Vote for President Obama – A Clear Choice

Rarely in the course of presidential elections have we not heard that “this election is the most important one in a generation … or a lifetime … or in the history of our nation.”

Most of these races were so important because they voters had the option of choosing between foreign policy initiatives. Even in 2008, the presidential contest between Obama and McCain offered no stark differences in domestic policy, other than perhaps on health care.

This year, however, we really can say without using even a hint of hyperbole, that this presidential race is about as important as any we have seen and is truly about the fate and future of our country.

The issue is two-fold. First, short term, what works to pull a country out of economic recession or depression? Second, what should be the shape of our government in the long term?

And just in case you have missed 99 percent of the political advertisements over the course of this election cycle, let us point out who believes what on the political landscape. Democrats believe in relatively big government – progressive taxation, government assistance, regulation of commerce and industry, and so forth. Republicans believe in low or no taxation, individual self-reliance, laissez faire (hands off) approach when dealing with captains of industry and, as we are learning ever-increasingly these days, that rape is God’s gift to women.

Just wanted to make sure you were paying attention. Only about a half dozen Republican candidates have made such declarations, although the Republican Party platform does not make an abortion exception for victims of rape or incest. Probably just a coincidence.

So what works to move a nation out of recession? President Obama believes in spending our way out, the traditional Democratic cure. For Governor Romney, the answer is lower taxes, cut government regulations and make investment more attractive to those who can afford to do so.

From where we sit, the Obama approach is one that has worked in the past and appears to be working at the present. It may not be working at the speed with which we would all like but there would appear to be one logical reason for that – the administration has not spent enough.

Early on in this administration’s term, liberal economists such as Nobel Laureate Paul Krugman argued that the bail-out was a step in the right direction but not large enough. Krugman argued that we should be talking about a package twice the size of the administration’s proposed $800 billion. Was he correct? Well, as we assess the slowness of the recovery, we are assured that the administration judged correctly that a bailout of that size – or one over $1 trillion – was not something that Congress could swallow.

But in the larger view, what would have happened had we followed the Republican plan of cutting spending, cutting taxes and letting the big capitalists have their way? We do have examples of that plan at work. Europe, under the guidance of German Chancellor Angela Merkel and former French President Nicolas Sarkozy, tried that plan – austerity. The European recovery has been virtually non-existent, plagued by the frequent bailouts of economically weaker European Union nations, and has, in fact, contributed to the slowdown of the American recovery.

Early on in the Obama Administration, Republican Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell offered an analysis, one of those inane statements he seems to have a gift for, about the Roosevelt years and the recovery from the Great Depression. Said McConnell, America did not make a recovery because of the spending generated by the New Deal. The nation only recovered when World War II came along, he explained.

Some economists would argue that Roosevelt himself did not spend enough to get the job done quickly. In fact, he hedged his bets after his first re-election and, in 1937, became a deficit hawk, cutting taxes and spending and sending the nation deeper into depression wiping out many of the gains of his first term in office.

But, to McConnell’s point about WWII, what was that event if not the biggest spending spree that any nation has embarked on in modern times?

So, yes, we believe that President Barack Obama is on the right course in his effort to end the recession.

In the long term, the question facing voters is what will be the shape of our nation going forward – one that provides quality health care, education, retirement benefits, living wages to as many of its citizens as possible or one that allows the free enterprise system to determine who shall thrive and who shall starve?

Those who suggest that a truly free enterprise system will benefit all by permitting a trickle down impact of higher wages seem to forget that truly free enterprise systems of the past – see America in the late 1800’s – led to abuses such as child labor, sweat shops, six and a half day work weeks.

Now we can talk about immigration, gay marriage, the War in Afghanistan, how the Libyan crisis was handled. But the central issue is really spending short-term and health care – since it is the prime example of what the future may or may not hold for Americans.

If one believes that the gap between the very wealthy and the rest of the nation which has grown steadily over the past 40 years is what Americans should be preparing for in the future, then Mitt Romney is the choice.

On the other hand, one feels that we should be preparing for a future of greater economic security for both those in the middle class and those who are the least well off of our brethren, then that choice is clear as well.

We believe a vote for President Barack Obama is that clear choice.
We cannot afford not to pass on the 2012 ballot.

cs that current Head Start/ EOPA. It is not at all appar- rent what the funding cut will do for the children. It is not for the benefit of the community as a whole. The economy of the area depends in large part on what sort of students the school systems are producing. No single resi- dent of Toledo is unaffected by the quality of the educa- tion offered here.

We can’t afford not to support our schools.

Vote FOR Issue 23 – Toledo Lucas County Public Library

The Toledo Lucas County Public Library is asking vot- ers to approve a levy that is in part renewal – 2 mills – and in part new – 0.9 mill – for a period of five years in order to keep pace with expenses in the face of dwindling assis- tance from the state. And what do we get for this money? A wealth of read- ing material, research infor- mation, after-school and sum- mer programs, jobs for programs, computer instruc- tion … services that are far too numerous to detail here. Last year, for example, the Library lent out 7.2 million items to card holders. The public library’s Director Clyde Scales has written to the people’s universality.

