Thoughts of Ernestine Weathers: 1957 - 2014

By Rhonda B. Sewell
Special to The Truth

Back in 1970, the poet Mari Evans penned the moving poem titled I Am A Black Woman. Within the poem are several lines that so remind me of the late Ernestine “Stina” Weathers (1957-2014).

Stina would have only been 13 at the time Evans wrote these moving lines of her poem, but she did just that. She opened doors for future reporters, journalists, producers and behind the scenes staff members in both the television news and print media.

When I was a tender 21-year-old starting out my career as a journalist at The Blade newspaper, it was Stina who befriended me as a more established and seasoned media professional. Whenever we spoke in person or on the phone, Stina was uplifting and supportive and nurtured me throughout my media career.

As I sat inside the House of Day Funeral Home recently at her home-going services, my prayer was that Stina in the afterlife would be made fully aware of how much we all thought of her, how meaningful and impactful her life was to all of us in the media arena, and more importantly, that her legacy would live on forever.

We have lost a beautiful angel who opened doors for many in the media business. Our good friend Ernestine “Stina” Weathers has gone home to Glory. We will remember the good times, honor her legacy, and recall that beautiful smile. Far too young to leave us, but God probably needed her for some important Community Affairs issues in Heaven.

Thank you Stina for your positive energy, we will miss you and are already working to name a scholarship in your memory because we know that’s what you would want from us! – Rhonda Sewell

I called upon a few friends to leave their own personal testimonies for Ernestine “Stina” Weathers and here’s what they shared:

Jala Anderson McKee – Former WTVG 13abc anchor “Stina was my safe place while working at WTVG. You could hide away in her office for a short period of time and talk about how you “really” felt. She was a quiet storm and helped so many of us mold our careers. She was a beautiful songstress at my wedding. Oh Stina, God got a real angel!”

Come On … Let’s All Help Out Larry

By Lafe Tolliver, Esq
Guest Column

Well, after the recent Blade article exposing the fact that Toledo City Councilman Larry Sykes did not have a front plate on his car and he was yelling profiling for what he considered to be an improper stop, I am still wiping coconut cream pie off of my face.

Why? I came out with an earlier column in support of Larry for complaining about the stop and gave some legal advice to others who may have been similarly stopped due to possible racial motivation by the cops.

Now, we learn that due to Larry not having a front plate on the car – which is a minor traffic law violation – and that they could not read his partially obscured rear license plate tag, the councilman was pulled over.

What can I now say but in a slow monotone voice: Larry…Larry…Larry.

So, I am trying to make the best response possible under these trying circumstances and have come up with the following plans to save face:

I am trying to organize a perch/whiting fish fry for Larry so that when he must renew his plates, he will have enough money to buy two plates, one for the front of the car and one for the back of the car.

It will be a simple undertaking with fried fish, cup of cole slaw, rolls with butter, baked beans or collard greens and a grape or orange soda. Nothing fancy. Just simple tasty food.

I figure the dinner price at $8.95 but if Larry agrees to sign the Styrofoam carry out containers with the moniker: Larry Sykes…aka: Mr. Driving While Black, I can sell each signed box for $13.95. This is destined to be a collector’s item!

I also called folks who have large homes with huge yards and asked them to donate their space for a “BUY A PLATE FOR LARRY!” event, and even then, all of the homeowners starting copping out about how they needed to spray their grass for weeds or they were going to be out of town or they were about to do some serious landscaping.

So, my next act of charity for Larry was to inquire about an educational course that, if completed, would allow Larry to remove this traffic charge (no front plates on a car) from his driving record.

It is a national and well-respected course that is held twice a year in Akron and is an intensive one-day course with 10 hours of instruction devoted to the following topics:

7 a.m. to 8:00 a.m.: HOW TO KNOW THAT MY CAR ONLY HAS ONE LICENSE PLATE ON IT, (taught by the Akron Ability Center for the Blind).

8:00 a.m. to 9 a.m. Break time and heart breaking testimonials by other “one plate only” graduates of the course who were ostensibly stopped due to profiling by their local police.

The course cost is $1,050.00 but it is a bargain because it changes lives and can possibly save many a motorist from being entangled in a no-win roadside argument with an overzealous cop.

Part of the funds raised by this fish fry would also go towards Larry “One Plate” Sykes attending this valuable and educational seminar.

So, it you can donate a space for this fish fry or want to assist in frying the fish or cooking the greens or simply just be there to show support for Larry, call: What Now Larry! (942-866-9527).

Show Larry that you care…. Call now! Operators are standing by 24/7.

THANK YOU Stina for all you did. I got to know her well during our Leadership Toledo year. I was in church with her in choir for a while too. So blessed to have known her. Her voice was beautiful, and she cared about humanity. She especially wanted media professionals to succeed, survive and excel. Wow! Another angel has gone home to God."

