Young Black Minds II

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.
The Truth Contributor

... We were born into an unjust system; we are not prepared to grow old in it.
- Bernadette Devlin

The voices of young leaders of independent, black organizations operating as “vehicles for black excellence” are likely to be muted by a cacophonous public “narrative of unworthiness.”

This fictional but racial and gendered political rhetoric seeks to place blame for the present fiscal crisis on the African-American community by perpetuating the stereotypical image of blacks as living off the public dole. As a result of this “dependency on entitlements,” mainstream discourse concludes, African Americans are not only undeserving but they are also noncredible.

However, if our problems are to be resolved, attention must be given to the thoughts of young, black minds that are involved in the process to improve marginalized communities.

The following dialog with Elgin Rogers, president of the African American Leadership Caucus (AALC) is part II of a series of conversations with young, leaders of independent black organizations and institutions of excellence.

Perryman: What types of questions are you asking politicians who come in to make a presentation before your organization?

Rogers: We ask about their stance on policies and legislation. We want to know what they have done in the past and their plans for the future. Are they inclusive as far as African Americans on their staff? We also discuss issues such as housing, community policing and education. So our main focus is to make sure that the people that we’re advocating for and working with are aware of what’s going on. Now, they can tell you about what’s going on in the community, but what’s going on in at One Government Center, or at the Party headquarters and how do all those things work together to improve the quality of life where we live?

Perryman: Please clarify what you mean by “people that we advocate for.” Who would those people be?

Rogers: Our mission is to improve the quality of life for people of African descent. So those are the people that we’re looking to advocate for and to improve the quality of life.

Perryman: That’s not a monolith, so do you mean the African diaspora in its entirety?

Rogers: Are you asking do we have non-African Americans or others come to the group or are we exclusive?

Perryman: No. What I’m trying to get at is how inclusive you are within the black community as far as outlook and philosophy. Many groups are advocating but they are advocating for a certain type of minority. Not just blacks or African Americans but those who are black and professional or part of the so-called black elite.

Rogers: I get you, those who are already there.

Perryman: Exactly! So that those who are outside of mainstream are left to fend for themselves.

Rogers: I understand and, like I said, we’re on the ground, we’re everyday people. And so you’re talking to that person who would be left behind and I think that’s why we have so much fire in our bellies and passion for making sure that people understand the importance of voting and getting out to vote. We’re not pushing any particular candidate, but just knowing that a certain amount of votes can determine what roads are paved, what homes get torn down, where traffic lights are placed. Your vote determines removing some of the stresses from your life. I mean that’s powerful and profound.

Perryman: Well some would say that in our most recent mayoral election people stayed home.

Rogers: I think they sent a message. I don’t know if it was the correct message or the wrong message, but they were sending a message about the vote.

I have resisted the repeated calls to formulate a simple church survey so that the readers could weigh in on what’s happening with and within their place of worship, aka: The Church.

My hesitancy was based upon trying to accurately survey, via a multiple choice type of questionnaire, how you are matriculating in your particular worship setting.

As you will see from the posed questions, the gravamen of the questions do not depend upon whether your church is characterized as being fundamental, charismatic, conservative, liberal, uptight or simply a social gathering of like-minded people. (note: some churches are in essence social clubs).

What counts is how you see yourself in your church environment and whether or not you are an active participant or just a pew sitter who literally does nothing more than warm the pews once a week. It will give tell-tale signs of why you will give or why you won’t.

So, the questions given will either prompt you to get involved in your local assembly or cut bait and leave and find another place of worship where you can go from the milk saucer to the meat platter as to your spiritual growth.

Some of the questions will be toughies and some will be softballs because when you evaluate any gathering of people in a local assembly, you will find a broad spectrum of tastes, beliefs and attitudes.

If you are not a current member of a local assembly of believers, still answer the questions because it will give tell-tale signs of why you are on the outside looking in.

So, with that in mind, please answer truthfully and away we go!

(1) Do you sit under a woman pastor?
   a. Yes, because it does not matter to me what the gender is of the pastor.
   b. No, because the Word of God in the New Testament does not allow for a woman to be a pastor.
   c. Don’t care either way.
   d. Did not know there were applicable scriptures on this issue.

(2) Are you informed on a regular basis of the exact financial health of your church assembly?
   a. No. We are told that the financial records are not our business and to trust the pastor.
   b. Yes.
   c. Not on a regular basis, but now and then. Especially when they want to raise money.
   d. I don’t care to know. I trust my leadership to do the right thing with my giving.

(3) Is your pastor accessible to you when needed or do you go through layers of people to get to him or her?
   a. Not accessible all the time when I might need counsel.
   b. Yes, available on a regular basis.
   c. Too many hanger’oners around him or her and I must submit a request for a meeting.
   d. Not the kind of pastor that I would want to counsel with anyway.

(4) Does your pastor preach and teach from the Word of God?
   a. Most of the time.
   b. Sometimes.
   c. All the time.
   d. Rare. Mostly inspirational messages that do not include scriptures.

(5) Why do you attend your particular fellowship?
   a. Been here all my life. Where else would I go?
   b. Just habit.
   c. I like the people.
   d. Good music and the service is short and you are not pressed to do things.