The reason for the request is painfully obvious. Over the years state aid for the Library has diminished from a high of 75 percent of operating expenses to the current level of 48 percent. State aid has not increased from the 1996 level to account for inflation or increased costs. The Library is seeking an increase that will cost the owner of a home valued at $60,000 about $18 annually, the owner of a home valued at $100,000 or an additional $20 and $34 per month, re- spectively.

In my personal household money forked over to the government during these still difficult economic times is more than most of us want to part with. However as we look at the ballot requests – for education, for parks/recre- ation, and for services – the fact is that the benefits we derive from these public enti- ties far outweigh the asking price on the 2012 ballot.

With that in mind, we strongly urge our readers to vote Yes on all of these levies. We cannot afford to do with- out these services.

Vote FOR Ballot Issue 20 – Toledo City School District

The granddaddy of them all is the largest request on the ballot – the Toledo Pub- lic Schools are seeking an additional tax of 4.9 mills for each dollar of valuation. This request is more than half of the total ballot additional taxes requested. But, it is vi- tally important for the community.

What more worthy invest- ment than education?

Obviously, the criticism arises over the recent disapp- ointing State of Ohio report card for TPS but, on balance, that is much too little to take the direction in which the dis- trict is moving. There are some stunning success stories from recent attempts to offer a variety of programs to TPS students – Toledo Early Col- lege High School, Toledo Technology Academy, MLK Academy for Boys, Grove Patterson and Old West End Academies, for example. Certainly part of the diffi- culties encountered this past school year had to do with the move from middle schools to a K – 12 format. Nevertheless, the reorgan- ization plan makes sense for the future, as does the effort to increase even further the value of products offered.

We are impressed by those directing the school board – Superintendents Larry Pecko, Ed.D., and his cohort of lieutenants – Chief Aca- demic Officer Jim Gault, Asst Superintendent of Operations Durant, Ed.D., and Brian Murphy. We are also im- pressed by the leadership of the Toledo Federation of Teachers and that bargaining unit’s efforts to work closely with the administration in the rebuilding plans. We mention the sacrifice teachers and other union members have made over the last several years to help curb the bur- goning deficits.

We are impressed by the spirit of collaboration that the school board and the admin- istration have displayed in recent years with a number of community partners. There has been some dis- gruntlement in this commu- nity over TPS’s decision to seek a Head Start grant and seeming put off risk those currently employed by EOPA. It is not at all appar- ent that current Head Start/ EOPA employees will be at much of a risk, certainly not as much of a risk if a third party obtains the contract. At any rate, education in the busi- ness world is in and it makes perfect sense here that they should seek to do as much of it as possible.

If you don’t have children in the public school system and are wondering what possible benefit there might be for you to dish out more of your hard- earned dollars to support others’ children, be re- minded, the well-being of the public school system is di- rectly linked to the well-being of the community as a whole. The economy of the area depends in large part on what sort of students the school systems are producing. No single resi- dent of Toledo is unaffected by the quality of the educa- tion offered here.

We can’t afford not to support our schools.

Vote FOR Issue 24 – Lucas County Mental Health and Recovery Services

This is an additional tax request of one mill – about $30 annually for the owner of a $100,000 home – over a period of 10 years. It is the first request in 24 years from the agency which provided services to over 24,000 people annually.

If the levy request fails, the board will be forced to trim $1.57 annually over the next year and a half. This from an agency that has al- ready cut 28 percent of its administrative staff.

Another agency which has been a good steward of pub- lic funds, MHRS has deli- vered 97 cents of every dollar to direct services over the years.

Failure to approve the levy will place more people who are mentally ill or addicted into jail, prisons or home- less shelters – and servicing them in those places will cost taxpayers much more than will this additional levy.

Vote FOR Issues 5 and 21 – City of Toledo and Metropolitan Park District

Both of these issues deal with our parks and recreation. The City of Toledo is asking voters to approve an addi- tional tax of one mill to pro- vide parks and recreational facilities. MetroParks is seek- ing an additional tax of 0.9 mill for the purpose of ac- quiring, operating, improv- ing, conserving and protect- ing new and existing Metropark lands. Both re- quests are for 10 years.

The City request will ear- mark dollars specifically for the far too decrepit parks and swimming pools, for the en- hancement for programs and to create summer jobs for youth.

On the other hand, the Metroparks, which includes nine area parks and the To- ledo Botanical Garden, along with last three greenways, are a perfect example of the best that Toledo has to offer. Metroparks wants to enhance programs and develop a Middlegreen in downtown Toledo. The $1.7 million raised by the levy will double the operating budget.

Three million visitors avail themselves of the pleas- ures of Metroparks annu- ally. Vote FOR both of these measures.

Vote FOR Issue 25 – Imagination Station

Although this Issue is at the bottom of our list, in some ways, this may be the easiest call of all … because it is by far the least expensive. For $5.21 annually, the owner of a $100,000 home can help create a downtown facility which has provided an edu- cational experience for over a half million visitors since 2009.

The center offers families a chance to learn together, it offers teachers an opportu- nity to enhance their student’s science experience and it brings a much-needed boost to the downtown area.

The monies raised by the levy will provide one-third of the center’s operating bud- get. It’s a largesse we can’t afford to pass on.

