Hitting the Right Target

... Once, we thought that segregation and racism were the same thing, and that, when segregation was done away with, racism would be done away with too.

- Julian Bond

If nothing else, the alleged racist comments made by Los Angeles Clippers owner Donald Sterling to girlfriend V. Stiviano will tell whether the African-American community has a pulse. Last week, the celebrity news organization TMZ posted a recording online in which a male voice, purportedly Sterling's, argues with Stiviano over an Instagram photo of her with Magic Johnson. In the conversation, Sterling also told his girlfriend not to bring blacks to "his games."

How should a submissive black community that has a recent history of accepting injustices without protest, respond?

"Commissioner Adam Silver is going to need to be able to do something about this," says public relations professional B. J. Fischer of Thread Marketing. "Sterling has been saying a lot of this despicable stuff for a long time so he can't just sanitize this by saying 'I misspoke' because it appears to be an ongoing trend that includes a housing discrimination suit where he had to pay a $2.8 or so million dollar judgment. With icons speaking out like Magic Johnson, one of the 20 most popular people in the country, and Michael Jordan, a guy who never wanted to get in the middle of controversy, this won't go away. There are going to be protests," adds Fischer.

So far, player protests, like the Clippers' players decision to wear their warm-ups inside out to conceal the Clippers' logo, have been subtle. The National Basketball Association, a league where nearly 80 percent of the players and a sizable proportion of the fans are black, may still feel pressured to sanction or even require Sterling to sell his team.

Yet activists such as Cynthia McKinney, outspoken former Congresswoman and Green Party presidential candidate, suggest more drastic measures. "... the likes of this Clippers owner (and others) practice their racism in private—but thanks to his girlfriend, it's all public! Notice that Sterling talks about how blacks and Mexicans feel about each other, which is exactly the way the divide and conquer game is orchestrated. The owner doesn't want black people at his games?? Good, that includes players, coaches, and those who stand in solidarity with them," McKinney exclaims.

However, we could be missing the point. Targeting Donald Sterling or his NBA business investment through protests, boycotts or the withdrawal of financial support by major corporate sponsors certainly provides the emotional satisfaction that comes with revenge. Yet it is unlikely that responding to Sterling will do much to erase contemporary racism, suggests Duke University professor Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, PhD:

"The remarks by Mr. Sterling are reprehensible and in keeping with his long history of anti-black sentiment and discrimination against people of

So What's Up With Jack ... !!

Guest Column

Just when you felt it was safe to go back into the water, the Shark is seen swimming out away from the shore line.

Back and forth, so swims the Shark. Always showing his dorsal fin. Always making sure that you know that it is there. Waiting. Hoping. Hoping that you will make a fatal step and go into the water and become his lunch or early dinner.

The Shark. Always preening. Always sharpening his teeth in anticipation for a quick meal or a fast snack.

The Shark loves catching a possible wader or swimmer off guard. Someone who is enjoying the surf without being on the lookout for that tell-tale sign of the Shark's ominous dorsal fin.

The Shark takes great joy in swimming beneath the surface trying to find that errant surfer or rafter who for the joys of swimming, has not taken the effort to know that there is always danger in the water...the waters of the Shark.

The Shark is designed for a swift hit and attack and is equipped with razor-edged teeth that he can quickly render his catch helpless.

The Shark has evolved over thousands of years to be an efficient and ruthless machine of efficiency when it comes to quickly dispatching his helpless prey.

Now. In Toledo. There has been a Shark sighting. One would think that in these relatively calm political waters, that a Shark sighting would be a mirage.

A mistake. A creation of one's over stimulated imagination.

After all, why would a Shark want to cruise the political waters in Toledo unless there was a prime succulent morsel of prey that was standing in the waters and enjoying a day on the beach.

The Shark saw the prey on the beach and was wondering and hoping that the prey would venture a little too close to the waters and maybe, just maybe would venture in a few feet or more.

The Shark has no friends. Just acquaintances. Just people who could or would do the bidding of the Shark because the Shark operates alone. He strikes alone. He eats alone. He patrols the unguarded beaches alone.