(6) Has the preaching and teaching from the pulpit made a Godly difference in your lifestyle?
   a. Yes.
   b. No.
   c. Only if I let it.
   d. Depends on what is being taught or preached about.

(7) If you could change one thing about how things are done at your church, what would it be?
   a. Too much emphasis on money. Need to tone it down.
   b. The music is too loud and played too long. No mix.
   c. More social gatherings so we can know each other.
   d. More outreach so we can do things besides come to this building.

(8) Does your church pastor play “favorites?”
   a. If it is with family members, yes he does.
   b. No. I haven’t seen it happen.
   c. Yes. Especially if you are known to be a big giver of money.
   d. I noticed that they prefer people who are nice and clean and do not ask a lot of questions at church meeting times.

(9) If you do not attend a church at the present time, why not?
   a. I wasn’t treated well when I attended there.
   b. I felt that my talents were not needed.
   c. The people were very cool and aloof towards visitors.
   d. I knew too many of the people there who were not living anything right.

(10) What do you think is the mission or ministry of the church.
   a. Proclaim the gospel without compromise or partiality.
   b. Help and assist the down and out.
   c. Tell people that they are OK.
   d. I don’t know. I don’t read the Bible.

Well, there it is. Each answer is weighted according to the Rann-Felsen Statistical Survey Report (via The Carthena University School of Theology) and the below are the answers based upon the questions given.

a. Three points
b. One point
c. Zero points
d. Two points

If your score is 0-5, you are considered a person who is in need of fellowship and reassurance before you are able to come into an established church body.

If your score is 6-15, you are considered a person who needs to rely less on the opinions of others and engage yourself in the Word of God for your answers.

If your score is 16-23, you are considered to be a reliable person who can discern between good and evil and are not quickly led astray from sound doctrine.

If your score is 24-30, you need to start a church formation and mount the pulpit.

Your talents are needed!

Ohio Democratic Candidates Endorse Ohio Voters Bill of Rights

Last week, the Ohio Ballot Board decided that the Ohio Voters’ Bill of Rights will be submitted as one issue to Ohio voters this November. In reaction to last week’s decision, the Ohio statewide Democratic candidates issued the following statements in support of the Ohio Voters Bill of Rights:

Gubernatorial Candidate Ed FitzGerald:

“The Ohio Voter Bill of Rights is an important step in allowing Ohioans to exercise their constitutional right to vote. While it’s unfortunate that we have to resort to such a step, it’s clear Governor Kasich and Secretary Husted cannot be trusted to keep the best interest of all Ohioans in mind.”

Secretary of State Candidate Nina Turner:

“Throughout our nation’s history, there has been one universal truth: all other freedoms and liberties we enjoy in our country stem from the right to vote and the exercise of that right. The Ohio Voting Bill of Rights, if ratified, would be a step in protecting the right of the voters and preventing the gamesmanship of political parties.”

Ohio Attorney General Candidate David Pepper:

“Rather than having rules that change every year, the Voters Bill of Rights will lock in real protections for voting rights and help end the cycle of costly Federal lawsuits that plague Ohio year after year. For that reason, I enthusiastically support it.”

State Auditor Candidate John Patrick Carney:

“This petition certification marks a crucial step towards enacting policy that will protect Ohioans’ fundamental right to vote. Equal access to the ballot is a pillar of a successful democracy and we must continue to fight to protect that right for all Ohioans. Representatives Reese, Senator Turner, and the OLBC deserve all the credit for leading this important effort on behalf of all Ohio voters.”

State Treasurer Candidate Connie Pillich:

“When I was stationed overseas in the Air Force, I saw firsthand what happens when people are not given equal opportunity to have their voices heard. Ohio should be expanding, not constraining, the ability for the citizens of our great state to vote. I am proud to support the Ohio Voters Bill of Rights to protect voting as a fundamental right in our State.”
Brown Joined by Local Navigators Who Can Help Northwest Ohioans Benefit from Insurance in New Health Insurance Marketplace

More than 4.2 Million Americans and Nearly 79,000 Ohioans have Entered Health Insurance Marketplace; More than 115,000 Ohioans

Special to The Truth

On Thursday, March 13, U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) joined local navigators to alert Northwest Ohioans that enrollment for the 2014 health insurance marketplace will close at the end of this month. More than 4.2 million Americans—and nearly 79,000 Ohioans—are now healthier and better protected as a part of the new marketplace. However, more than 193,000 Ohioans remain eligible for the marketplace, with more than 115,000 of them eligible to enroll with financial assistance.

“The health law has already helped millions of Ohioans receive quality care at an affordable price,” Brown said. “But more than 193,000 Ohioans are still eligible for enrollment in the health insurance marketplace. Each of these Ohioans can receive valuable assistance from a health care navigator. And most are eligible for financial assistance. With only two weeks remaining before the enrollment deadline, Ohioans should utilize these resources in order to get covered, live healthier lives, and be better protected.”

Before, during, and after Brown’s press conference at the United Way of Greater Toledo, local navigators took appointments and walk-in meetings to help local citizens enroll in an affordable, high-quality health plan. Joining Brown to help alert Ohioans was Brad Clark, director of the Neighborhood Health Association Navigator Project; and Jan Ruma, the executive director of Toledo/Lucas County CareNet, which provides access to healthcare services for low-income residents of Lucas County.