We can’t afford to pass on any of these measures, in fact. Dig just a little bit deeper into the treasury of every one of these lev- ies make sense in the short and long term.

Community Forums

By Jay Black, TAACC President
Special to The Truth

This week we report on forums held with Toledo Public Schools, Lucas County Public Library and County Commissioner Candidate Kevin Haddad. It should be noted that Commissioner Pete Gerken cancelled his forum with TAACC the day before his scheduled time with us. He asked to reschedule with TAACC after the election. TAACC expressed to Commissioner Gerken that one of the purposes of the forums is to give the candidates and levy sponsors the opportunity to present their platforms to our community so they would have factual information that would allow them to make informed decisions on Election Day. Gerken’s slot was filled by Haddad.

TAACC reiterates that we are a non-partisan organization that does not endorse candidates or levies. However, we do want our members, partners and constituents to have enough information to make an informed voting decision. The information reported in these articles is based on factual information only.

We do challenge our members and community to ask why should we support candidates and tax levies if they don’t support our businesses economically? Secondly, we encourage our constituents to follow the lead of other successful communities that hold elected officials, candidates, and levy sponsors accountable by not voting for them if they are not supporting our community and businesses with the economic resources they control.

All presenters have been advised that the results of the forums are published in The Sojourner’s Truth and Toledo Minority Communicator News weekly newspapers. They were also encouraged to do business with these TAACC members.

Toledo Public Schools (TPS)
Jerome Pecko, Ed.D, reported on a number of TPS very positive initiatives undertaken by the District. They include:

- TPS Graduation Rate 62.4 percent
- Attendance Rating 94.3 percent
- Martin Luther King Jr. Academy for Boys, Elmhurst, Grove Patterson, Toledo EHS and TTA were all rated Excellent
- Five Schools moved up one category

Transformation Plan Highlights:
- Increased distance learning options that allow students to enroll in courses that are not offered at their school (136 students enrolled last year, 205 enrolled thus far this year).
- Dropout Prevention Program is working (336 students earned credits last year, 408 students were enrolled in summer school this year).
- Secured a $17MM SIG grants for Scott, Robinson, Glenwood, and Pickett schools.
- Built Early High School Options Program (EHSO) for seventh and eighth graders to take courses for high school credit, allowing them a jump start on their secondary education (500 students earned a 3.31 GPA or better in FY12).
- Created neighborhood elementary schools for children in kindergarten to the eighth grade. (FY12 Preliminary: Eighth grade scores improved by 12 percent in math, six percent in science).
- Developed and implemented an inclusion model for special education purposes.
- Significantly increased partnerships with external organizations to enhance opportunities for students to succeed in TPS schools (Boys and Girls Clubs, SES, Hubs, YMCA latchkey, AmeriCorps Program, Jones Program with 5/3 Bank, College Coaches Program with Lucas County, and Gateway to College Program).

Pecko also talked about Transformation Plan Phase II which can be found on TPS’ website.

Pecko answered the three common questions as follows:

TPS does not have a Business Inclusion Plan at this time. A vote was taken for the Policy Committees recommended plan at the October board meeting and 2 board members voted for the Policy Committees recommended plan and two members voted against the recommended plan. Please refer to the October TPS Board minutes found on TPS’ website for more details.

Total Goods and Services Budget is approximately $100MM annually.

Pecko did not know how much of that number is spent with MBE’s.

Toledo Lucas County Library

Margaret Danziger, deputy director, Charles Oswanski, superintendent, Facilities & Operations, and Faith Hairston, manager of Kent Branch Library were the presenters:

Our Library is ranked seventh nationally.

This levy accounts for 50 percent of the Library’s budget, is a 2.9 mill request (2.0 mill renewal, .9 mills additional).

The Library has several programs that are either located in its central city branches or that directly benefit central city residents. These include: Homework Helpers Program, Summer Reading Program, Library Cybermobile (classroom on wheels), and Kent Branches Access Center just to name a few.

They have over 400 partners who help with specific program offerings (Read for Literacy, Area Office on Aging, Owens Community College, Penta Vocational College, Mercy Health Partners, Promedica Health Systems, etc.)

Additionally, each of its 18 branch locations often offer programs specific to that location. Time does not permit us to list all of the positive offerings of the Library.

Statistical Information

Total Employees 356 (approximately 15 percent are part-time employees).

Out of 18 Branch Managers three are African American (16.6 percent)

Total annual budget $33.1MM

They answered the three common questions as follows:

Do not have a Business Inclusion Plan.

Do not track expenditures by segment so no data is available on how much of the above was spent with MBE’s.

Lucas County Commissioner Candidate Kevin Haddad

Kevin Haddad said he entered the race because of the trend of “Community Decline” in the County. As a minority himself, he feels that both the Democratic and Republican Parties “disenfranchise” minorities. That’s why he is running as an Independent.

He left the Republican Party because of their views against the poor. He doesn’t fit with the Democrats because he is a “B Teamer” who cares about people and he’s not the typical politician. He says he’s tired of the “good old boy network” coming out of the County Commissioners office. He said a case in point is how Peter Ujvagi was hired.

He says that if elected as a County Commissioner, he would work to restore the middle class in the county and promises to work against the good old boy network he says exists in the County operations.

