Feminization of Poverty in Head Start

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.

Sexism has diminished the power of all black liberation struggles - reformist or revolution ary. -Bell Hooks

Whether as pastor, academic or columnist, I have learned (by being surrounded by several strong women) to be reticent when dispensing so-called wisdom regarding relationships or power dynamics between the genders.

As men, we benefit from the disproportionate power, privilege and advantage automatically bestowed by society. Therefore, we are often oblivious to our own patriarchy, male supremacy or sexism. And while some men can be legitimately engaged in feminist activism or label themselves male feminists, the self-analysis of women by women seems to bring fresh insights often only accessible by female lived experience.

As a result, I was greatly inspired by the following insights provided by Kristi Hannan, Ph.D. in response to my May 16, 2012 article “A House Divided:”

“In his May 16 column, ‘A House Divided,’ Reverend D. L. Perryman shares his conversation with Professor Charles Ogletree about gender divisions in the black community, citing the traditional view in the black church that ‘a woman’s place is in the home and not in leadership.’ Dr. Ogletree argued that progress has been made in the 20 years since the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings and that there is reason to be very optimistic about the future of gender equality.

“Although clearly, progress has been made and will continue, the gender divide remains and is deeply intertwined with economic disparities. A local case in point is the process by which decisions are being made about who will be involved in applying for the $12.9 million federal Head Start grant for Toledo, a subject of much media coverage for the past six months.

“Nationally, half of children in Head Start live in households headed by women and 99 percent of Head Start teachers are women. It’s a safe assumption that Toledo mirrors these demographics. In contrast, those involved in deciding who will be the grant applicant for Head Start, who will be involved in partnerships with the applicant agency, and how the program will be governed are, as I understand it, all men in high level administrative positions in their organizations.

“The economic status of the women whose children receive Head Start services and who deliver those services is both a barrier to their participation in these decisions, and a reason why their interests, and the interests of the children they care for and teach, need to be represented. Both groups of women are affected by what sociologist Diana Pearce (1978) termed the ‘feminization of poverty,’ the increased concentration of poverty among female-headed households resulting from the ‘economic and social consequences of being female.’”

“According to recent Census data, nearly a third of households headed by a female (with no husband present) live below the poverty threshold ($23,050 for a family of four), compared with 16% of families headed by a male (no wife present) and six percent of married couple families.

“Although the average earnings of Head Start teachers is above poverty ($28,000 in 2008-2009), they earn much less than other workers with similar levels of education. Decision-makers should ensure that these groups of women have a say in how resources are used to meet the educational and economic needs of children, their families, and the women who teach them.

“Interestingly, when decisions move from funding and governance to the classroom, women are not only at the table, but are well represented. At local, state, and national levels, women are involved in teaching, program administration, curriculum development, teacher preparation, leadership development, and research. At Ohio’s Early Care and Education Conference this April, male presenters and attendees could be counted on one hand relative to the several hundred women participating.

“Just as early childhood education would benefit in many ways from more male representation in the teaching side of the equation, greater female representation in finance and governance is needed to help narrow the divide.”

Kristi Hannan, Ph.D. is a professional whose program provides health and developmental services so that children can start school healthy and ready to learn.

Now, you know that a permanent levy is like being tattooed. It stays and stays and even when you wish it were not around...there it is.

A permanent reminder of what maybe you should not have done in that wild and crazy moment.

But, back to the school board which wants to give the tax payers a permanent tattoo on their financial foreheads that will read, “we now own you forever.”

My inside contact, whom I will call, “Noodles” and I had the following conversation in the parking lot of the now defunct Stanley’s Restaurant.

Noodles: Listen. I presented all of your ideas to the board at an executive session and they went nuts! Hollering and yelling and screaming. I thought the place turned into a nut house. When I brought up your idea of teachers and others putting their kids in a public school, you would have thought that I was cutting off their fingers with a blowtorch.

The board members that have kids said they would resign and move out of Toledo rather than do that. The other board members that had kids but never placed them in a public school, thought it was a denial of their freedom of choice.