Also joining Brown to share her enrollment story was Toledo resident, Peg Clancy. While she works as a nurse, Clancy is not eligible for Medicare or for employer-based medical insurance. She signed up for health care using the exchange with the help of a navigator one mile from her home, and qualified for a subsidy that lowers her premiums. Clancy now has an affordable, high-quality health plan and continues to see her preferred doctor.

The health law has already protected...
For the 19th time, the Greater Toledo YWCA celebrated its signature annual event – Milestones: A Tribute to Women – and honored the achievements of seven local women in a variety of fields.

Vallie Bowman-English as among the chosen few this year for her accomplishments in Government. Bowman-English, the Clerk of Court for the City of Toledo Municipal Court, was nominated by Laneta Goings who wrote:

“Vallie holds the duel distinct titles of being the first African American and the first attorney elected to the office of Toledo Municipal Clerk of Court. She is the third vice-president of the Toledo Bar Association and is the first African American elected to this position. Vallie has implemented real-time data entry in eight high-volume courtrooms. This allows clerks to record entries as the judge or magistrate is ruling and gives other departments and the public immediate access to the case information.

“Vallie serves as the president of the Toledo Chapter of The Links, Incorporated – a service organization with more than 12,000 professional women across the country, one of the oldest and largest dedicated, volunteer service organizations of women committed to enriching, sustaining and ensuring the culture and economic survival of African Americans and other persons of African ancestry. Vallie has empowered women by inspiring them to participate in the electoral process and encouraging them to run for public office. She strives daily to encourage others to keep their faith and remember with God all things are possible.”

A graduate of Scott High School, Bowman-English earned her undergraduate degree from The University of Toledo and her law degree from Ohio Northern University. Shewas admitted to the bar in 1996 entering the Lucas County Prosecutor’s Office that year. She ran for the Clerk’s office in 2003 and has held the position ever since.

Bowman-English is married to Ian English, a prosecutor with Lucas County.

The other honorees of this year’s Milestones awards were: Susan Martyn, Stoepler Professor of Law and Values at the UT College of Law, for Education; Dr. Sonia Najjar, professor at UT, director of CoBEC, for Sciences; Kim Sidwell, senior vice president, Resource Development for United Way of Greater Toledo, for Social Sciences; Barbara Elkost, volunteer at Hospice of North-west Ohio, for Volunteerism; Leslie Adams, portrait artist, for Arts and Marianne Ballas, dealer owner-operator, Ballas Buick-GMC, for Business.

millions of Ohioans like Clancy by ending lifetime caps on insurance coverage, covering both children and adults with pre-existing conditions, allowing young adults to stay on their parents’ insurance until their 26th birthday, offering free preventive care in new private insurance plans, closing the “donut hole” in drug prices for seniors, and providing tax credits to small businesses to help them afford health care for their employees.

Further, financial help is available for middle and low-income individuals to enroll if they don’t have meaningful employer-sponsored health coverage. This includes a family of four with an annual income of below $49,200, and single adults with an annual income below $45,960. For some Americans, premiums will be nearly 14 percent lower in 2014 than previously expected, according to a recent report by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

For an individual in Ohio, the average monthly premium for the lowest-cost silver plan is $304 and for the lowest cost bronze plan is $263. States with the lowest premiums have more than double the number of insurance companies offering plans compared to states with the highest premiums. Ohio consumers have an average of 46 health plans from which to choose in the marketplace.

The health law also ensures that the dollars Ohioans pay for health insurance are used for their medical care—rather than for executive bonuses and ad campaigns.

The law requires that insurance companies spend at least 80 percent of the premiums they collect from consumers on medical care. If they don’t meet this goal, they must give consumers a rebate. In Ohio, it is estimated that more than 6,300 Ohioans will benefit this year from $487,000 in rebates. Ohio families have faced unchecked hikes in their health insurance costs for years. But the law subjects insurance companies to new scrutiny if they raise prices by more than 10 percent, and the health law provided the state of Ohio $5.1 million to combat unjustifiable increases.

Brown, who declined Congressional health insurance for nearly two decades—keeping a 1992 campaign promise to decline a health plan until similar coverage is available to all Americans—entered the marketplace during the 2014 enrollment period that started October 1, 2013 and ends March 31, 2014.
What Every Small Business Needs to Know About Marketing

Special to The Truth

For small businesses, smart marketing is crucial for success. But what does that mean in today’s fast paced, highly wired world?

While online and mobile communications are in your purview in recent years, experts say that face-to-face engagement with people who matter to you and your organization remains invaluable.

“In a crowded marketplace, making a positive and lasting impression is crucial,” says Skip Cox, board chairman for the International Association of Exhibitions and Events. “There’s no substitute for an in-person meeting.”

No matter the size or focus area of your business, exhibitions, trade shows and other f2f events can be a powerful business tool, helping with sales, networking, education and business research.