When asked what he’s done as a Sylvania Township Trustee he listed the following:

- Eliminated 90 percent of paper processing and waste.
- Attempted to get the same trash collection program that the City of Toledo has for $150 per year (he was voted down by the other two Township Trustees).
- He is the president of the Lucas County Township Association (which is an association of 11 Townships) and has promoted greater cooperation among the members of the association.
- He wants to opt out of the Storm Water Utility system because they are paying $2.4MM without receiving corresponding services.
- Haddad says he has challenged Commissioner Tina Skeldon Wozniak to a one-on-one debate and she has declined.

Haddad was asked what he has done in his position as township trustee to include MBE’s. He says he has advocated for small business opportunities in Sylvania Township and has tried to get MBE’s included in the contracting process. He has had the conversation with the other two trustees and was shot down two to one. He said he has demonstrated his personal commitment to doing business with MBE’s by being a faithful customer of Powell’s Beauty and Barber Supply. He challenged TAACC to ask elected officials and candidates to disclose what African-American owned businesses they personally support.

Sylvania Township annual goods and services budget is approximately $30MM and he doesn’t believe any of it is spent with MBE’s.

Unnecessary Battles

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.
The Truth Contributor

“Truth is that which serves the interests of a people. Two groups of people locked in combat cannot be expected to have the same truth.” - Albert B. Cleage, Jr.

The Executive Exempt ordinance presented to City Council by Mayor Mike Bell would have increased pay ranges for nonunionized executive staff. The pay scales have not been adjusted since 1998, a period of 14 years.

After several bitter back and forth skirmishes and support from only two of 12 councilpersons, the Mayor unilaterally ordered salary increases to administrators totaling $62,000 for the remainder of 2012 and $295,000 in 2013.

With the raises fiscally accounted for in the City’s projected $900,000 budget surplus, what’s really behind the civic altercation?

Bell states sagaciously.

"Executive staff, commissioners, managers, directors and other exempt staff have not received raises or had their pay ranges increased since 1998 while unionized workers have received raises. That’s unfair," Bell says.

Toledo’s municipal administrators are also paid from 10 - 42 percent less than their counterparts in comparable Ohio and regional cities, according to a 65-page executive salary survey presented to City Council.

"Not only is it about people in Toledo not keeping pace with their peers," adds Toledo Public Information Officer Jennifer Sorgenfrei, "but also about the fairness of paying people what they are worth and putting people where they belong within their classification. One city director is the 15th highest paid person in her division and is paid less than many of those who report to her and is administratively responsible for."

Some administrators also get a bad rap from some councilpersons such as Steven Steel who has been critical of administrative personnel. "We should take care of the people who actually do the work. If I call you (the administrator), you call someone else to do the work;" Steel remarked in a committee meeting.

The comment, according to some, overlooks the fact that "if the faucet is turned on and no water comes out or if a toilet is flushed and nothing happens," that it is the administrator who has to sit in the pit of council chambers to answer the tough questions and who often has to discipline employees over behavior as bizarre as having a fist fight over a bag of pork rinds.

"When people are responsible, you pay them for what you expect them to deliver;" Sorgenfrei emphasizes.

The puzzling part of the conflict however, is that none of the three African-American council members supported the Mayor’s legislative request.

Part of the conflict may be from the still bitter after-taste of Bell’s support of Republican Gov. John Kasich's since-repealed Senate Bill 5 controversial limits on collective bargaining by state public employees.

Also making things toasty is union pressure resulting from recent concessions in which employees will now be responsible for paying their own portion of their pension contributions, health care premiums and other concessions.

Payback? Perhaps.

"Yet, no one has looked at the diversity in all of this," Bell states sagaciously.

Indeed, overlooked, in this 22nd vs 21st floor internal strife, is that of the beneficiaries of the mayor’s initiative, 100 percent of the executive directors, 44 percent of the department directors, 36 percent of managers, a third of the executive management staff and ten percent of the commissioners are men or women of color. In addition, Clarence Coleman, commissioner of taxation and an African-American male, is one of seven non-unionized employees who maxed-out at the top of the salary scale and is not included in the mayor’s initiative.

My thoughts concerning the civic showdown?

Given the overall state of political and social polarization prevalent in today’s society, my belief is that, at the core, the mayor’s action is about constructive leadership.

While politically unpopular, this is about fairness. It is about paying employees their market worth within their frame of reference and allowing others to share in benefits previously unavailable but that other city employees have received.

Unlike most of the prevalent perspectives and policies being promoted in a year where every election or legislative act is heated or intensely contested, Bell’s actions foster inclusion and encourage a better situation for all. Most importantly, the salary hikes do not enhance one group by diminishing another.

For certain, the time has come for an end to the condemnation and mis-labeling of moral acts as evil in those who differ from us in some way, as we shamelessly tolerate the reckless, illusionary or incompetent behavior of others who regularly pass off depravity as virtue.

Let’s focus our attention on relevant contests and recognizing the true motives of those currently running for political office.

What's In A Name? ..... A lot!

By Lafe Tolliver, Esq

Guest Column

What’s in a name you say?

