Unresolved Issues

There have been a number of recent questionable traffic stops of high-profile African-American citizens in Toledo by the Toledo Police Department. Some, like that of community activist Art Jones who was pulled over around the corner from his home, found their way to TPD’s Internal Affairs. Other individuals, perhaps fearing retaliation, have been hesitant to challenge the "reasonable suspicion" claims by local police.

However, Mayor D. Michael Collins, during his campaign, strenuously asserted that the TPD does not engage in racial profiling. This position, of course, became a common in Collins’ relationship with the black community and ultimately led to the resignation of former Police Chief Derrick Digg's.

With Chief of Staff Bob Reinbolt quarterbacking the Collins administration, former Mayor Cary Finkbeiner coaching from the sidelines, and the unions calling the plays, current Police Chief Bill Moton is not even in the huddle or on the field. Collins’ practice is to deal directly with the unions and Deputy Chief Kral on police matters while Moton holds the clipboard and is regularly bypassed.

The classes of the most recent police recruits are nearly all-white at a time when blacks on the force are retaining growing numbers. The newest officers have been described as those who “have little knowledge of the community’s needs and culture, and bring a policing perspective derived from television programming.”

Rather, the community wants transparency and to hear how Collins plans to deal with the issue of racial profiling in Toledo.

Recent research (Alpert et al. 2007) suggests that specific initiatives should be developed and implemented to address the problem and show the administration’s commitment to diversity and fairness in policing. Explicit policies that prohibit racial profiling should be implemented and enforced. Police officers and administration officials should also undergo training and education on the impact of racial profiling in communities of color.

Yet, the buzz from the uppermost floors of One Government Center indicates that plans are in the works to discontinue the Toledo Community Initiative to Reduce Violence (TCIRV), a successful evidence-based program to reduce... continued on page 5
Cotton Comes To Toledo…!

By Lafe Tolliver, Esq

Guest Column

Aaah! Don’t you smell it? You can’t miss it! Come on…take another whiff and what do you smell? It’s cotton, man…cotton! Unmistakable smell.

It is almost cotton time again for Toledo!

People are gearing up for this big shindig again. Flowers…costly dresses…taxes…expensive dance lessons…practice sessions…hours and hours of meetings.

All about cotton! You are probably one of those who did not know that cotton was such a big deal in Toledo. Been that way for many years.

Some black folk in Toledo simply love da smell of cotton. It is clean. It is pure.

It is wholesome. And most of all, it is white! We just loves dat white cotton!

Oh..I could say it over and over again and never tire of saying it: COTTON…COTTON!

I think about cotton practically every day. It makes me feel clean and with cotton by my side, I can do anything because Cotton has taught me how to behave.

I know…I know. It sound silly but it is true. When cotton came into my life it changed everything. Now, everything looks different. You…me…my family…society…my hopes and dreams.

They all have been shaped, and for the good, by cotton.

I owe it all to cotton (slight pause as I wipe a tear from my eye).

Without cotton, I have no way of telling you where I would have ended up.

For you see, cotton gave me direction. It gave me hope when there was none.

It has given me a vision when I was confused.

I don’t know about you but cotton was there for me when no one else was.

So, if I get choked up about talking about cotton, now you know why.

I cannot begin to tell you how cotton came into my life and where it is now taking me.

It is taking me to heights and places that I never dreamed of. Who would have thunk it that something so simple as cotton could have such a power, have such an influence on me that I can hardly sit still when I think about the benefits of good ol’ cotton.

Now, it is close again to that time, when we celebrate the joys and benefits of cotton. I am antsy just thinking about the upcoming events that cotton has spawned that I can hardly wait for tomorrow!

See, that what cotton does for me at least. It has placed me on a firm foundation and the others that celebrate cotton time with me would also agree that cotton is good.

Wait…! Oh no! I am so sorry! I am speaking about something and the whole time I was spelling and misusing the word, ‘cotton’ wrong.