Don’t Forfeit Past Tax Refunds

By Jason Alderman
Guest Column

Does this sound familiar? A few years back your yearly earnings were pretty low so you figured you wouldn’t owe any income tax. Thus, when April 15 rolled around the following year you didn’t bother filling a tax return, knowing you wouldn’t be penalized.

Big mistake.

Even if your income fell below the threshold at which you’d owe anything, chances are taxes were deducted from your paycheck throughout the year. (Check your year-end W-2 form. If so, you probably left a sizable tax refund on the table.)

And you wouldn’t be alone. The IRS estimates that each year close to a million people don’t bother filing federal tax returns, thereby forfeiting around $1 billion in refunds they were due – refunds that average several hundred dollars apiece.

Here’s the good news: The IRS generally gives you a three-year window to go back and file a past year’s tax return if you want to claim an unpaid refund. For example, to collect a refund for 2010 you have until April 15, 2014, to file a 2010 return. After that, the money becomes the property of the U.S. Treasury. You can order prior year tax forms at www.irs.gov or by calling 800-TAX-FORM (800-829-3676). If you’re missing any supplementary paperwork (e.g., W-2 or 1099 forms), you’ll need to request copies from your employer, bank or other payer. If that doesn’t work, file IRS Form 4506-T to request a free transcript showing information from these year-end documents.

Keep in mind that if you file to collect a refund on your 2010 taxes but have not also filed tax returns for 2011 and 2012, the IRS may hold onto the refund until you file those subsequent returns. Also, past refunds will be applied to any amounts you still owe to the IRS or your state tax agency, and may be used to offset unpaid child support or past-due federal debts, such as student loans.

Another good reason to consider going back and filing a previous year’s tax return: the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC). Chances are, if the reason you didn’t file a return was because you didn’t earn enough to owe taxes, you may have been eligible for the EITC, a “refundable” tax credit for low- to moderate income working taxpayers. (“Refundable” means that if you owe less in tax than your eligible credit, you... continued on page 10
Portman Announces Unemployment Insurance Agreement

Extension Is Completely Paid for, Will Open the Door to Significant and Necessary Reforms

Special to The Truth

Last week, U.S. Senator Rob Portman (R-Ohio) announced that a bipartisan group of lawmakers has reached an agreement on extending unemployment insurance for the long-term unemployed who have gone without relief since December 28, 2013. Portman played a key role in ensuring the bill is fully paid for, that it is short-term, and that it includes reforms to the broken program that’s failing to connect Americans with jobs.

“This agreement is the first step toward reforming a broken program into a safety net that helps the unemployed quickly reenter the workforce and get back on their feet,” Portman stated. “I’m especially pleased we were able to find a way to pay for the extension so that we’re not adding to our record debt. The President called for a ‘year of action’ and I hope that in the months to come, as we look for a long-term solution, he joins us in proposing significant reforms to this program.”

This new legislation seeks to strengthen the U.S. economy while providing vulnerable job seekers and their families with a vital lifeline as they continue to look for work. The proposal is fully paid for using a combination of offsets that includes extending pension smoothing provisions from the 2012 highway bill (MAP-21), which were set to phase out this year, and extending customs user fees through 2024. The bill also includes an additional offset allowing single-employer pension plans to prepay their flat rate premiums to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC).

Further, the legislation includes a provision modeled on Senators Tom Coburn’s (R-OK) and Jon Tester’s (D-MT) language that ends unemployment insurance payments to any individual whose adjusted gross income in the preceding year was $1 million or more. According to 2010 income tax data, there were 0.03 percent of filers that earned over $1 million and received some form of UI at either the state or federal level. This provision received unanimous support in the Senate when it was voted in 2011.

The legislative proposal also includes language championed by Portman to provide individuals receiving unemployment insurance benefits with early access to specific strategies that can help get them back into the workforce faster, including through access to information about industry-recognized credentials that are regionally relevant or nationally portable. In addition, this proposal includes language by Senator Susan Collins (R-ME) to strengthen reemployment and eligibility assessment (REA) and ReEmployment Services (RES) programs. In an effort to help get job seekers back into the workforce, individuals receiving emergeney unemployment compensation will be eligible for enhanced, personalized assessments and referrals to reemployment services when they begin their 27th week of UI (Tier I) and 55th week of UI (Tier II).

In addition, the legislative proposal includes language proposed by Senator Mark Kirk (R-IL) that would require a Government Accountability Office (GAO) report to ensure that unemployment insurance benefits are being provided to individuals who are actively looking for work and who truly want to return to the labor force.

A new year is a time for change. People across the world make resolutions and set goals to better themselves and the world around them. Whether you want to shed a few pounds, secure your finances for retirement, devote more time to charity or go on a vacation you’ve always dreamed about, chances are you have some ideas for a fresh start in 2014.

Social Security is no different. Our goal is to provide the best possible service to everyone who comes to us for help, whether they’re applying for disability benefits or getting verification of their Social Security number. By investing in new technologies and finding innovative, cost-effective ways to deliver service, we are able to reach this goal. We continue to rank high in customer service satisfaction and have the best online services in government, providing the best service to those who come to us for help.