A lot, I say! Can you immediately imagine some quality or image if I was to say the following names: Gandhi, King, Napoleon, Jesus, Reagan, Oprah, Cosby, Churchill, Picasso, Geronimo, Castro, Obama, Aretha, Lincoln, etc...etc?

Some names are so horrendous and just plain bad... much less silly or stupid does. Why chain down a kid with a goofy name because you as a parent wanted to be, “creative.”?

You want creativity? Take an art class at the museum. Take up photography. Learn to draw. Take a class in jewelry making or block printing but for heaven’s sake quit taking out your creativity juices on the kid!

Oh. Another thing. This is so clear that even Ray Charles could see it. You know, when you plaster your child with a Scrabble Board name, not only will be or she be teased at school but, guess what? On any application blank for a job, good ol’ Mr. Employer will know upfront if I was to say the child with a goofy name, not only will he or she be fingered as a “you know who” before the kid has a chance to prove him or herself.

The moral of this story is parents, quit tagging your kids with nutty names just so that you can say, “my child is different!” Give the kid a fighting chance so that when it comes down to it, some quality or image of something, he or she is not fingered as a “you know who” before the kid has a chance to prove himself or herself.

According to the Bible, the names that you think are historical name or names honoring some past family ancestors... something to show that the parent or parents took pride and responsibility in their deliberations in giving a name to a child.

Now... fast forward to the present decades and see what is being dished out as names for new born children. Mind you, unless that child changes that moniker, it is his or hers for life... even if they have to abbreviate it.

So, somebody tell me. What’s in a name you say? A lot, I say! Can you immediately imagine some quality or image if I was to say the following names: Gandhi, King, Napoleon, Jesus, Reagan, Oprah, Cosby, Churchill, Picasso, Geronimo, Castro, Obama, Aretha, Lincoln, etc...etc?

Here’s the deal. When a parent slaps a ridiculously hard to pronounce name... much less spell... on a unsuspecting newborn, that child is marked for life. FOR LIFE!

No, it is not about being cute or trying to be creative, it is just plain stupid as stupid does. Why increase the hazards of being black in America by branding a kid with a laughable name?

I know. I know. One name is great to you but that same name is an eye-roller to someone else!

Ok. Take this quiz: I am an employer at a local factory and there are three job openings and the following four names come into me for my final selection. Choose the names that you think are the names of the black applicants:

(1) Tye’Vonte
(2) Credulisha
(3) Richard
(4) Sno’ White

The next four first names came up on a gang unit task force review. They are looking for the person or persons that did an AK-47 drive by shooting in the Fulton and Islington area. What names would probably draw a visit from the SWAT team?

(1) Andonynius
(3) Moorpheus
(4) Ralph

Angela Zimmann: Challenging Traditional Republican Domination in District 5

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

In their zeal to eliminate one of the Democratic lions in the House of Representatives through redistricting and thereby forcing Marcy Kaptur of Toledo to face Dennis Kucinich of Cleveland in a newly drawn “lake” district, the state GOP may have overlooked the consequences of stretching one of their previously safe seats into Democratic land.

District 5, which has had a Republican congressman in the U.S. House of Representatives since the 1930’s now reaches into Toledo and, according to Democratic challenger and first-time candidate, Angela Zimmann, presently has two percent more registered Democrats in the district than Republicans.

Zimmann is squaring off against Rep. Bob Latta who won the seat in a special election in 2007 after the death of long-time Representative Paul Gillmor. Latta’s father, Del Latta, had held the District 5 seat from 1959 to 1989.

A college instructor (at Bowling Green State University, her alma mater) and a Lutheran pastor, Zimmann has a fighting chance against Latta in what was once deemed a safe Republican seat.

“Independents rule the day here,” she says of the new make-up of District 5. “Republicans were so focused on drawing Marcy Kaptur in with Dennis Kucinich, they put this district at risk. Only one half of the voters remain from the former district.”

The Democratic candidate in previous District 5 elections, going back for decades, used to be a mere stalking horse for the Party. From Zimmann and her supporters’ standpoint, those days are over.

Latta must think so as well. He has spent his campaign in hiding, ducking any encounters with the challenger, even declining to comment on why he won’t debate his opponent. Surprisingly, the first-time candidate for Congress has raised funds enough to keep the battle going. “We have spent his campaign in hiding, ducking any encounters with the challenger, even declining to comment on why he won’t debate his opponent. Surprisingly, the first-time candidate for Congress has raised funds enough to keep the battle going. “We have raised donations from every state in the nation,” she notes. Over 2,000 individual donors, she says, have contributed to the campaign.

For Zimmann, her future as a congresswoman will be devoted to three primary policy issues that she believes will help turn around the fortunes of Ohioans.

First, there is the matter of the infrastructure, says Zimmann. “I have spoken with county engineers all over the district,” she says. “All of them say that when money is put into the infrastructure, it helps the economy.”

To that end, Zimmann notes that “Ohio is a donor state” placing more into federal coffers than it receives in return for investment in the infrastructure. That’s a formula she would like to change.

Her third challenge as a congresswoman will be education, particularly in helping correct the current imbalance in which so many Ohioans are undereducated and so many jobs unfilled because the workforce is not adequately educated to meet requirements.