ME: Noodles. Doesn’t it make you wonder just what these board members had in mind when they ran for the school board? Obviously it was not about their kids being in a public school. They ran for the power and to be seen in the public’s eye. They are charlatans. They are saying that the public schools are only good for “those other” kids but as for their precious Jane or Johnny, they will not have any of it.

Noodles: Man. I never saw such angst about their school kids. You would think that you were asking them to put their kids on a death walk to Manchuria or something.

What is that all about?

ME: Noodles, you gotta understand that for decades and decades, the school board members and the teachers and staff and administrators have been putting their kids in private and parochial schools on the premise that they are getting a better education but then they want the parents of the kids in a public school to not only send their kids to a public school but also to fund their paychecks so they can take those checks back to places other than Toledo.

Noodles: Wow! I had no idea it had been going on for that long. I guess when you multiply the state subsidy for each kid (currently $5,800.00) who is not enrolled in a public school, over the years and decades, that is millions and millions of dollars that does not get put into the coffers of the public schools.

ME: Noodles, it seems that you have had quite an education with the school board because of these issues. So… what gives?

Noodles: It does not look good. You can forget about the other ideas of adding three parents to the school board or giving principals more control and input at their schools. Those two ideas were dead upon arrival.

ME: So, tell me. What do I tell my readers about how they should vote for this permanent levy if the school board is not willing to give up anything?

Noodles: (scratching his beard): You got me. I wouldn’t vote for this levy if they are that mad about biting the hand that feeds them. I had no idea that things were this bad.

ProMedica and Habitat for Humanity Partner for Benefit of Local Family

By Fletcher Ward
Sojourner's Truth Editor

ProMedica is sponsoring a Habitat for Humanity house in north Toledo and over the course of the last six to eight weeks, over 150 employees of the health group have volunteered their time to build a residence for a deserving Toledo family.

In this particular case, that family is Deb Ward’s. Ward first applied for housing through Habitat for Humanity two years ago. Within a few short weeks, her home will be completed giving her and her family the opportunity to move in shortly thereafter.

Ward, a single mother who is raising her two biological children and four foster children, is a case worker with the Lucas County Department of Jobs and Family Services. She is also attending graduate school at Lourdes University, soon to earn a master’s degree in organizational leadership. Her eldest children, sons Miah and Malcolm, just graduated from Maumee High School.

On any given day at the house site, one can find volunteers from Habitat, ProMedica and Ward’s church, First Church of God, pounding nails and painting walls on the newly constructed house on Ward Avenue.

Coordinating ProMedica’s effort at the site is Gaye Martin, manager of Community Advocacy, whose outreach efforts include such programs as Healthy Eating, Health Conversations in schools (peaking so far with over 1,000 students), a scholarship program with local high schools and a home repair ministry.

Habitat for Humanity was founded in Georgia in the late 1960’s by Millard and Linda Fuller. The concept is to provide homeownership for those in need through no profit/no interest loans. The new homeowners payments are used to pay back into the fund for still more homes.

Habitat branched into developing nations in 1973 and since its inception has built over a half a million houses, sheltering more than 5 million people worldwide.

The Library’s Summer Reading Club

Special to The Truth

It’s time for you and your children and you and your grandchildren to sign up NOW for the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library’s annual Summer Reading Club (SRC)!

This year’s theme, “Dream Big READ!” encourages everyone from infants to adults to expand their horizons with big thoughts, big words, but most of all BIG dreams through reading!

SRC’s “Dream Big READ!” kicked off this week, and runs NOW through August 4. We have reading clubs for all ages!

You must first register for SRC by either stopping in any neighborhood Library location, or aboard the bookmobile to pick up and fill out an SRC entry form, or register online at src.toledolibrary.org on the Summer Reading Club page. It’s all FREE!

Everyone can participate, here are the age categories for SRC:

• READ TO ME (Infant to three years): Read to your baby every day, complete an activity page and earn a prize for baby and for you!
• KIDS (Preschool to fifth Grade): Track the time you spend reading and visit your library for a reading folder. Read at least 15 minutes a day.
• TEENS (sixth to 12th Grade)
• ADULTS (18 years and older)

Read a book and enter! The more you read, the better your chances of winning some fantastic prizes for all age categories!