My profuse apologies for this gross error. It just shows you what can happen when you get caught up in the joys and fun of cotton.

What I should have been saying in the place of the word, “cotton” was the word, Cotillion.

Now that makes better sense doesn’t it!

I am rhapsodizing about the upcoming Cotillion where me and my bros and sister’s can don formal tuxes and white formal gowns with long white cotton gloves and we can waltz (what is a waltz come to think of it?) away the night at the Stranahan Theatre and do funny bowing and have our names announced before we enter the dance floor.

Now, don’t be asking me about why black teenagers are running around dressing up looking like white folks from the 1920’s. I am doing what I am told.

I don’t know why we do these funny dances and put on airs as if we are European royalty.

All I know is that this cotton….. sorry, this Cotillion Ball is supposed to make us act whiter and learn manners (don’t black folks have manners?) and think that if we dance waltzes we will be more civilized.

Why don’t you see white families spending hundreds of dollars each year on their kids and preparing them to act like black kids and learning “black” dances and desiring for them to be introduced to “black society”?

Who came up with this cornball idea that if you have black kids mimic white folks dancing and strutting around and putting on airs, that you will be a better person?

The organizers says that this cotton dance, er… I mean this Cotillion Ball is our “introduction to society.” Society….. whose society?

Funny, after last year’s dance night, I didn’t feel any different and no one from their “society” has called me about having lunch with them or giving me a chance at a job.

What is even odder. I still talk the same…think the same… and what makes me mad is that when I left the Hall after the last Ball, two white cops stopped me and frisked me on the ground (my tux was ruined!) saying that I matched the description of a burglary suspect of some local apartments building.

They let me go when the drug dog found no hits and the trunk of my car only turned up some battery jumper cables and an empty gym bag.

Well, so much for that Cotillion. I thought it would my “mojo” to protect me since there I was, a black man in a 180 dollar rented tux with my date in a 300 dollar rented dress and still I was stopped by cops for no reason.

I thought these cops knew about Cotillion Balls and we dancing to funny sounding waltzes. I thought it would make “us” one of “them.”

I was wrong! That wasn’t no Cotillion…it is still just a Cotton Ball after all!

Councilman Ford Lashes out at Republican Vote Suppression Efforts

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

During a news conference this week, Toledo City Councilman Jack Ford condemned Ohio Republicans attempts to change voting practices and asked Toledo-area voters to give their support to petitions designed to amend the state constitution with the Ohio Voter Bill of Rights.

“I’ve watched the legislature for many years, as well as serving for seven, as well as becoming one of the leaders and I have never seen the tactics being used now to curtail the vote,” said Ford as he opened the news conference surrounded by several other councilmen, two area ministers and a prominent local attorney.

“It’s harmful and shameful,” he added, “and a direct sham to prevent votes – targeted towards black voters.”

Ford’s ire was raised by recent state Republicans move to shorten the early voting period – reducing it from 35 to 29 days before an election; new restrictions on absentee balloting and a restriction on the number of state employees who may... continued on page 5 gang-related violence. Other data-driven policing activities are also being dismantled including plans to end the purchase of any additional crime cameras.

In the meantime, the National Science Foundation has funded a California policing research organization with a $1 million grant to develop the first national database on police profiling and inequitable use of force. The project, called “The Justice Database,” provides a universal and scientific way to measure disparities and equity in police activity. More than 40 police departments and law enforcement agencies across the nation currently take part in the project.

Should the Toledo Police Department choose to participate in data driven research like The Justice Database, racial profiling in Toledo will no longer remain underground or be a matter of debate. Instead, the problems with bias and unconstitutional policing, so apparent to African Americans, will be readily and accurately identified for all to see.

Otherwise, this summer could be long, hot and quite interesting.

It also included several 20 minute enrichment sessions which covered topics such as: “Are you doing what God created you to do?” “Communicating in a Spirit of excellence, yet getting your point across!” “It’s already yours, asserting skills that lead to success.” and “Leadership” and “Conflict Resolution”.