Technology is vital to delivering quality service, and we continue to provide more options for customers to do business with us over the Internet or through self-service kiosks. For example, my Social Security provides people who use the Internet a secure way to do business with us in an easy and convenient way at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount. We are making changes in the way we provide some services so we can serve the vast majority of Americans better and more efficiently. Most people won’t even notice the changes. So allow us to fill you in.

Later this year, Social Security will stop providing benefit verification letters in our local offices. You can still get an instant letter online by creating a personal my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount, or by calling our toll-free telephone number at 1-800-772-1213 to request one by mail. In addition, we will discontinue providing Social Security number printouts. These printouts have no security features and could be easily misused or counterfeited. If you need proof of your Social Security number and you do not have your Social Security card, you may apply for a replacement card by completing the Application for a Social Security Card and providing the required documentation. You’ll find the application online at www.socialsecurity.gov/online/ss-5.pdf. As always, we continue to work directly with other agencies to minimize the need for furnishing proof of your Social Security number.

You may want to check out our webinar that aired live on January 9, “Benefit Verification Letters Online, Easy as 1-2-3.” The webinar explains how to establish an account on my Social Security, how to get a benefit verification letter and other services offered at our website. Watch the webinar at www.socialsecurity.gov/webinars. We wish you all the best in 2014 and hope that you are successful in meeting your own goals and resolutions. If one of them is to do business with Social Security, or even if it is not, we will strive to continue providing the best and most secure customer service possible. New Mortgage Rules Protect Against Risky Loans

By Jason Alderman
Guest Column

Good news for people shopping for a mortgage – and for current homeowners facing foreclosure because they can no longer afford their home loan: New mortgage regulations drafted by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau recently took effect and they provide a slew of new rights and protections for consumers.

One of the cornerstones of the new mortgage rules is that lenders now are required to evaluate whether borrowers can afford to repay a mortgage over the long term – that is, after the initial teaser rate has expired. Otherwise, the loan won’t be considered what’s now referred to as a “qualified mortgage.”

Qualified mortgages are designed to help protect consumers from the kinds of risky loans that brought the housing market to its knees back in 2008. But obtaining that designation is also important to lenders because it will help protect them from lawsuits by borrowers who later prove unable to pay off their loans.

Under the new ability-to-pay rules, lenders now must assess – and document – multiple components of the borrower’s financial state before offering a mortgage, including the borrower’s income, savings and other assets, debt, employment status and credit history, as well as other anticipated mortgage-related costs.

Qualified mortgages must meet the following guidelines:

- The term can’t be longer than 30 years.
- Interest-only, negative amortization and balloon-payment loans aren’t allowed.
- Loans over $100,000 can’t have upfront points and fees that exceed 3 percent of the total loan amount.
- If the loan has an adjustable interest rate, the lender must ensure that the borrower qualifies at the fully indexed rate (the highest rate to which it might climb), versus the initial teaser rate.
- Generally, borrowers must have a total monthly debt-to-income ratio of 43 percent or less.
- Loans that are eligible to be bought, guaranteed or insured by government agencies like Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and the Federal Housing Administration are considered qualified mortgages until at least 2021, even if they don’t meet all QM requirements.

Lenders may still issue mortgages that aren’t qualified, provided they reasonably believe borrowers can repay – and have documentation to back up that assessment.

New, tougher regulations also apply to mortgage servicers – the companies responsible for collecting payments and managing customer service for the loan owners. For example, they now must:

- Send borrowers clear monthly statements that show how payments are being credited, including a breakdown of payments by principal, interest, fees and escrow.
- Fix mistakes and respond to borrower inquiries promptly.
- Credit payments on the date received.
- Provide early notice to borrowers with adjustable-rate mortgages when their rate is about to change.
- Contact most borrowers by the time they are 36 days late with their payment.
- Inform borrowers who fall behind on mortgage payments of all available alternatives to foreclosure (e.g., payment deferral or loan modification).

With limited exceptions, mortgage servicers now cannot: initiate foreclosures until borrowers are more than 120 days delinquent (allowing time to apply for a loan modification or other alternative); start foreclosure proceedings while also working with a homeowner who has already submitted a complete application for help; or hold a foreclosure sale until all other alternatives have been considered.

For more details on the new mortgage rules, visit www.consumerfinance.gov/mortgage.

Bottom line: You should never enter into a mortgage (or other loan) you can’t understand or afford. But it’s nice to know that stronger regulations are now in place to help prevent another housing meltdown.

OACAA Supports Governor Kasich’s Proposal to Expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit

Special to The Truth

The Ohio Association of Community Action Agencies strongly supports Governor Kasich’s proposal to expand the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC).

“Despite having jobs, many low-income Ohioans struggle to make ends meet. With the costs of housing, transportation, food and medical care continually rising, people in lower paying jobs need to be able to hold onto the wages they earn,” said Philip E. Cole, executive director of OACAA. “The EITC program does this. This program has a track record of helping people and stimulating the economy.”

The expansion, as proposed in the Governor’s mid-biennial budget, would triple Ohio’s Earned Income Tax Credit for low-income Ohioans by raising its benefit from 5 to 15 percent of the federal credit. “While that might not seem like much to some people, for low-income people the difference between $100 and $300 can mean needed clothes, furniture or medical care,” Cole said.