Kids and Teens can show your SRC ‘hang tag’ and catch a ride to the Library on TARTA for FREE this summer! Just show the TARTA driver your SRC ‘hang tag’ . . .

Thank you to our generous SRC sponsors:

A Few of the Best and Brightest – In The Toledo EXCEL Program

Special to The Truth

Toledo EXCEL, a scholarship incentive program at The University of Toledo which began in 1988, reached a milestone this year when it graduated its 20th class of high school seniors on Sunday June 10. To date, there are more than 1,100 students in the EXCEL pipeline and of the 759 students who have completed the program in the first 19 groups, 96 percent have enrolled in college, 76 percent have enrolled at UT and 84 percent are either college graduates or on their way to becoming college graduates on time.

Usually, The Truth scans the metropolitan area at the end of each academic year to take a look at a few of the best and brightest high school graduates. This year we stuck with EXCEL in honor of its banner year and two decades of accomplishments.

Ginac Bluitt is a graduate of Central Catholic High School and was named to the Honor Roll (Summa Cum Laude). Bluitt is a Regent Scholar and member of the Insignus Society, and National Honor Society. Bluitt has been an active member of the basketball and track team, Spanish Club, and Student Government. She was also crowned as Central’s 2011-2012 Homecoming Queen. Bluitt’s most memorable community service project was the MS Walk with TOLEDO EXCEL. She also did community service at Heatherdowns Library and with the Boys and Girls Clubs of Toledo. Providing service to others has become something that she has grown to love. Bluitt’s biggest accomplishment was receiving a full ride to The Ohio State University and also becoming Homecoming Queen. “Homecoming Queen is solely voted on by her fellow students so to receive this title was such an honor.” She looks up to her parents who have both broken through barriers and overcome huge obstacles. They have both taught her that failure is not an option.

Bluitt is the daughter of Gina and Benjamin Bluitt. She will be attending The Ohio State University to study Pharmacy. Her career aspirations include becoming a pharmacist and traveling overseas to third-world countries in need of medications. When asked what her ultimate goal in life is, she replied, “To make at least a small difference in the world.”

La’Velle Ridley is a graduate of St. John’s Jesuit High School where he was on the Honor Roll and was inducted in the National Honor Society. Ridley was The Blade’s Student of the Week in April 2012. He earned an A in Laude, First Honors, Class Honors the Men for Others Award, Berchman’s Award for Leadership in Spanish and Miki House Council and St. Michael’s College Book Award for Academic Achievement and was a 20/20 Scholar. Ridley has been a member of Christian Service Core Team; Ambassador’s Society; Integrity Committee; Philosophy Club, Spanish Club (president); and Diversity in Action (D.I.A) where he served as president. He was a member of the Cavalier Magazine, was a Retreat Leader and was a student in the Post-Secondary Enrollment Options Program. He has participated in numerous community service activities such as at Martin Luther King’s Academy for Boys, Kent Branch Library and Arbors at Toledo Rehabilitation Center where he enjoys being of assistance to others.

Ridley’s career goals include double majoring in English literature and Philosophy with a minor in Spanish at The University of Toledo. Upon graduation, he plans to be accepted into a master’s program, where he can earn a master’s degree in Literature, and hopefully be offered an assistantship. He also plans to study abroad in England, Spain, Italy, and Australia, and would one day love to become a full-time professor of literature and teach younger children how to speak Spanish as a volunteer endeavor. Other scholarships Received: Blue and Gold Scholarship (UT Guarantee) and the Harold K. Mossing Scholarship from St. John’s Jesuit High School.

Cierra Awls is a graduate of Central Catholic High School and named to the Honor Roll. A member of the National Honor Society, and International Baccalaureate Program, Awls has also been active as a member of the gospel choir, Mat-stat, Anime Club, Drama Club.

Awls’ most proud accomplishment has been her poem “If my heart could,” published at the Toledo Museum of Art. Her most memorable community service is the mini Dance Marathon. Her role model is Queen Latifah because she has excelled in all forms of media and continues to enforce a positive message to young women. Awls is the daughter of Kimberly and Charles Awls. She will attend The University of Toledo to study psychology. Her career aspirations include Psychiatry, and becoming mental institute supervisor.