Women enjoyed lunch and the opportunity to shop from the local vendors who were on hand. Speakers and facilitators were: Lisa Lawrence, Michelle Klinger, Rhonda Sewell, Brenda McFall, Linda Alvarado, Gretchen DeBacker, Carla Leonard, Alice Quinn and Olivia Holden. Floyd Smith Jr., pastor of Calvary Missionary Baptist Church on Sunday, March 23, 2014 under the theme, “Remaining diligent in God’s purpose,” that was organized by the Pastor’s Aid Committee.

Although Devillbiss is no more, Kerry says, “We both agreed that we wanted to give back so we decided to allow the cheerleading and the track coaches from Scott, work the room and raise funds to offset some of their costs.”

Each year, vendors are given the opportunity to sell merchandise in order to raise money for their organization. This year’s vendors were Carvella Smith and Marvin Gardner who provided set-ups. Proceeds will benefit the Scott High School track team.

Andreania Allen conducted the 50/50 raffle and all proceeds will benefit the cheerleading squad. Shapeme Jeans not only gave a pair of custom made jeans to the winner of the 50/50 raffle but also donated $500 in the Emerys’ name to the Scott High School cheerleading squad.

Other vendors included Celeste Smith of Celestial Treats, Erika Garza along with her dream team, Cynthia Warner and Kim Stafford who sold authentic Mexican tacos, part of the proceeds will benefit the track team and cheerleading squad. Darryl Nash provided alumni gear (t-shirts, hats, scarves, hoodies, etc.) and Albert Earl and Wakeso Peterson captured the entire evening taking pictures.

Music was provided by DJ Kaj Boogie and DJ MPress. The Emery’s also made a special introduction of Ian English who will be running for Judge for the Lucas County Common Pleas Court.

“At the end of the day, this cabaret is about bringing all of us together to have a good time and get in the spirit of giving back to our community,” says Kerry.

The Emerys asked The Truth to thank everyone who attended the 4th Annual Scott/Devillbiss Throwback Cabaret.
Whittington, who describes himself as a vocal impersonator says people have followed him over the years because of his ability to change his voice and imitate different artists. Whittington’s vocal talent and dance moves combined with a touch of humor captivated the audience of predominantly women who swooned and swayed as Whittington sang love songs by Luther Vandross.

By the end of the night, Whittington and Manning had men and women alike not wanting to leave the dance floor.

Whittington currently resides in Lorain OH where he is involved in full-time ministry as a praise and worship leader for his home church, God’s Kingdom of Elyria Ohio, with Pastors Charles and Valerie Howard. Whittington says he’s been coming back to Toledo to perform at the Avenue Bistro for about a month or so and the crowd has increasingly gotten bigger, primarily through word of mouth.

“This particular night was special,” says Whittington. “I’ve seen people I haven’t seen in over 40 years, people from as far back as elementary school.”

C.J. Manning & Company features local artists such as Lady K, Isis Aubrey, Cookie, Whittington and others every Friday.

Whittington’s next performance will be April 11, 2014, two shows 9:30 and 11:00 PM with a short 15 minute set to end the night.
State Rep. Ashford Announces $66,000 for Toledo-area Projects

Initiatives to enhance local medical technology innovation, community development programs

Special to The Truth

This week, State Rep. Michael Ashford (D-Toledo) announced the release of $66,000 in state funding for the Toledo area.

$50,000 will go to The University of Toledo for the development of new technologies that would improve current orthotics products. The funding is part of the Third Frontier Technology Validation and Start-Up Fund, which seeks to assist universities and other research facilities in Ohio to develop new technologies that they can then sell to companies in Ohio. The university will also provide a $50,000 match in funding.

“Investing in medical technology that will be produced in Ohio is a smart financial move for the state,” Ashford said. “As the medical field continues to expand and change, we need to continue to support innovative centers, like the University of Toledo, that are garnering reputations for excellence in the medical technology field.”