“We commend the governor for proposing expansion of the EITC and urge the general assembly to see the merits and pass the expansion for the benefit of low-income Ohioans and to strengthen Ohio’s economy,” concluded Cole.

Marketplace Enrollment Hits Five Million Milestone

By Marilyn Tavenner, Administrator, Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services

Special to The Truth

As this historic open enrollment period enters its final weeks, millions of Americans are finding quality, affordable coverage thanks to the Affordable Care Act. Fernando Valdez and Denise Schroeder were part of a weekend wave of consumers signing up for new coverage and bringing enrollment nationwide to more than five million through the federal and state-based Marketplaces since October 1.

Fernando Valdez, 25, of El Paso, Texas woke up early on Saturday, after his mother insisted that he walk to an enrollment center and enroll in Marketplace coverage. Now, he will pay $22 a month for his health insurance.

And Denise Schroeder says she now feels like “I have a whole new life” after enrolling in coverage in recent days. Denise, a small business owner in West Chester, Pennsylvania who runs “Happy Heart Clown N’Stuff,” which does balloon decorating and entertainment for parties is also a cancer survivor. Because she had cancer, Denise knew she couldn’t let her health coverage lapse, but the $880 premium she was paying each month wiped out her savings account, and she said it was killing her. But after working with an enrollment navigator, she enrolled on Thursday in a Silver Plan for $22 a month. When she saw the new premium, she cried.

You can find more stories like theirs at http://www.hhs.gov/healthcare/facts/mystory/index.html.

Consumers like Fernando and Denise are coming every day to check out their options for affordable health care at HealthCare.gov or seeking help from a trained representative in person or via our 24/7 call center. The last several days have been the busiest since December, with the Call Center taking more than 198,000 calls on Thursday alone “the busiest day since December 23” and more than 130,000 calls over the weekend. Last week, HealthCare.gov saw more than four million visits and an additional one million visits this weekend.

With only two weeks to go, we’re continuing to work hard to ensure that every American who wants to enroll in affordable coverage by the deadline of March 31 is able to do so. So don’t delay; tell your friends and family to sign up today.

not only pay no tax but also get a refund for the difference.)

As an example, for tax year 2010, a married couple filing jointly with three or more qualifying children whose adjusted gross income was less than $48,263 were eligible for an EITC of up to $5,666. To find out how EITC works and whether you qualify, consult IRS.gov.

For the rest of us, April 15 looms as the deadline for filing our 2013 taxes. At the very least you should request a filing extension by then; otherwise the penalty on any taxes you owe increases dramatically.

Typically you’ll have to pay an additional 5 percent of taxes owed for each full or partial month you’re late, plus interest, up to a maximum penalty of 25 percent. However, if you file your return or request an extension on time, the penalty drops tenfold to 0.5 percent per month, plus interest.

Bottom line: If you skipped filing a tax return in the last three years, go back and crunch the numbers – you may be pleasantly surprised by a hefty refund.

TARTA Ridership Increases for Fourth Year – TARPS Ridership Sets Another Record

Special to The Truth

2013 marked the fourth consecutive year of ridership increases for the Toledo Area Regional Transit Authority. TARTA and the Toledo Area Regional Paratransit Service’s combined 2013 ridership was 3,448,956 trips, an increase of 33,956 trips over 2012’s ridership. This ridership mark also included TARPS achieving its 17th consecutive year of increased ridership.

Ridership challenge

The overall ridership increase was achieved despite losing 65,100 trips annually as a result of Perrysburg voting itself out of TARTA in March 2012. TARTA reluctantly withdrew services in November 2012, six months after the vote. The full impact of Perrysburg’s action was felt in 2013. “As these ridership figures show, the TARTA system continues strong,” General Manager James K. Gee said. “TARTA and its services have faced many challenges and have emerged as a continuing, viable transportation provider that economically delivers critical services to residents within its coverage area.”

TARTA provides a variety of transportation services to seven communities in Lucas and Wood counties. These services include fixed-line service on regularly scheduled specific routes, seven days a week; TARPS for the disabled; Call-A-Ride, curb-to-curb service in six suburban member communities; and shuttle service to Toledo Mud Hens and Walleye professional sporting events. Both TARPS and Call-A-Ride are call-in-advance services to arrange pickup times.

Overall, TARTA’s 2013 fixed-line ridership, its main ridership category, was up 14,025 trips more than in 2012. Fixed-line service in 2013 was 3,312,566 trips compared to 2012’s 3,114,541 trips.

In 2014, ridership again will be impacted because of Spencer Township’s vote to withdraw from TARTA. In 2013, service to and from Spencer Township included 13,520 trips on TARPA and 3,792 trips on TARPS for a total ridership of 17,312 trips.

TARPS sets record

2013 was the 17th consecutive year TARPS has set ridership records by recording more trips than in the previous year. By comparison, TARPS ridership in 2013 was 320,390 trips compared to 2012’s 300,466 trips, an increase of 19,924 trips.

2013 was the first-full year for TARPS-eligible riders to ride TARPS’s fixed-line service for free. During 2013, 56,828 trips were provided free of charge. The service kicked off in November 2012. “The impact of TARPS and TARTA’s service on residents with disabilities in this area cannot be taken for granted,” Gee said. “TARTA provides these challenged individuals the mobility they need to move about the community, hold jobs outside of the home, get medical attention and visit friends and relatives.”