Taylor Fowler, the daughter of Laura and Charles Fowler, is a graduate of Toledo School for the Arts (TSA) where she achieved a 3.82 cumulative grade point average. Fowler’s academic achievements include being on the Honor Roll throughout high school and being inducted into the National Honor Society her junior year. She has been awarded The University of Toledo Rocket Scholarship, the Bowling Green State University Freshman Scholarship, the Mary Ann Russo Vocal Jazz Scholarship and the TSA Citizenship Award. Taylor also earned the distinction of achieving the highest female score on the American Legion Test at her school. An active Student Council President, TSA Ambassador, and Senior Thespian, Fowler’s proudest accomplishment has been her growth as a student, artist, and overall person. Taylor’s role models are her parents because they taught her everything she knows, and continue to inspire her to better herself every day. She will attend The University of Toledo where she will study Psychology and Jazz Voice. Her career aspirations are of becoming a business consultant, jazz voice professor or a radio personality.

Tyreshia Jackson is a graduate of Rogers High School, where she achieved a 3.9 cumulative GPA. She was on the Honor Roll and principal’s list throughout high school and was inducted into the National Honors Society as a sophomore. Tyreshia was also a member of the Varsity Softball team and enjoyed volunteering at the Boys & Girls Clubs of Toledo. Her role model is her Aunt Satarah, whom she admires for her strength and aggressiveness. Jackson, the daughter of Willie and Denise Jackson, will attend The University of Toledo to study Spanish.

Trey’ Vaunte Jones is a graduate of Rogers High School where he achieved a 3.9 cumulative GPA. He was also inducted into the National Honors Society and was named to the Honor roll. A member of Student African American Brotherhood (SAAB), Buckeye Boys State Program, French Club, and the baseball team, Trey’ Vaunte was very active in extra-curricular activities. His role model is his dad who taught him to be the best man possible. Jones, the son of Tracy and Terri Jones will attend The University of Toledo to study Pharmacy.

Channing Keith is a graduate of Toledo Technology Academy and was named to the Honor Roll. Keith was highlighted as Student of the Week in the April, 2011 Toledo Blade. Keith has been active as a member of First Robotics, Alternative Energies Team and Science Olympiad. While on the First Team 279, he specialized in electronics and website design. His volunteer community service was helping at the YMCA during the summer and with Habitat for Humanity. His most memorable experience was helping with Habitat for Humanity.

The St. Francis de Sales High School Class of 2012 has 150 seniors who graduated June 2 at the Toledo Museum of Art Peristyle. It is worth noting that among the many achievements and honors bestowed on this class, 100 percent of students applying to college have been accepted into one or more colleges of their choice.

Among the more than 100 schools where students have been accepted are the Georgia Institute of Technology, Purdue University, University of Notre Dame, University of Michigan, Boston College, Marquette University, Georgetown University, The Ohio State University, University of Toledo, Miami University and the University of Chicago. One student has been appointed to the U.S. Air Force Academy.

Academic and athletic scholarships and grants totaling nearly $15 million were awarded to 132 students of the graduating class. Two hundred seventy-two advanced placement examinations were taken in 19 subject areas by 94 students. One student is a National Merit Finalist and two students are National Merit Commended Scholars.

There are 78 seniors who have been recognized as All-Academic Athletes having earned at least a 3.0 grade point average and a varsity letter in a sport; many of them play more than one varsity sport. The class has 47 Honor Students and 33 seniors are members of the National Honor Society.

It is very impressive that this class has contributed more than 15,300 hours in community service to 115 local organizations, in Appalachia, and Omaha, Nebraska. Each student has completed at least 100 hours of community service.

Congratulations to the following students:

Wayne Blanchard II is the son of Wayne and Cereda Blanchard. He will attend Eastern Michigan University and received a Challenge Scholarship. Blanchard will compete in track at the collegiate level.

Juan Boyd is the son of Marquisa Darden. He will attend Full Sail University.

Crystal Brown is the son of Kimberly Ellis and Melvin Brown, Jr. He will attend The University of Toledo and received the Rocket Scholars Award. He was an Academic–Athlete in soccer.

Allister Dakin is the son of Jack and Raquel Glaser. He will attend The University of Toledo.