As the election nears, Zimmann is busy traversing the 14-county district – the second largest in Ohio, bringing her message of a moderate Democrat to urban and rural areas. Optimism reigns in the Zimmann camp particularly because the voters of the new District 5 have been responsible, she notes, for voting former Gov. Ted Strickland, President Obama and Senator Sherrod Brown, into office.

And she has been busy taking on an opponent whose record, she says, has been anything but kind to women.

For more information on the new District 5 and to determine if, as a Lucas County or Toledo voter, you now reside in the district, go to www.zimmannforcongress.com.
Over 600 Toledo civic and political leaders, residents and pastors, leaders of institutions of higher learner and institutions of faith all gathered to accept two calls of action delivered by Toledo NAACP Branch.

The NAACP has addressed injustice since 1909. The Toledo Branch, the local voice, held its annual Freedom Fund banquet on October 26. First vice president Ray Woods served as master of ceremonies for the banquet. The United States Navy and United States Marine Corps in full uniform presented the colors.

The event continued with a vocal rendition of National Anthem by Errin Brooks, an invocation by Rev. Talmadge Thomas of City Zion the Mount Zion Church and a welcome address by NAACP Unit president Rev. Kevin Bedford.

Toledo’s local Student African American Brotherhood (SAAB) served as event ushers to assist the presentation of awards to the Freedom Fund Award honorees.

Former Toledo City council President Wilma Brown was awarded the Roy Wilkins Leadership Award for her community-focused work during her tenure as a Council representative. In addition to Brown, the NAACP honored individuals and organizations in the areas of law and justice, medicine and health care services, education, media, community service organizations, spiritual leadership, emerging youth community leaders, labor, music and performing arts and youth.

“We are proud of our youth, they are our future. Let’s encourage them as best we can,” said Bedford.

The milestone celebration delivered the first call to action about the importance of volunteering with the NAACP and featured Kirk Clay, the senior advisor of PowerPAC, as speaker. PowerPAC focuses on political and civic engagement said Ohio House of Representatives member Michael Ashford.

The theme “Your Power, Your Decision, Your Vote,” was the second call to action to stress the importance of voting. The NAACP Toledo Branch in collaboration with community organizations urges local voters to vote early in person.

“Souls to the Polls” calls for places of worship to encourage their members to vote on Sunday, November 4 from 1:00pm to 5:00pm. The polls are also open November 2, 8:00am-7:00pm, November 3 and November 5, 8:00am-2:00pm.

Immediately following the banquet, NAACP Toledo Chapter President Bedford issued corporate acknowledgements and gratitude to community supports. For information about youth and adult local member, and to view the official banquet acknowledgements, visit www.toledonaacp.org.

“No one group is an island, we need all of these groups to make this city of Toledo great,” said Bedford.
FDCA Introduces New Director

The Frederick Douglas Community Association (FDCA) held a Meet and Greet for their new Executive Director Sonya Harper-Williams, October 25, 2012 at the Frederick Douglas Center. The event was an opportunity for the FDCA to introduce Harper-Williams to the general public and share the vision of the FDCA for the future.

According to Harper-Williams, part of that vision is to re-establish the connection with the families in the neighborhood. She said: “Our vision is to not just service the children but the whole family.”

The FDCA currently offers a variety of recreational programs but Harper-Williams said the priority right now is providing services to the family. She added, “We are not by any means abandoning our recreational programs and will be introducing tennis and soccer to the programs already offered, we will just be increasing the services now available to families.”

Some of the programs include; GED, Parenting, and Anger Management classes as well Financial Stability Coaching.
African American Legends Luncheon

Toledo’s Old West End District Celebrates Artz and Soul with Culture and Entertainment-Filled Affair (Nov. 11, 2012)

Special to The Truth

The Grant Writers for the Arts Foundation will celebrate its launch in the Old West End at the Historic Collingwood Arts Center, with a mission to re-grant to community-based organizations that provide performing arts, visual arts and music instruction for children K-8.

The so consummately described by Michael Hayes, Sr., currently a drummer, vocalist, teacher and mentor, Dorr Street in the 1960’s and 1970’s was an eclectic, integrated, and hopping neighborhood dotted with restaurants, pool halls, theaters and shops — many minority-owned and boasting more than a dozen active nightclubs and music joints within its one square mile. It was written on a sign of the “Soul and Art Creative Workshops” once located on Dorr and Forest Streets, “The Creative Spirit is the Heart of any Great People.”

The Soul and Art Creative Workshop was where countless human urban youth could come to and learn many forms of visual and performing arts. Few people today know of the rich history of Dorr Street during that era, and its musical legacy because it vanished abruptly and so thoroughly due to redevelopment in the 1970s.

The Creative Workshop was the vision of two men: Russell Taylor (artist and jazz DJ on 99.9 WKLR radio) and Vernon Martin (national recording jazz artist). It was a place where we could learn from local and regional artists, poets, painters, sculptors, potters, musicians, dancers, etc., for free. There were many workshops and less gangs and violence in the neighborhood. We were too busy learning and rehearsing rather than out selling drugs and killing one another.

The genesis of Grant Writers for the Arts Foundation begins in NW Ohio where students at Toledo’s lowest performing schools live unstable lives, moving between homes and schools at alarming rates and at an age when they are most vulnerable. The GWAFA believes that arts and music education can be used to bring communities together, educate our children, and create places of beauty that inspire both the heart and the mind.