To participate, TARPS-eligible passengers are required to be present at a TARTA stop when the bus arrives and to get on and off the bus without driver assistance.

The program reduces the higher cost of sending a smaller, specially equipped bus to the home of a TARPS-eligible rider and transporting that person to a specific location. TARPS drivers assist eligible riders from their door, help them on and off the bus at their destination’s door.

TARTA’s fixed-line service does not provide door-to-door service and follows specific routes and timetables, making the larger TARTA fixed-line buses less expensive to operate on a per trip basis.
they said that: “It doesn’t matter who is elected. My issues aren’t addressed no matter who’s in office, whether that person is white, black, Hispanic, my situation has not gotten better.” For those in poverty, living in the inner city, the crime and inequity is still there. People who live in Moody Manor, people who live right behind my church, their situation does not change.

Rogers: It can change.

Perryman: But it hasn’t.

Rogers: It hasn’t changed for the majority.

Perryman: Well that’s what we’re talking about, isn’t it? I mean if one to two Negroes are doing better that doesn’t change the situation for the majority of African Americans. And there are those, including me, who would say that until African Americans as a whole improve, we have not done anything. Oprah is just one millionaire but what about the rest of us still in poverty?

Rogers: I don’t disagree. One of my organizing members often states that people have to be a part of their own heaven and liberation. I don’t know if you call that a conservative philosophy but I understand that. We have to be diligent and remain active. People talk about the civil rights movement as if it ended, but it’s an ongoing struggle. And I think that’s the thing that we don’t convey and communicate from your generation to mine and to the next generation that Dr. Martin Luther King came and he’s no longer here but these things are ongoing. And we’ve seen the hands of time turn back with these voter suppression bills. If your vote really doesn’t matter why would they make it so challenging and difficult to vote?

Perryman: But you posed a great question about how do we effect change for those people who are “left behind”? A lot of things keep happening time and time again despite who gets elected to office. That’s a great question.

Perryman: So what do you do to make change? What are you involved in now?

Rogers: Some of the work that we’re involved in is education, advocacy and awareness. One issue is community policing. If you’re traveling at night and you’re not one of the bad guys you don’t want to be treated like a bad guy. We want to make sure that people have a good relationship with those people who put their lives on the line for us every day. I have many friends who are in law enforcement and so you want to make sure that people are respecting their authority and that they’re also respecting you.

You also want to make sure that our children have every opportunity to access a quality education. And I think the quality aspect of it is stretching their minds so they think above and beyond what they see. And the other part is, the economic opportunities or lack thereof, ensuring that people have access to jobs that will allow them to either live where they want to live or to improve their lives. These are the issues that we are moving towards and that we try to bring awareness and information to, not just limiting it to either those folks who are young professionals or those folks who are in abject poverty. We try to touch all and we use different strategies to get their attention so that if you know about it and you choose not to do something that’s one thing. But now, since you know what are you going to do about it?

Perryman: Are you doing anything specifically along voter rights?

Rogers: Yes. We have a civic engagement event April 7 and we’re encouraging everyone to come out and vote at the early vote center where you can register that day and vote at the same time. That’s the importance of this date. It’s the last day that you can register to vote for the primary season. The primary is how you decide who or what gets on the ultimate menu or the ballot. If you miss the primary, then you had the opportunity to set the tone and you missed it.

Perryman: So if we don’t participate in the primary we’re just stuck with the choices presented to us?

Rogers: Yes. And because you may not be connected, in the sense of being able to relate to the candidates or those set of issues, it could cause you to possibly stay home on Election Day. It’s about opportunity costs.

Perryman: So voting is high on your list of priorities?

Rogers: Voting is very, very high on our list of priorities because voting goes back to that biblical passage “if a man doesn’t work a man doesn’t eat.” We encourage voting because if you don’t vote you won’t eat. And we’ve seen the cuts that have been made here at the state and also national levels with the SNAP food stamp program. So I mean these are things that people should think about.

Perryman: President Obama has talked about the need to address the issues of young black males. What is your opinion on the topic?

Rogers: I’ve been fortunate to experience situations and relationships where men help other men. I don’t know all the details, but I think President Obama’s My Brother’s Keeper initiative is a very powerful concept. I was able to benefit from Fair Side Community Center run by Pastor I.J. Johnson and Reverend Curly Johnson out of St. Mark’s Baptist Church. The program taught young men to be accountable for their actions and their decisions. “Every tub must sit on its own bottom” was one of the center’s catch phrases. It helped get men to develop accountability and to have empathy for someone other than themselves. And so, I think those types of programs are awesome.

Perryman: What do you think are the greatest needs facing young African-American males today?

Rogers: It’s complex but I think they need love. I know that’s a cliché but these young men want to know that their people truly care about them and won’t abuse their trust and confidence.

Perryman: Final thoughts?

Rogers: I’d just like to ask people to come out April 7 and vote. Bring your family, friends, girlfriend, boyfriend, husband, or wife and vote. If we can do this now, maybe we can get more attention focused on the areas we discussed earlier that need to be addressed.