Richard Ellis III is the son of LaShawn McCadney. He will attend Notre Dame College of Ohio. Ellis will compete in Football at the collegiate level.

In recent years, the Scott High School Commencement Exercises have been conducted at the Stranahan. This year, however, the newly remodeled Scott High School was quite appropriately the site for the graduation ceremony for the Class of 2012.

On June 6, 97 high school seniors received their diplomas in front of family, friends and administrators and staff from both the high school and the Toledo Public Schools district.

Overall the graduating seniors collected just over $700,000 in offered scholarship money. The commencement welcome was offered by class president, Lora Jefferson, who finished third in the class and racked up over $200,000 on scholarship offers all by herself from Bowling Green State University, Defiance College, Bluffton University and Sienna Heights University.

This year’s valedictorian and salutatorian were Daquze Stephens and Bria Boyd, respectively.

The members of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, Inc and guests held a luncheon shower this past Saturday, June 9 at the Brandywine Country Club to benefit the Polly Fox Academy. The event, entitled “In Her Shoes,” brought in donations from a variety of sources including items from Target and Baby R Us.

Olla Danielle Avery served as chairman for the benefit. Deborah Washington, Ph.D. is president of the local Zeta Alpha Omega Chapter.

Principal Treva Jeffries prepares to open commencement.

The Toledo-Lucas County Library has taken public service to a whole new level by offering faxing and scanning services says Judy Jones, manager of Mott Branch Library.

While faxing and scanning is offered system-wide, the services have especially benefitted users at Jones’ branch located at 1085 Dorr St. Mott Branch Library is already viewed by its users as a central resource in the community for its meeting space, books, DVDs, music, public access computers and programs for all ages; but adding faxing and scanning services takes library resources “up a notch,” added Jones.

Scanning services are FREE at your local Library! Now you can scan photos, documents, keepsakes, and more! You can email documents to yourself or save to a flash drive, said Jones.

Faxing services are only 50 cents with or without a Library card, and there’s no page limit. Jones said users sometimes cannot believe that faxing at the Library is so inexpensive.

“Why so cheap? Because the library is not in the faxing business to make a profit, we are just trying to provide another resource as cheaply as possible. Fifty cents is just trying to cover the very basic of costs,” said Jones.

Mott users are so grateful, for before these services were offered at the Library, neighborhood residents had to go to out of the way places or pay very high prices.

“Almost every day we would get calls at Mott requesting places that offered public faxing. There was a real frustration for neighborhood residents who needed to fax necessary documents,” said Jones. “I love seeing their eyes light up when we inform a very frustrated patron that we now offer public faxing. Then they really smile when we let them know it’s only fifty cents.”

Scanning is FREE and faxing is only 50 cents at your Toledo-Lucas County Public Library. Visit Mott Branch or any of the system’s other 17 branch locations, or Main Library.
Second Annual Fatherhood Walk

RESTORE Inc., is hosting its second annual Fatherhood Walk on Saturday, June 16 (10:30 a.m.) on the campus of Central Catholic High School. The walk is part of RESTORE Inc. public awareness campaign to raise awareness of the important roles fathers play in the lives of their children. This year’s theme is “Where Are the Fathers?”

The two-mile walk through the surrounding neighborhoods will start and end at Central Catholic High School. A rally, free family fun and food will take place immediately following the walk on the lawn of Central Catholic. The President of Ohio Practitioners Network for Fathers and Families, James McDonald will be the event’s guest speaker. His talk will address the event’s theme, “Where Are the Fathers?”

Last year’s event attracted over 200 supporters. This year’s Fatherhood Walk is expecting to double that number. Sponsors include The City of Toledo, McDonalds, Buckeye Cablesystem, Heal The World, The Andersons, LAMAR Advertising, House of Day Funeral Home, Yell & Tell, Air Extreme Ohio Inc., and Lucas County Children Services.