The Area Office on Aging of NW Ohio in Toledo was awarded a grant of $16,000 to assist elderly and disabled low-income residents maintain rental housing in the Toledo region. The money will go towards the statewide Resident-Services Coordinator Program initiative, which works with elderly, low-income residents to connect them with services focused on helping tenants maintain independence, decreasing vacancy rates and increasing access to housing for people with disabilities. Data suggests that 1,469 Ohioans will have access to the program as a result of this funding.

“Initiatives like the Resident-Service Coordinator Program provide important services to older Ohioans who want to maintain their independence and need resources to help them do so. This is a common sense initiative that offers opportunities for older Ohioans to stay in their current home and maintain their lifestyle,” said Ashford.

Calvary Church led a spirit filled praise and worship service, immediately followed by the entrance of the honoree, Rev. Smith, Jr. and escort Sister Clara Brown. All in attendance rose to their feet, applauded and cheered as Rev. Smith Jr., entered the sanctuary.

Sister Anne Walker served the mistress of ceremony, and St. Paul Baptist Church presented three choir selections. Sister Ruth Penamon welcomed all guests in attendance, and Pastor Gregory Bennett delivered a tribute to Pastor Smith Jr. The guest speaker, Rev. Willis, the Pastor of St. Paul Baptist Church was introduced by Rev. Mary Jo Brazzel. Deacon Willie Tucker, Jr. shared words of gratitude. Rev. Smith, Jr gave remarks as Rev. Willis closed the service with the benediction.

The theme, “Remaining diligent in God’s purpose,” was taken from Biblical scripture Psalms 37:23. The Pastor’s Aid Committee was organized in 2002 and current members are: Durrell and Mary Burden, Frances Ester, Leonia Lyle, C.J. and Glenda Manning, Robin Marr, Pat McFarland, Charles Meredith, and Deacon Willie Tucker.

“We’re excited because this upcoming Thursday, the City of Toledo will rename the street to Pastor Floyd Smith Street at 12:30pm. Several political officials have presented Rev. Smith with acknowledgments such as United States Representative Marcy Kaptur, State Rep. Michael Ashford, City of Toledo Mayor D. Michael Collins, candidate for judge Jay Feldstein and Toledo City Council members Jack Ford and Larry Sykes,” explained Frances Ester, Pastor’s Aid Overseer.

The anniversary celebration began March 9, 2014 with guest speaker Bishop Duane Tisdale, Pastor of Friendship Baptist Church, and continued on March 16, 2014 with guest speaker Rev. Melvin Barnes, Pastor of Greater Faith Fellowship Church. The final two celebration days are March 29 with a musical celebration at 6:00pm at Calvary Baptist Church and April 4 banquet at the Radisson Hotel. Individuals interested in purchasing banquet tickets can contact the church at 419-242-8379, guest speaker is Bishop J. Delano Ellis of Cleveland and musical performances by Bishop Rance Allen.

Reverend Floyd Smith, Jr. was born in Toledo, Ohio to the late Floyd Sr. and Mary Smith as the eldest of four children and he attended Toledo Public Schools. Rev. Smith Jr. accepted the ministry at age 18 and mentored by Rev. L.H. Newsome, licensed to preach in 1973, ordained in 1982, earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1986 while majoring in Bible and Theology. Rev. Smith Jr. accepted the call to pastor in 1982 at Big Walnut Grove Baptist Church, located in Kentucky before returning to Toledo in 1986. Rev. Smith Jr. served Calvary Baptist Church as Director of Youth Department before becoming pastor in 1989. In addition to serving as Pastor, he’s second Vice President of the NW Ohio Missionary Baptist Association on the local and state level; a recognized instructor for the American Baptist Theological Seminary, Toledo Extension Program, and NW District Congress of Education; and military veteran. Personally, Rev. Smith Jr. is father of Kimberly Yvonne, Floyd III, Brandon, and Beverly Michelle.
Your second home is a grand one.