Stina’s smile could brighten a room and her singing voice could bring you chills. She was always there to encourage others when they needed it the most. She will be missed. I hid in her office plenty of times too! She was a wonderful person and I’m so glad she’s at peace."

Kristian Brown – WTVG 13abc anchor

My memories of Stina and how she helped the Northwest Ohio Black Media Association and me (NOBMA founder) during my time in Toledo are too numerous to state. Stina was not only a valuable person to know in the local media, but also a friend. I remember when NOBMA gave her an award for her work at WTVG and in the community, and she felt like she didn’t deserve it. I can assure you because of her guidance, leadership and willingness to care, she did deserve it and then some."

The University of Toledo National Youth Sports Program

Special to The Truth

For the last 45 years, the National Youth Sports Program (NYSP) has provided income eligible youth, between the ages of nine and 16, educational and recreational opportunities to enhance their self-image and teach the value of communication, learn lifetime leisure pursuits and to develop peer refusal skills and learn healthy nutrition and health behaviors.

This program serves as a model for fair play and contributes to the development of life skills that are necessary for success in a competitive society. With generous donations from community partners, our program is able to provide its participants with a FREE summer program that includes a medical exam, transportation, daily sports instruction i.e. basketball and track, an alcohol and other drug awareness education, general education, personal nutrition, self-esteem, etc., t-shirts and a daily USDA approved hot lunch.

The success of our youth depends on us; a successful future depends on our youth. In 2004, the University of Toledo’s National Youth Sports Program received Silvio O. Conte Award of Excellence recognizing UT’s NYSP as the best program in the Nation for 2004. That was the second year in a row that the UT NYSP won this award. The UT NYSP serves as a model program for other universities across the United States.

Those who have taken active roles in the program have been sensitive to the needs of our participants. The staff consists of parents, principals, teachers, social workers, college students, UT student athletes, and other community and university leaders. The University of Toledo boasts an excellent participant-staff ratio of 10 to 1. Despite the time commitment and financial investment that come with the territory, more than 25 million people nationwide have opted to start a microbusiness – a company with five or fewer employees.

One in every 10 Americans works in a microbusiness, according to the Sam’s Club/Gallup Microbusiness Tracker, a quarterly survey of more than 850 microbusiness owners that provides insights into their economic and emotional concerns. The Sam’s Club survey indicates that women are opening 46 percent of today’s Main Street businesses – from restaurants to daycare centers – far greater than the number of women owned businesses that are over 20 years old.

“I’ve never worked harder in my life or felt more rewarded,” says Molly Beasley of Fairhope, Alabama, owner of Give a Dog a Bone, a Do-It-Yourself dog washing company. “This business is my passion. There’s a lot of satisfaction in knowing you are providing a valuable, affordable service in your community.”

After more than two years working 20 to 40 hours a week at a DIY dog wash in California, Beasley relocated to Alabama and found herself dreaming about opening her own dog wash. Eventually, she decided the timing was right to take the entrepreneurial leap and she hasn’t looked back. Since launching Give a Dog a Bone in 2012, Beasley caters to customers Monday through Sunday and spends her downtime thinking about ways to grow the bottom line.

Indeed, growth in microbusinesses has been driven largely by high personal sacrifice yet overall job satisfaction, according to the survey:

- Over 60 percent of microbusiness owners have financed their businesses from personal savings and nearly as many (55 percent) say having access to cash reserves is a major issue.
- One in three microbusiness owners (31 percent) depend more on second jobs for their personal income than on the business they launched.
- Yet 69 percent of microbusiness owners feel they have the ideal job.

Amidst these findings, one question bubbles to the surface – how can entrepreneurs maintain their passion while dealing with long hours and increasing budget demands? Beasley provides some tips:

- Embrace Perspective: No matter how much you love your company, there will be days when balancing the books creates anxiety. Remind yourself what fueled you to launch your business.
- Find Balance: Sometimes it might seem impossible to relax, but devoting even 60 minutes weekly to non-business related activities will help you recharge.
- Become Resourceful: Find ways to save money, time and energy. Try multitasking, such as purchasing business supplies while waiting for a prescription to be filled, or patronizing retailers with special early shopping hours for business owners. Consider streamlining home expenses by eliminating cable or cooking at home.
- Make Changes: Stay motivated by experimenting with new methods and tools. Attending trainings or online webinars about your industry can help re-ignite your creativity and even lead to business growth.

For more insights from the Sam’s Club/Microbusiness Tracker, visit www.samsclub.com/newsroom.

In a recovering economy, it’s no surprise microbusinesses are growing. For many, the job satisfaction is worth the time and financial investments.