“We want this event to draw attention to the profound role father’s play in the lives of their children. Research confirms that children do better in every measure of development when there is a responsibly involved father in their lives,” said Mark Robinson, founder. “This is a free community event and we are challenging businesses to form teams and show their support of fathers, father figures and mentors. Participants can register on line at restorefathers.org or the day of the event, registrations starts at 9:00 am. R.E.S.T.O.R.E., Inc. was founded in 2006 by Responsible Fatherhood Advocate, Mark Robinson. Robinson is a social worker by profession and currently serving as the director of Field Education at Lourdes University’s Department of Social Work. He is currently serving on the Ohio Practitioners Network for Fathers and Families (OPNFF) Board, which is a statewide collaboration that seeks to advance a fatherhood and family agenda at the state and local level. Vendor tables are available for a small fee. For more information about R.E.S.T.O.R.E. and/or the second annual Fatherhood Walk, please contact: R.E.S.T.O.R.E., Inc. Mitchell-Jackson Basketball Camp Emphasizes Teamwork and Positive Attitude

Toledo Natives Celebrate 22 Years of Teaching the Game They Love

Special to The Truth

Hundreds of Toledo area boys and girls have honed their basketball skills at the popular Mitchell-Jackson summer basketball camp which began in 1990. Over the past two decades, former NBA players Todd Mitchell and Jim Jackson have taught the fundamentals of the game with skills ranging from grades five-12.

For youngsters who are new to the game, they say the challenge is to help them build the confidence necessary to compete with the players who may have more experience. “We deal with the kids at the level where they are, and help them to improve. I’ve found their attitudes and ability to listen to instructions are just as important as their natural athletic talents. It takes both to be a success on the court.” says Mitchell.

After earning a place in sports history as both a State Champion(83) and a City of Toledo Hall Of Famer at Toledo St. Francis High School, he helped lead the Purdue University Boilermakers to two back-to-back championships with All Big Ten and All American Honors. His successful basketball career included stints with the Denver Nuggets, Miami Heat, San Antonio Spurs and several European teams.

Jackson, a graduate of Toledo Macomber High School was the city and state Player of the Year, a state champion and High School McDonalds All American. He went on to play at Ohio State University where he was twice named Big Ten player of the year and garnered first team All American honors. He’s had many names. When you were small, he was Daddy and you remember how he liked that. He was Dad for awhile, sometimes Pop, occasionally Old Man, Father, and a few things that can’t be printed. But no matter what you called him, he left a big impression on you.

But what did you learn from Dear Old Dad? What kind of legacy are you leaving your children? In the new book Fatherhood: Rising to the Ultimate Challenge by Etan Thomas (with Nick Chiles), some of our best-known Daddies weigh in.

Generations ago, it seemed that fathers were breadwinners, disciplinarians, and little else. They loved their children, but caring for them was what their mama did; it was never expected of a father. This, as well as the unfortunate rate of fatherless households, has caused many men to be unfamiliar with what fatherhood could be.

But there’s “beauty and manliness in showing love and affection toward your kids,” says Thomas. There are “joys of fatherhood,” and this book was written with the hope that men could finally learn to seize that joy.

The first lesson is easy: Be there. Stay in your children’s lives, stay actively involved, offer them one-on-one time, keep it simple, and learn to listen because those “little moments” will affect your lives.

Use the best of what you had growing up and make memories with your kids. Let the happy times “sit on your heart.” Don’t be afraid to show love, and don’t forget that discipline is also love. Know that “the key is constant contact” and that there are some things that only a man can teach a kid. Also, know where you came from, take pride in yourself, and remember that your kids are watching you.

Show affection to your wife or significant other in front of your children. Learn to appreciate what you learned from your own father, and don’t be afraid to mentor someone without a dad in his life.

There are, says Thomas, many “...guys who could be swayed, moved, pushed into better lives if more of us just let them know we care.”

Fatherhood seems, at first, to be an ambitious project. Author Etan Thomas (with Nick Chiles) pulled together fathers from the sporting world, Hollywood, music, movies, and politics, and asked them to write essays on being a dad and on their own fathers. Thomas says he wanted his book to be the first place young men go when any issue concerning fatherhood arises.

It was ambitious – and well-done.

Just reading this book will make you smile because of the simple pleasure that oozes from its pages. This is a book that kids will be glad their dad reads. It’s also the book moms have been waiting for because, in fact, Thomas includes a chapter that remarkably lauds single mothers.