In that loneliness, the Shark develops no conscience. It does not factor in what is good or what is bad. Food is food. Wherever and however it is found.

In that solitary life, the Shark makes no provision for what is just and unjust.

In being a loner, the Shark has tunnel vision for he only sees what his primitive mind shows him and that is: Is that a meal for me?

The Shark does not need to justify his conduct to others. He lets others talk about him or he let others exploit the Shark myth so as to cause others to shudder and run from the Shark.

That is what the Shark loves. He wants to inspire fear and trepidation in the onlookers on the beach when they see the Shark approach his victim.

The Shark wants the reputation that all is lost when he has his eyes on you and that there is no escape.

The Shark seemingly involuntarily grins when he attacks because he is happy at what he does and the look of shock on the victim face when he hits, makes it worth it all...assuming the victim even has a chance to see the Shark hit its mark.

Who is the Shark you say in Toledo?

Jack Ford is back in the waters.... the political waters and he has apparently set his political teeth on biting and devouring State Senator Edna Brown.

The word is out via Blade Columnist Keith Burris who is apparently the Shark's best mouthpiece that Jack Ford wants Edna's job in Columbus.

The Shark has convinced himself via the reporting of Keith Burris that Edna is simply shark bait and not state senator material and he wants to clamp down and end the impressive political career of Edna.

Oh sure. The Shark would raise some spurious issues that may give the impression that Edna is not worthy of being a state senator and that the Shark...a/k/a Jack Ford is because The Shark has been to Columbus before and his shark-like appetites and workings are already known around the Capitol.

Yeah. The Shark would try to convince you that if you feed the Shark you will be safe and protected and by voting for the Shark, all would be well in northwest Ohio.

The Shark wants you to push Edna into the water so the Shark can circle around her and inflict a mortal political wound on Edna.

Is the Shark saying that if you sacrifice Edna to him that you will be OK and that the Shark's appetite would be satiated for a time?

If you are a shark watcher, tell this Shark that your harpoon (your vote) will be on the lookout for this particular Shark and that you will not throw Edna into the shark-infested waters.

Toledoans, it is Shark Watch Time. Get your harpoons ready.

Tell the Shark...go ahead and make my day.

Tanzanian Archbishop to Visit Diocese of Toledo

Special to The Truth

Archbishop Paul R. Ruzoka of Tabora, Tanzania, is to visit the Diocese of Toledo in May to bring awareness of atrocities committed against albino children in his country.

Archbishop Ruzoka is to attend a fund-raising event, "An East African Tragedy: Saving Lives — Keeping them Safe" that the Universal Initiative Foundation is sponsoring May 13 at The Pinnacle in Maumee. The event begins at 5:30 p.m. with a reception followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. and comments by prominent physicians and University of Toledo award-winning missionary doctors Richard Paat and S. Amjad Hussain. The evening also includes silent and live auctions and a door prize of an iPad.

Archbishop Ruzoka is working in conjunction with the Universal Initiative Foundation, a local nonprofit founded by Don and Gisela Stiles, members of Toledo St. Patrick of Heatherdowns. The couple served as missionaries and consultants to the archbishop in 2010 and has worked to shed light on the violence in Tanzania since returning to the United States.

Since 2007, official reports indicate 290 people with albinism have been brutally attacked and their body parts cut off and sold to witch doctors in Tanzania and other parts of Africa. Leaders in the albinism community believe the actual number of attacks is even higher.

The violence is driven by local belief that the body parts of albinos possess magical powers capable of bringing riches if used in potions produced by witch doctors. Another superstition believes that sex with albino women and girls can cure HIV/AIDS, resulting in the rape of albino victims.

The Universal Initiative Foundation proposes to build a self-sustaining, secure facility for 600 children and young adults on five acres of land donated by the parish of Cheyo, one of 22 parishes under the leadership of Archbishop Ruzoka. The facility is to provide albino residents as well as non-affected orphans a secure home with needed medical, educational and vocational opportunities. Catholic sisters and lay employees are to staff the facility on a full-time basis.

Initial funding is needed for water and energy installations, housing for staff, dormitories, kitchen and dining facilities, classrooms and a small dispensary to house, educate and care for 60 children. Additional funding will be needed to expand to eventually accommodate 600 children and young adults.