Record Number of Students Apply for EdChoice Scholarships

Families can still apply during second application window that closes July 31

A record number of students submitted applications for Ohio’s EdChoice scholarships during the first application window that closed May 9. Families can continue to apply now for the scholarships during the second application window, which is open through July 31.

According to the Ohio Department of Education, 17,691 students applied for an EdChoice school-based scholarship and 3,177 students applied for an EdChoice income-based scholarship in the first window.

A comparison of this year and last year’s EdChoice application numbers for the first window shows an increase of more than 4,000 applications this year (20,868 vs 16,847). This is thanks in large part to the availability of the new income-based scholarships.

The EdChoice income-based scholarship program was signed into law last June as part of the state budget as an expansion to the EdChoice school-based program. It made scholarships available to Ohio’s low-income and middle class families from any school district to send their children to the private school of their choice. This year, incoming kindergarten and first grade students are eligible to apply for the scholarships worth up to $4,250.

Created in 2005, the EdChoice school-based scholarship program provides scholarships worth up to $5,000 to students who are attending, entering or assigned to the state’s lowest-rated public schools to be used toward tuition at the participating private school of their choice.

The department also reported that 7,203 applications were received for the Cleveland Scholarship and Tutoring Program, and 3,291 students applied for the Jon Peterson Special Needs Scholarship Program.

“School Choice Ohio is here to help families learn about all their education options, including the state’s scholarship programs,” said School Choice Ohio Senior Director of Programs Sarah Pechan-Driver. “We have several school choice counselors on staff who help parents navigate what can be an overwhelming maze of options, and we couldn’t be happier to hear that so many families are finding a great school that is a great fit for their child.”

Those with questions about Ohio’s scholarship programs or those looking for more information about all of the state’s education options are encouraged to contact School Choice Ohio at 1-800-673-5876 or visit the organization’s website at www.scohio.org.

School Choice Ohio is the only statewide organization that educates parents on their education options and advocates for the expansion of quality options for every child.

This Small Business Week: Don’t Neglect Your Online Presence

Special to The Truth

If you own a small business, you know that online visibility is one of the keys to success. And these days, harnessing the Web is crucial to any marketing plan.

“While most small business owners know they need a strong Web presence, many of them are not taking enough action to build and maintain it,” says Tim Carroll, Vice President of Small Business Engagement at Deluxe Corp., a provider of marketing services and products for small businesses.

In fact, of those small business owners who put a high level of importance on Web presence, 70 percent spend less than one hour a week maintaining it, according to a new Deluxe study. In contrast, only 1.2 percent spend 10 or more hours each week on their Web maintenance.

National Small Business Week, May 12-16, is the perfect time to learn how to use the Internet to keep your business top of mind with prospective customers. And Carroll offers some top tips for maximizing your company’s presence online.

• Interact: Since current and prospective consumers use social media, you can’t neglect this marketing approach. Social media marketing isn’t just about gaining followers. It becomes a vehicle for sharing your company’s message, as well as driving traffic to your website. This will ultimately help generate new customers and referrals.

Don’t be afraid to use Twitter, Facebook and other social media sites to ask customers for feedback and show your personality. Use calls to action to acquire new followers, engage them further and encourage reviews of your services.

• Website: “Today, a business without a website is a business without a face,” says Carroll. “A clean, easy-to-navigate, and mobile-friendly online presence is one your customers will remember.”

Unfortunately, less than a third of small business owners think they are proficient or extremely proficient at maintaining their individual company websites, which is why many seek outside help developing a site and building content.

Many small businesses turn to consultants or social marketing services for help with developing and executing a social media strategy. When effective, these efforts will place a brand in front of its target audience. Small business owners should look for a service that also tracks results in order to gain insight into how its customers engage online.

• Website: “Today, a business without a website is a business without a face,” says Carroll. “A clean, easy-to-navigate, and mobile-friendly online presence is one your customers will remember.”

Unfortunately, less than a third of small business owners think they are proficient or extremely proficient at maintaining their individual company websites, which is why many seek outside help developing a site and building content.

• Search engines: With 91 percent of Internet users utilizing search engines, according to the Deluxe commissioned study, search engine optimization can be your key to better visibility online. After all, a website is hardly useful if no one can find it.

Additionally, consider search engine marketing services to help your online advertising and to make use of local searches by more effectively targeting your customer audience.

• Email marketing: Small business email marketing is the centerpiece of any effort to stay in touch with existing customers, while reaching out and finding new ones. Use it to promote new items and offer special discounts to loyal customers or to simply keep in touch.

More tips, strategies and information about marketing your business online can be found at www.Deluxe.com.

Small business owners know they need to be online. It just takes commitment and the right tools to capitalize on the potential.

Everybody knows what you did.