If you’re a dad or about to be one, or if you need a gift for your own father, you can’t go wrong with this wonderful, joyous book. For him, Fatherhood will truly pop.

The Workers and The Dreamers

Is artistic talent really going to help you earn a living? I got some advice back in February that I will always remember.

A close friend who happens to be happily married told me how her chosen career path affects whom she chooses for a mate. She was saying that most music producers don’t see true financial gains from their work until their mid 30’s and how most females looking for husbands don’t have the patience it takes to be with someone with professional artistic goals.

“You need to find a chick who’s committed to you without judging you by earnings, but still appreciates your passion for your art and how hard you work at it” she told me.

I listened to her describe the core differences between certain kinds of women. So many points came up in that conversation that echo concerns shared by both sexes. Not only when choosing a partner, but also when choosing a path.

Are the goals being set reasonable and attainable? How long should someone invest in a pursuit before it is seen as fruitless?

Think of every working or motivated person you know, and I’m willing to bet they can be divided into two distinct categories:

In one column you have THE WORKERS. Educated, trained or experienced… they have a stable job and more than likely a sound plan. They see how they can move up, move ahead or get in a new field and thrive.

Their off-time is spent not working, maybe pursuing hobbies, or possibly even getting more training.

They have the cycle of stable work and play that families and stability are built upon.

These are the people who make this country run.

In the other column you have THE DREAMERS. Particularly those aspiring towards a career in film, music or the arts.

Likely just as educated, trained and experienced… they have jobs, but not always stable.

No matter where they work or how high the salary, if they aren’t earning a living through their talent they will be deeply unfulfilled.

Their off-time is mostly spent on investing in their artistic pursuit, which is basically a second (or third) job. The serious ones aren’t sitting waiting on some big break, but they do remain flexible enough to chase down the next opportunity to get their foot in the door.

These are the people who make the songs, movies and artwork that the other people rely on for entertainment and connection.

I often remind the singers/rappers on my company’s roster: “As artists, it’s our job to create the music that helps people make sense of their life.”

When I speak of THE DREAMERS, please don’t get it twisted.

I don’t mean amateur rappers, singers, actors, etc who haven’t put the time and effort into refining their skills to professional standard. I mean those who have a legitimate shot, understand the process and are putting the right pieces in place to make actually make it happen.

Since 2000, many authors and scholars have noted that the “creative class” is not only the true backbone of society but also of the economy. With small business growth comes innovation and people with ideas and artistic talent become sought after and therefore in a position of earning power.

Someone I’m close to just did a commercial for a local Verizon Mobile outlet that could go national simply because the small business retailer reached out to the nearest creative person she knew to create an amateur jingle.

Keeping in line with my other friend’s theory, this person with this potential big break is in their mid 30s.

One key advantage that THE WORKERS have over THE DREAMERS is, they don’t have to live under the stigma that becoming the dreaded “starving artist”.

You know the type. All of them with, their prized possessions in a back pack.

Creativity fueled by deep bouts of depression tempered with whatever they do to escape that depression. Waverling social graces, loose concept of time and commitment and a general disconnect bordering on dysfunction.

Because of what comes to mind when people think of someone with artistic career goals, I personally used to avoid mentioning my involvement in music when I met new people.

First of all, there is nothing more cliché than a black male who produces or raps or has a music company etc. Youa yada yada.

I mean, it’s so cliché it turns your stomach…seriously. Second of all, it’s an immediate blow to your credibility.

To let someone know you are trying to get in the door as an actor, singer, dancer or whatever makes you appear to some people as if you’re seriously unlikely it is that you might ever make it big.

To make it big, what does that even mean anyway? It always cracks me up.

Food for thought.

Yes, I bust bubbles.

I do the same thing when we meet with potential artists for our company, I bust bubbles left and right. Anytime I meet singers or rappers who have the complete wrong idea of what it means to “make it big” I remind them of the real.

Not to be a jerk, but because none of us will reach the finish line if we kid ourselves about the distance.

I want to buy my mom a big house. I want to give my family so many simple things that people take for granted but would bring comfort and quality to our lives. Yes, I want nice things but over all… I want to say that I earn my desired living doing what I love to do.