It’s much bigger than the house you live in during the week. No, your second home has huge windows to let in the light, fine linens, and it’s usually filled with music. The furniture might be sparse, the chairs hard and the temperature uncomfortable, but there’s always joy there.

Church is like that for many people. But, as you’ll see in Writing God’s Obituary by Anthony B. Pinn, church is just a building to others.

Anthony Pinn was a “miracle baby.”

Doctors had warned his mother not to have another child. She’d already lost one son and was sickly herself (as was Pinn’s father), but Pinn was healthy when he was born into their Buffalo, New York family.

Growing up in a mostly blue-collar neighborhood, Pinn went to church every Sunday with his mother. Her father was a deacon in a small Baptist church, and he made sure Pinn behaved during service and knew God. The church was a comfort to Pinn—so much so, that at around age 12, he told his minister that he wanted to be a preacher, too.

His church leaders seized that childhood wish, and began to teach the boy to preach and minister to a congregation. One of them became somewhat of a mentor and father figure to Pinn, whose own father had left the family. Though Pinn “didn’t enjoy going to Sunday school” and he didn’t like school in general, he says he loved his church and he embraced his future role in its leadership.

And yet, there were things he didn’t like about it: the “fine art of… shunning,” for instance, sexism and homophobia. That bothered him and his faith began to crack.

Still, he stuck with it. He graduated from high school and entered college to study sociology and religion. He learned about other religious traditions and that “The Bible didn’t matter in the same way” at college that it did in high school. He began to listen to worldly music, and started to “unlearn” his fear of life.

“We are screwed-up animals, self-aware, communicative, and evolving,” he says, which didn’t mesh with the wrathful God of his childhood. And so, while studying divinity at Harvard University, he kept asking one question: “Does God exist?”

For author and humanist Anthony B. Pinn, the answer is personally “no” and in this controversial-but-thought-provoking memoir, he explains how he came to that conclusion.

But Writing God’s Obituary isn’t just about religion. Pinn recalls his parents and grandparents with warmth and love, telling their stories and savoring the things they taught him. Those reflections make his journey all the more poignant; we can sense pain here sometimes, and an emptiness for what was never experienced and what might have been.

I liked this book, but beware before you pick it up. It may make you fearful, it might make you angry or prayerful, but if you’ve ever wrestled with issues of faith, Writing God’s Obituary may be a book to bring home.

Scott/DeVilbiss Throwback Cabaret

By Carla Yvette

What started out as pillow talk between husband and wife, Willie and Kerry Emery, reminiscing about their high school days and how much they loved their schools, DeVilbiss and Scott, has resulted in the highly successful, always anticipated, Scott/DeVilbiss Throwback Cabaret.

Kerry says, “I always felt that I had the best experience in high school and Willie felt the same way, so I suggested to him that we have a cabaret to bring our high schools together for a night of fun and fellowship.”

Willie, a 1989 graduate of DeVilbiss, played football and was on the wrestling team. Kerry, a 1987 graduate of Scott, says of herself, “I was the class clown, period!”

By Carla Yvette

Jazz musician and house band, C.J. Manning, featured Leon Whittington March 14 at the Avenue Bistro for a night of pure entertainment. What should have easily been a ticketed event is Toledo’s best kept secret and free of charge as a regular part of Friday nights at the Avenue Bistro.

Then, as if teleported to a venue on the Las Vegas strip, the audience was treated to performances from Stevie Wonder, Elvis Presley, Luther Vandross and Jackie Wilson, personified through the talented impersonations of Toledoan Leon Whittington.

Singing since the age of seven, Whittington once again joins C.J. Manning for two shows every third Friday. Says Whittington, “We sang together about 15 years ago right here at the Avenue Bistro.”

Since then, Whittington has traveled the world performing in places such as China, Japan, the Bahamas...