It didn’t take long for word to get around, actually; you can tell by the smirks and the lack of eye-contact in the hall. It was a colossal error, one that cost the company more than you care to think about. And it was all your fault.

How can you ever bounce back from something like this? Will it end your career? Twenty-five leading women say no – and you’ll find out why in the new book Mistakes I Made at Work, edited by Jessica Bacal.

It’s a platitude everybody’s heard before: learn from your mistakes. Embrace them, we’re told, and grow from them. But Jessica Bacal wondered how, with a culture that demands perfection from women and a reluctance to discuss such things, we can ever learn anything from our errors?

She contacted influential women from several walks of life, and asked them about their mistakes, what they learned, and how they grew from it.

Laurel Touby, founder of Media-bistro.com, learned the hard way that no job was worth ignoring who she really was, down-deep. Her advice is to “pursue work environments that feel like the right fit for you.”

For writer Rachel Simmons, achievement was the only goal until she accepted a Rhodes Scholarship. She realized, once she was at Oxford, that being a Rhodes Scholar was a big mistake for her. She was embarrassed to quit and her family was angry, but it was a turning point in her life. Her advice: “Don’t be afraid to quit.”

Lawyer and social activist Reshma Saujani lost a Congressional race in 2009 and “I felt like I had let [supporters] down.” She advises readers to keep trying: “fail fast, fail hard, and fail often.”

From economist Carla Harris: if you “don’t know, you need to ask.” From writer Cheryl Strayed: “We’re all rough drafts.” From physician Danielle Ofri: nobody learns through humiliation. Says writer Alina Tugend: master the art of asking for money. And from writer J. Courtney Sullivan: “be a kind and generous coworker. You never know where it might lead you in the future.”

As a Champion Goof-Up from way back, I approached Mistakes I Made at Work with a little trepidation. When it comes to blunders, I was pleased with the candor that editor Jessica Bacal found when interviewing the women she chose. Some of the mistakes in this book might seem minor, while some are pretty good-sized but the meaning behind each brief chapter is the same: to wit: these women messed up, they were embarrassed, and they lived to tell about it. Best of all, things were often better, post-oops. And wow, that’s pretty comforting to anybody who knows she can’t cast that first stone...

This is an excellent book to give to a new grad, an old hand, an employee who’s feeling red-faced, or YOU. Reading Mistakes I Made at Work, in fact, is something you’ll be glad you did.

Barbie Harrison Accepts Call to the Ministry

Barbie Harrison

Harrison retired in December 2013 after 18 years providing strong leadership to Big Brothers Big Sisters of Northwestern Ohio.

In January 2013, she accepted her call to the ministry.

One year later, Harrison announced her ministry call with a Statement of Faith to the members of Third Baptist Church.

In March 2014, Harrison attends Pathway to Ministry Orientation at Winebrenner Theological Seminary and a challenge was born - the launching of a seminary satellite in Toledo!

Harrison has taken on this task with an orientation held at St. Luke’s Hospital Auditorium on May 27, 6:30-8:30 pm (dinner provided at no cost) to persons interested in religious studies. If there is enough interest, classes can start as early as this fall.

Harrison and her deacon husband have already begun a complimentary Old Testament Survey class Tuesday, May 13, 2014 in Findlay, Ohio.

Reverend Barbie will preach her first sermon on June 8, 2014 at the 11:00 a.m. morning worship.

Immediately following worship, family and friends will gather in Fellowship Hall to celebrate her Transition.

Prior to accepting and announcing her call to the ministry, Harrison was one of the first women to be ordained as a deacon at Third Baptist Church.

Harrison is excited as for many years she carried a brief case and now she carries the Holy Bible, the Word of God in her arms, heart and voice.

Everyone is invited to come and worship God as Harrison preaches her inaugural sermon.

St. Paul MBC Honors Mothers on Mothers Day

By Rev. James H. Willis, Sr.

Sunday May 11, 2014, St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church honored the mothers of the church. The mothers shown in the picture are regular worship attendees. This is the third presentation that has been given to them.

Their ages range from 80 years old to 100 years. The oldest active member is pictured in the wheelchair third from the left, Mother Louise Hairston, who is 100 years old. She attends church at least three Sundays a month.

The church’s oldest member is Mother Mary Townsell, who is 102 years and she is unable to attend due to her health.

Each member received a certificate that quotes Hebrew 11:1, “Now Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen.” It also states that the thanks being given for their continued effort to advance the Kingdom of God is evident of their faith.

These mothers have gone beyond the call of duty in their efforts to attend worship service and be the examples that Christ wants them to be. It is the will of the Lord to give honor where honor is due, said the church leaders.

The sharing of these certificates brought joy to each one of them. The certificates were presented with the assistance of the ministers and the Young Adult Ministry of St. Paul.