I’d also like to ask people to come to the African American Leadership Caucus’ monthly meetings at the Mott and Kent branch libraries. In April and May we’ll have a leadership institute training for those people who are thinking about getting involved, not only in just politics but organizing as a part of life. We’ve gotten great support from our community as well as from some of the elected officials and the people who are at the grassroots community organizing level. They will all be there to participate as well as to facilitate these sessions.

You can contact us via e-mail at aaecl419@gmail.com. That’s for individuals aged 18 to 40 years of age. We encourage elders and parents of those aged 18 to 40 to come out also because we are huge on making sure that we’re doing a diligent job of sharing information and learning with those who are before us and those who are coming after us. Knowledge can’t just stay in the vault or no one wins.

“Look, Mom!”

You probably say that 10 times a day. You want to show her something, ask a question, or just get Mom to see what you’re doing. Sometimes, it’s hard to get her attention, but if you’re like the little girl in Splash, Anna Hibiscus! by Atinuke & Lauren Tobia, you might go ahead and have fun without it.

It was a beautiful, sunny day on a beach in Africa. That’s where Anna Hibiscus lives, and it’s where her whole family was relaxing.

Everybody was having fun. Papa was with Uncle Tunde, and they were visiting with fishermen. Some of the cousins were on their phones, some were playing soccer, and Chocolate was dumping sand on Angel. Even Mama was busy.

Anna Hibiscus watched the ocean waves as they splashed and laughed. She wanted so much to splash, too, and she wanted everyone else to come with her!

She asked Angel and Chocolate, but they were digging in the sand. They invited Anna Hibiscus to play in the sand with them, but that’s not what she wanted to do.

She asked Benz and Wonderful to splash with her in the waves, but they didn’t even hear her. They were playing ball with beach boys and that wasn’t what Anna Hibiscus wanted to do, either.

She asked her girl cousins if they would like to go play in the waves, but Clarity, Joy, and Common Sense said they were messing with their phones and were “too big now for playing.” Anna Hibiscus didn’t want to hear “too big,” so she stomped away to watch the laughing waves some more.

Mama was braiding hair. Auntie Joli was working beneath an umbrella. Auntie Grace was cooking corn. Papa was standing by a boat, deep in conversation and everybody knows that men don’t stop talking. Even Grandmother and Grandfather were busy asleep beneath their newspapers.

Anna Hibiscus looked at the waves again. She wanted to splash in them. They wanted to splash with her, too. They were laughing and dancing. She started laughing, too.

And then Anna Hibiscus jumped….

It’s been a long and difficult winter. On many occasions, I’ll bet you dreamed of tropical things. So maybe now’s the time to put sand between your toes, the sound of ocean in your ears, and Splash, Anna Hibiscus! in your hands.

If you can’t tell by looking at the cover of this cute book, there’s a lot of joy in the story of a little girl who just wants to play in the water. Author Atinuke and illustrator Lauren Tobia, in fact, make this one of the happiest books you’ll ever read to your children: there’s no pouting, no whining, just glee in what lies beyond the sand.

Just one caveat: careful parents of three-to-seven-year-olds might want to have a “don’t go in the water alone” talk while reading this book. Do that, then immerse yourselves in the delight of this adorable story. For both of you, Splash, Anna Hibiscus! is a book you’ll look at again and again.

Khalil Gibran Muhammad Will Be Speaker at UT’s Distinguished Scholar Lecture

The Sojourner’s Truth  March 19, 2014

Special to The Truth

The School for Interdisciplinary Studies at the University of Toledo will hold its second annual Distinguished Scholar lecture Tuesday, March 25 at 7:00 in the McQuade Law Auditorium.

Khalil Gibran Muhammad, Ph.D, author of The Condemnation of Blackness: Race, Criminality, and the Making of Modern America (Harvard 2010), will speak on contemporary issues of race and criminal law. Muhammad, formerly a professor of history at Indiana University, was appointed director of the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture at the New York Public Library in 2010.

Muhammad’s book is described by Aldon D. Morris as “A dazzling study that illuminates a great deal about the social construction of black criminality. Muhammad does a superb job of explicating the role that social scientists, journalists, and reformers played in creating the idea of the black criminal and sustaining racial inequality. This important book is a vital contribution to our understanding of the role of racism in American society.” David Roediger calls it “A brilliant, critically important study.”

Muhammad is currently working on a book titled, Disappearing Acts: The End of White Criminality in the Age of Jim Crow, a follow-up to his first influential historical treatment of race and criminality.

When appointed director of the Schomburg Center in 2010, Muhammad said, “I treasure this opportunity to wed my passion for African-American history with my commitment to scholarship. I am committed to promoting the voice of Black people as they have engaged in the most significant issues of our times. What matters to me is that they and people of the African Diaspora are able to articulate why their humanity matters, to show and showcase their contributions to the world, and to have in a sense a history that is validated and respected and made meaningful to humanity at large.”

Since taking on the directorship of the Schomburg Center, Muhammad has become a much sought after analyst of such issues as “stand-your-ground” legislation and the current crisis of mass incarceration.