Tickets are $50 per person or $360 for a table of eight and may be purchased by contacting Don Stiles at uif.stiles@gmail.com or 419-491-1203. For more information about the Universal Initiative Foundation, visit www.universalif.org.

The Diocese of Toledo, established April 15, 1910 encompasses 8222 square miles in a mixture of urban and rural areas that spans 19 counties across Northwest, serving 319,189 Catholics in 124 parishes. The diocese includes Allen, Crawford, Defiance, Erie, Fulton, Hancock, Henry, Huron, Lucas, Ottawa, Paulding, Putnam, Richland, Sandusky, Seneca, Van Wert, Williams, Wood and Wyandot counties.

On Sunday, March 30, 2014, classical music filled the air as the Toledo Club and the Maumee Bay Club of the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. (NANBPWC, Inc.) joined in a partnership to sponsor the Vocal Arts Competition for Emerging Artists. The program was held at the St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church, Rev. James H. Willis, Sr., pastor.

The Vocal Arts Competition for Emerging Artists is the signature program of the NANBPWC, Inc. established in 1982 under the leadership of Past National President Mary E. Singletary. The purpose was to provide a competitive arena for talented young vocal artists of African American heritage to showcase and demonstrate their artistic abilities in classical vocal performance as well as assist them with music scholarships. Scholarships are awarded on the National Level as follows: $3000.00 for First Place, $2000.00 for Second Place, $1000.00 for Third Place and $300.00 for remaining contestants.

This year's competition presented Errin Duane Brooks, a tenor who earned a master's of music degree from Bowling Green State University in 2011. Brooks studied under voice teacher Christopher Scholl. He presently is a member of the Chicago Opera Theater/Chicago College of Performing Arts young artist/diploma member.

Brooks performed selections from a repertoire consisting of an Aria from a major opera, an Oratorio Cantata, a German Lied, a French Melodie and a Negro Spiritual or work by an African-American composer. His accompanist was Heidi Fern Clausius who attended graduate school at Bowling Green State University as a collaborative Piano Major. The Interlude Entertainment was

Brooks was adjudicated by Clarence Smith, and Deborah Carlisle, who are renown in the Toledo area for their mu-

The Hippest Trip in America: Soul Train and the Evolution of Culture & Style by Nelson George

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

They should have called you Super-Fly.

Yep, that's what you were, dancing in front of your TV every Saturday, spinning on the carpet and waving your arms around until you got yelled at for "gonna break something." But you were the flyest of fly. The only thing you were going to bust was a move, just like on Soul Train. And in The Hippest Trip in America by Nelson George, you'll read about the iconic TV program that you never, ever missed.

Everyone knew that Don Cornelius had "ambition;" he was a car salesman, policeman and insurance agent before his "foghorn voice" led him to radio in 1966. He made the transition to TV two years later and he soon realized there was a need for a "black" TV show. He presented the idea, then found major corporate sponsorship, and on October 2, 1971, Soul Train appeared locally in Chicago.

The show was "overnight hot" but Cornelius knew there was more to this idea. With another sponsor on-board for a nationwide launch, Cornelius pitched the show to the networks, but they turned it down. He decided to syndicate Soul Train and moved the show to Los Angeles.

Though the music was always the focus of Soul Train, Cornelius knew that the dancers (in particular, those in the Soul Train line) were what brought viewers back.

In L.A., scouts kept their eyes open for promising teens who could dance, often from three main area clubs. Dancers performed for free and were fed chicken dinners, but the real appeal of being a Soul Train dancer was fame and the opportunity for a career in show biz. It seemed as though every regular viewer wanted to be a Soul Train regular, too.

But as much as Cornelius controlled his show (and, to a certain extent, his dancers), he couldn't control what happened culturally. Early-90s fashions confounded him, music videos concerned him, and gangsta rap made him uncomfortable. And so, though the show should continue for another 13 years, Cornelius announced in 1993 that he'd step down as Soul Train host – a move that arguably meant "the show was over."