Grant Writers for the Arts Foundation seeks to find after-school programs as a direct response to the growing number of youth that are either falling through the cracks at school or are already entangled with the juvenile court system. The goal is to make funding accessible in public school environments and community based organizations serving youths K-8 who are having a turbulent transition to young adulthood.

Creative arts and music education as an alternative can offer a positive support system to avoid the pitfalls that can derail the lives of youth. Due to limited programming, Toledo students will miss out on opportunities to develop creative skills and critical thinking abilities. Students need access to quality cultural arts and music education in our schools to ensure that Ohio’s quality of life standards are maintained and funding for these programs is limited. Due to budget cuts by the local school systems youth K-8 will be underserved. Community programs do not have resources to fill the gaps of what is now a distressed community.

On Sunday, November 11, 2012, the Grant Writers for the Arts Foundation (GWAF) will host a lively, memorable affair to help revitalize neighborhoods centers of music and cultural diversity. The GWAF will celebrate its launch in the Historic Old West End at the Collingwood Arts Center, with a mission to re-grant funds to community based organizations that provide performing arts, visual arts and music instruction for children K-8.

The Black Count: Glory, Revolution, Betrayal, and the Real Count of Monte Cristo by Tom Reiss

c.2012, Crown $27.00 / $29.95 Canada 414 pages, includes index

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

For a quiet weekend getaway, there’s nothing like a novel.

With a novel in your hands, you can travel the world without going anywhere, seeing things your eyes can’t show you. Reading a novel allows you to be someone—or something—else for a while.

A good novel is just what you need when you need escape. But as you’ll see in The Black Count by Tom Reiss, your favorite fiction may not be a fiction at all.

The knock on the door came just before midnight. Alexandre Dumas, then four years old and the future author of The Count of Monte Cristo and The Three Musketeers, remembered the sound, even as an adult. It was a knock that brought word of his father’s death.

Dumas’ father, Thomas-Alexandre Delisle, was born in 1762 in Saint-Domingue to a fugitive nobleman and a black slave. Known as a fine horseman, Thomas-Alexandre’s life was idyllic until his father brought him to France in 1776. There, the boy was educated and later changed his name to become, as Reiss calls him, the “original Alex Dumas.”

Though he was technically “owned” by his father, Alex Dumas père’s French education and his life as a nobleman’s son was possible, says Reiss, because of several French laws and concepts. Slavery was allowed in France, but the French also embraced the “undeniable right to freedom” once a black slave landed on French soil. Though Dumas was dark-skinned, his appearance was “admired and celebrated,” but not as much as his later accomplishments on the battlefield.

Much taller than his contemporaries, Dumas was said to look like a centaur when riding. He was extraordinarily strong, wide-shouldered and well-built, and good with a sword. Though he joined the French Revolution as an enlisted man, he quickly worked his way up to General and eventually fought alongside Napoleon.

But in 1799, on his way home from Egypt, the great soldier was captured by Italian forces and became a prisoner of war. Released two years later, betrayed by his country, he never fought again.

Part classic literature, part biography, and very steeped in French history, The Black Count explains the correlation between Alexandre Dumas’ swashbuckling stories and the man who inspired them. And that’s all good—if you’re into French history, because that makes up a good portion of this book.

Author Tom Reiss brings plenty of excitement to Dumas’ story, but it comes between pages and pages of battle descriptions and details that are nice to know but that aren’t necessarily integral to Dumas’ biography. That tended to slow the story down, which often made me lose sight of its importance; specifically, that this inspirational, battle-tested historical and literary figure lived in a surprisingly enlightened time and died in relative obscurity. Reiss tells us why, but it takes awhile to get there.

Overall, this isn’t a bad book. It’s a good peek into a slice of history, but it’s slow at times. Beware of that, and The Black Count may be just the right escape for you this weekend.

The Thurgood Marshall Law Association is a group of lawyers committed to improving the lives of those in the African-American and Latino community. One of the most important ways that we can improve our lives is to exercise our right to vote. Therefore, to ensure that everyone exercises their right to vote on, or before, November 6th the Thurgood Marshall Law Association would like to provide the following helpful information to the community:

1. A felony conviction does not prohibit a person from voting! As long as you are registered to vote, you can vote!
2. A state issued identification card is not the only acceptable form of identification for voting purposes. The following may also be used as identification:
   - any other reliable identification which has the voter’s name and correct current address to include, but not limited to:
     a. court summons
     b. subpoena
     c. parking ticket
     d. car registration
     e. hunting license
     f. report card
     g. school transcripts
     h. bank statements
     i. pay checks/stubs
     j. utility bills (including cell phone, cable, internet)
   - you may not use any of the following:
     a. passport/passport card, non-Ohio driver’s license, photo identification not issued by the military or Ohio DMV, expired ID, utility bill, government document, etc.
     b. that is more than one year old or fails to show voter’s current address.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTU¬ NITY/EQUAL OPPORTU¬ NITY EMPLOYER
Second Baptist Church Encouraging Women of Excellence

By Artisha Lawson
Sojourner’s Truth Reporter

The women of Second Baptist Church celebrated their annual Women’s Day service on Sunday, October 27. Women were decorated in elegant hats, chic suits and dresses, accessorized in orange and white to rejoice and fellowship during the morning and afternoon services.

