious on line threats the government should be handling. But instead of better pro- tecting us against these kinds of things, Republicans in Congress are focusing on the part of the Internet wilder- ness that robs multi-million dollar companies of slightly wider profit margins. Lobbyists from the televi- sion, film and music indus- tries have influenced politi- cians to pass laws that will better regulate the Internet and stop them from losing money. It’s about content. The Internet right now is a beautiful place if you love entertainment. There’s a zillion ways to occupy yourselves, video, movie, or random piece of media, your heart desires. There is a Heineken com- mercial with this kooky Asian retro rock song that I just can’t get enough of and through a few Internet searches I know now that song as “Jaan Pehechaan Ho” and I’ve watched the original movie scene where it appeared at least 100 times. But each time you access your favorite media without going through the company’s portals who produced that media (or without being charged by that company), then mega corporations with endless piles of content can claim you have unfairly ex- ploited the intellectual prop- erty they have rights to. I’m sure you have seen a youtube clip there one day and gone the next, or sped up or slowed down or even with the sound completely gone…that’s what this is all about. I think the world wide web is the best innovation human- ity has come up with since the automobile. Yes, there is piracy that goes on. Whoever you get your bootleg DVD’s from, they are guilty of piracy. If you have ever down- loaded a song by a major artist and it wasn’t free, you are guilty of piracy. Software can be pirated, media can be pirated, video games.. and more. The question is, are these companies really losing as much money as they claim? In the case of the music industry, YES! But they have been beaten up by the Internet so often they have found ways to make it work. The film industry, how- ever…has had two record- breaking years in the past decade in terms of profit. Cash is pouring into Holly- wood now just as regularly as it always has. There are websites based offshore somewhere that will allow you to watch or even download every single movie currently at the cinema. I agree that perhaps it should be regulated, but hon- estly…Hollywood isn’t go- ing broke over it. The Internet is a random wilderness of knowledge, opportunity, pointless dis- traction, access and expres- sion. For better or for worse, our Internet has become the embodiment of our First Amendment rights and true democracy. It’s not perfect, but it’s fine just as it is. DOUBLE STANDARD? Now for those of us who are content creators our- selves, is it a double standard that we are using the Internet to promote our own music and art that we hope to make a living from while pirating the music and art of others? Good question, right? Stay tuned for part two of this feature article coming soon. Also…if you are on Facebook…search me: Michael Mercury Hayes. On 2.12.12. – pay atten- tion, my company will be doing something special on the Internet that day.

Atlantic Records/WMG is the company behind the company Paramore is signed to and they consider your “share” content warfare. Because you let 2,000 people here this song for free, a case can be made that you have negatively impacted the label from profiting off a product it spent tons of money to create. Quite the ghastly situation, isn’t it? Well this isn’t reality. Yet. But it came close just a few weeks back when Rep- publican-backed legislation in the U.S. Congress threat- ened to change the Internet as we know it. S.O.P.A. (Stop Online Piracy Act) and P.I.P.A. The Alpha Xi Lambda Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. hosted its 20th annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Scholarship Breakfast on January 14 at Central Park West – raising monies for its scholarship fund and honoring a respected member of the community.

The annual event – designed to commemorate the life and legacy of Dr. King, is one of two major fund raisers held annually by the local chapter and generates support for scholarships to college-bound students.

This year, the fraternity recognized Johnnie Early, II, Ph.D., with its “Drum Major Award.”

Early, a nationally known and respected member of the pharmacy community, is the dean of The University of Toledo’s College of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences. He had been recognized as one of “The 50 Most Influential Pharmacists in America” by American Druggist.

Early received his undergraduate degree from Fort Valley State University and his doctorate from the School of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Science at Purdue University.

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc. was founded in 1906 at Cornell University and is the first intercollegiate Greek-letter fraternity established for African-Americans.

The local chapter of Alpha Xi Lambda was founded in 1928.