From its first pages and throughout, the word "joy" crops up often in The Hippest Trip in America, and for good reason: it was everywhere in the show and even more so in this book.

I took great joy, in fact, in seeing how author Nelson George sent me to the internet. His descriptions of what happened through the years on Soul Train made me want to see, too, and there are plenty of clips online. I also liked the interviews with former dancers and the cultural frame-of-reference included here, and the history of the show – along with little-known tidbits – made this a great (and surprisingly fast-paced) read filled with reminiscing, "love, peace, and soul."

Get out your bell-bottoms and your best dancin' shoes, have a good internet connection, and get ready. For you, The Hippest Trip in America is a book you'll want to bust out and find.

color. However, it is a horrible mistake to assume Mr. Sterling is an example of the typical racism that permeates America today. For every Mr. Sterling, there are millions of good-intentioned whites who rely on what I have labeled in my work as color-blind racism to justify the contemporary racial order of things. It is their 'killing me softly' approach, which explains black and brown poverty, high unemployment and higher incarceration rates as the product of their culture or due to seemingly non-racial market dynamics, that prevents us from moving forward in the race terrain. Albeit we must vigorously censor Mr. Sterling as well as Mr. [Cliven] Bundy (the old-fashioned racist Nevada rancher), the bulk of our attention and efforts must be dedicated against the "racism without racists" that undergirds racial profiling in stores, in the labor and housing markets, in schools and in the streets. Jim Crow racism is all but dead, but normative, seemingly civilized racism with its compassionate conservative undertone is the new racial monster we must work hard to defeat."

Like Bonilla-Silva, I am more insulted by being treated as a n than being called one. To fight only against obvious outrageous racist quotes and private conversations while remaining nonresponsive to the indignities manifested in disparities in employment, education, wealth and the criminal justice system is what Kunjunfu calls the n spirit.

Racism needs to be challenged everywhere. In failing to do so, we help to preserve racist attitudes and inequality.

now graces everything she touches. After outgrowing her former space and constantly being faced with the difficulties that come with sharing a space, Steward says she knew she had to trust God.

She did, and things began to happen.

Says Steward of her new location, "I didn't have to look far, I knew it was mine the first time I saw it, even the colors were already here."

Her prayers weren't without old fashioned hard work though. Steward says she had a vision for what she wanted and with the help of a great handy man and dedicated "sistahs" who understood her vision, they were able to turn her space into the "Fabulous" studio it is today.

Now that she has her own studio, Steward says she's able to offer classes six days a week and added that Sunday will always be her day of rest. For now she says she will maintain her contract with TPS, continuing to hold free classes every Monday night at Scott High School until June. Steward says, "I can now create more without all the restrictions and time restraints I had sharing a space and I'm able to offer more diverse classes."

Adding to the already fun and well-attended line up of classes, Fabulously Fit will now offer mini trampoline (rebounding) and boxing. There will also be a kids club starting in May with classes being offered for boys and girls ages eight-13 who will have access to the same equipment as the adults.

A women's only facility, Steward says the youth are the only males allowed. Currently running at 50+ members, Steward says she's looking forward to doubling that number.

Negro Business and Professional Women's Club Hosts Mother-Daughter Luncheon

Sojourner's Truth Staff

On April 26, the Toledo Club, National Association of Negro Business & Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. (NANBPWC) hosted its 2014 annual Mother-Daughter Luncheon at the Inverness Country Club.

Debutantes and mothers enjoyed a luncheon sponsored by ProMedi-ca Health System. The purpose of the luncheon was to allow each debutante to show her appreciation to her mother and present her with a red rose. NANBPWC club members were also in attendance.

One of the repeated themes the debutantes expressed was that they may not have always been grateful and, at times, hard to supervise. Plenty of tissue was on hand for the debutantes as they spoke.

The Cotillion will be held on May 24, 2014 at the Great Hall of the Stranahan Theater. This week, as a preliminary event, the debutantes will attend Talent Night on May 19. The Talent Night will earn the debutantes their final points before the Ball.

The debbs and mothers were welcomed by Denise Black Poon, club president and by Wilma Brown, Cotillion chairman. Clara Brank, club chaplain, gave the invocation.