Second Baptist, also known as the church of a second chance, welcomed Mother Emma Brown of Second Baptist and Vera Sanders of Ebenezer Baptist Church as service speakers. The theme “Women of Excellence,” drawn from the biblical book of Philippians, first chapter and 10th verse, which states: “That you may approve things that are excellent; that you may be sincere and without offense until the day of Christ.”

The Women’s Ministry is a group of dedicated volunteers who work collectively to finalize the theme. “We usually select a theme for women’s day, and pray about it. We let the Lord lead us in the direction he would have us to go, and check with our pastor,” said Lorraine Bartely, program co-chairman.

The morning service opened with a spirit-filled devotion led by Ella Pickett of St. Mark Baptist Church, Jackie Mullen and Lara Webb of New Hope Baptist Church, Ann Walker of Calvary Baptist Church, and Pearlie Wiggins of Love Missionary Baptist Church.

Immediately following the warm welcome delivered by Ella Betts, Michelle Tarrant facilitated the responsive reading from the Book of Psalms. In between the morning and afternoon services, guests, members of Second Baptist Church and community residents continued to fellowship while they dined on home cooked food prepared by church members.

The afternoon service, continued in the spirit of the morning service with Lorraine Bartley, Varetta Glover, Trina Sample and Lutrel Stokes, members of Second Baptist Church leading the afternoon devotion. Both services received musical selections by the Women’s Day Choir, while the afternoon service included soloist Mattie Taylor of First Baptist Church and Lisa Sumrow of Ebenezer Baptist Church.

Co-chairman Bartley wanted those in attendance to leave inspired by the theme and service. “It’s possible to walk in excellence, if you allow yourself to follow God. His expectation is excellence, it’s about walking towards that, it’s pleasing to his site.”

Women’s Day committee officers and members: Patricia Clayton, chairman; Debra Jones and Lorraine Bartley, co-chairmen; Regina Tilman and Giselle Young, finance; Tiara Clayton, Whitney Hunter and Teal Jackson, flowers.

The congregation is under the leadership of Pastor J.L. Boose and currently holds services every Sunday at 330 Oak Terrance Blvd in Spencer Township. In the coming months the congregation will focus on an outreach ministry for residents of Spencer Township and surrounding communities. “Second Baptist Church, we welcome anyone to come and visit. We’re a growing church, God has truly blessed us. This Woman’s Ministry is just one of our ministries. We focus on outreach and changing people’s lives. I thank God for the women of God that God himself have blessed this church with,” explained Pastor Boose.
As humans, we are all born with a sense of “purpose.” Whether we vocalize it or not, we want our life to make a difference. We want our time on the earth to count for something and at some point or another, we find ourselves asking the questions: Does what I do matter? What difference will I make in the world?

These queries, coupled with our natural desire for attention and positive affirmation, cause us to pursue our dreams, strive to achieve our goals, and work hard to become “somebody.”

It is in the striving and the pursuing that the lines between building a reputation and building a legacy sometimes become blurred. A reputation is what people say about you. A legacy is what people know about you.

A reputation desires the limelight and sometimes causes us to compromise our principles and standards and even sell our souls to protect.

A legacy results from the contentment with doing the hard work that sometimes goes unnoticed, relies on principles and integrity and requires us to give of our souls to build.

Building our reputation brings us instant gratification albeit via twitter followings or Facebook likes, but can also be ruined in an instant. Building a legacy, however, takes time and sacrifice and may not be recognized until long after we’re gone, but bears fruit from generation to generation.

The word legacy is defined as something that is handed down from an ancestor or the past. It consists of our lasting contribution to our community, society and even the world. It is something that is acknowledged in our current life time or remembered after. If we are living and breathing, we have the ability to start building our legacy today, in whatever capacity we choose.

Parents – A family legacy is passed down from generation to generation, positive or negative. Are you modeling behavior and instilling values that you will want to carry on from generation to generation?

Artists - Your works of art, music, dance or poetry, whatever the form, has the ability to impact the world for decades to come. What type of impact do you want to make?

Entrepreneurs, Teachers, Pastors – You have the ability to empower others and inspire growth. Who are you equipping and empowering to ensure the work of your vision and knowledge continues?

Civic Leaders and Activist – You stand and fight for your beliefs and principals and sacrifice greatly for your cause. What do you want to be remembered for?

As a community, we must remember that because of what our ancestors did for us, we are better off today. Legacy matters. What will your legacy be when you’re gone?

The Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. held its second annual Fall into Fabulous Dinner and Dance on September 29 at the Brandy Wine Country Club. Many were in attendance to help support the efforts of the Sorority.

According to Fundraiser Chairman Lisa E. Dubose, the event is held to raise money for community service projects and scholarships.

“This is our way of being able to give back to the community. Since receiving our charter in 1952, we have been able to give over $200,000 to our community and so we appreciate the support of our guests who allow us to continue our efforts,” said Dubose.

DJ Roc kept the party live and the people dancing. Entertainment was also provided by the blues man himself, Bobby G.