The Workers. The Dreamers. Same goals, just different paths.

Maybe I’ll do a part two to this, there’s still more to say.

Thank you all for reading.

Peace.
Tribute for Claude Black

Pianist, composer, singer and educator Claude Black is a gentle soul, a gentleman and a jazz legend throughout the Midwest and beyond. Black is dealing with several serious illnesses but still smiles and thinks of others. He has played with many of the greats, but still has time to teach, whether in a club setting or a university rehearsal room.

Please join his friends for a Jazz Jam Session Fundraiser for him on Sunday, June 24, 2012 from 3:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. at 151 On The Water, formerly Murphy’s Place. Requested donation is $10.

This event will assist with his medical expenses and give those who have worked with him on a local and regional level the opportunity to play and sing for him. Special thanks to Sean Dobbins, Josh Silver & Joel Hazard, who have committed to getting the music started and to Mike Scott, owner of 151 On The Water for hosting this event. Also to Mike Whitty. For more info 419-297-9856.

Organizers are singers Ramona Collins, Kim Buehler, Glenda Biddlestone, Star Cohen, Lori LeFevre Johnson and Ellenie Ash, and Mike Whitty.

Career Education Assistance For A Competitive Job Market

Even with the U.S. unemployment rate high, technicians and skilled trade workers top the list of the hardest jobs to fill, according to a Manpower Group talent shortage survey. This gap in today’s competitive job market can be a great opportunity for those who are considering attending a trade or technical school over a traditional college or university. Specifically targeting this high-skilled worker need, one organization has introduced a Career Education Grant Program to provide a one-time $1,000 grant to members and their eligible dependents toward enrollment and attendance at an accredited trade or technical school.

“Higher education provides a tremendous advantage toward success,” says Paul Pevner, M.D., President of the Alliance for Affordable Services, “but the cost of postsecondary education continues to increase. That is why it is important for Alliance members to offer assistance in achieving their educational goals, regardless of the type of school they choose to attend.” The grant program is a welcome complement to the already successful Alliance Scholarship Program. Over $1.9 million in scholarship awards has helped more than 1,200 high school graduates and college students pursue undergraduate degrees since the scholarship program’s inception in 1996.

The Alliance is dedicated to helping its members live better and save more. It leverages its strength in numbers to provide access to valuable benefits and services to meet the personal, professional and health care needs of over 75,000 members nationwide.

Benefit availability is dependent on the package option chosen and the member’s place of residence and may be subject to change. For more information or to join, visit www.AffordableServices.org or call (888) 733-2242. The annual grant application deadline is June 30.

Mt. Nebo’s 19th Pastoral Anniversary

Rev. Pat McKinstry helped Pastor Cedric Brock of Mt. Nebo celebrate his 19th Pastoral Anniversary on Sunday June 10.

Imagine the historical significance of the Women’s Day celebration at the historic Third Baptist Church. On Sunday, May 20, the church observed its 90th annual Women’s Day celebration, marking a milestone in its rich history. The Rev. Ramona Bethany, First Church of God, associate minister, where she serves as the minister of Leadership Development and Worship Arts, delivered the morning sermon.

The three-point sermon focused on being vessels of honor-shaped for God—by God, God’s design for our lives that is created with a purpose and ability and determined to stay ready for God’s use. She said, “We must hear and heed God’s word and your life will be changed. We must also discipline ourselves to submit to God’s detailing.” Rev. Bethany’s motto for ministry is, “Only what you do for Christ will last.”

The two-day celebration began on Saturday where nearly 100 members and friends attended luncheon to meet and fellowship with the Sunday speaker, Bethany. Each year during this special celebration, a woman of the year is announced. The 2012 Woman of the year is Curtis Taylor. She was presented with flowers and a certificate acknowledging her many years as a faithful member.

In 1947, Taylor moved to Toledo from Mississippi and joined Third Baptist Church under the pastoral leadership of Rev. Elliot J. Mason, D.Min. She was employed in the Toledo Public School system—specifically the Head Start program. Since 1967, Taylor has been an active member in the 20th Century Literary Club. She is the 7th of 13 siblings. Taylor has five children, six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.
