Revitalizing Ohio Neighborhoods and Communities

By U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown
Guest Column

The financial crisis devastated homeowners and investors in Ohio and across the country. In the years since, we've made great progress but we know that the economy cannot fully recover until the housing market does.

Cleveland's Thriving Communities Institute estimates that there are 50,000 abandoned properties in Ohio that have fallen into disrepair. Vacant properties lower surrounding property values and can increase the likelihood of crime within the neighborhood. Ohioans shouldn't have to shoulder the burden of revitalizing these neighborhoods when big banks are to blame for the housing crisis.

In too many cases, banks generated billions in profits by disregarding the law and foreclosing on homeowners who were trying to pay their bills on time. When it came to light that the biggest banks had committed foreclosure fraud and used robo-signing practices that led to wrongful foreclosures, these large lenders agreed to pay more than $36 billion in retribution.

These funds won't erase the housing crisis, but they can help reverse its course by providing critical resources for home rehabilitation, blight removal, and mortgage counseling.

Bank of America (BOA) recently reached a record-setting $16.65 billion settlement with the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), which includes $7 billion in consumer relief. Ohio deserves its fair share of these funds. That's why I teamed up with Senator Portman to urge BOA to work with the Ohio community groups that are leading neighborhood stabilization efforts as the bank distributes its settlement funds. By working with local partners who have been fighting to help homeowners and revitalize Ohio communities, the bank can ensure that funds will be immediately put to work to benefit to the areas that need it most.

Ohio was hit hard by the foreclosure crisis. It began here before it reached many other parts of the country and, until 2012, Ohio had 14 consecutive years of increasing foreclosures. In 2009, at the height of the crisis, 14,171 homes in Cuyahoga County were in foreclosure. By 2013, that figure dropped to 8,829, but remains far too high. Ohio's 22 land banks, local housing counselors, and groups like Thriving Communities Institute have worked tirelessly to help Ohioans recover. There's still more to do, but these groups have a plan with proven results to use these funds to continue their efforts to revitalize Ohio neighborhoods.

I urge Bank of America to stand by their promise to aid the communities that they hurt so badly in the financial crisis, and invest these settlement funds in Ohio.

Reparations for Aunt Jemima – Now!

By Lafe Tolliver, Esq
Guest Column

Well, it finally happened. The offspring of the famous black woman in the headscarf who has populated pancake mix boxes since... forever, have said enuff is enuff and they want money.

If you go to the Net and type in Aunt Jemima lawsuit, you will find a very interesting case that has been filed against Quaker Oats.

The great grandsons of Aunt Jemima want money.

Big money. Billions of dollars if you want to be exact and they want it now!

Call it a form of reparations or economic parity if you will but someone needs to get paid and why not the heirs of that famous, black, smiling face.

I can still think of the fond memories I had when growing up and seeing Aunt "J" in the kitchen cooking me up a batch of warm pancakes or waffles.

When I saw that box, I knew that everything was at peace in the world and I was about to sit down in my pj's and have a lip-smacking meal accompanied by pieces of fried bacon and a glass of cold milk! Can I get a witness up in here!

But I digress. The family heirs are hopping mad about how their ancestor's image was purportedly ripped off by a lot of shady shenanigans and how the young, future, pancake-box icon was tricked, due to her age, to sign documents that should be now be deemed unconscionable or woefully one sided.

As you know, back in the day, when black inventors or holders of recipes that were lip smacking good took their products to market, they were ripe game for nefarious operators and slicksters who preyed upon their innocence and trust and literally took their goodies and inventions for themselves.

A black inventor's idea was property of the Massa and he had no right to his creative talents being protected by patents or copyrights.

Many are the sordid tales of black inventors being robbed of their widgets and designs and recipes and unable to go to a court of law against a white man and prevail. They had no ability for a long period of time to reap the benefits of their creativity.

If you go to the library and check book out on black inventors you will be floored by all of the varieties of inventions that were thought up by people of color including the golf tee, ironing board, stop light, lubrication for railroad couplings, elevator, dyes, inks, fabrics, hair care products, gas masks, computer systems, blood bank, refrigeration systems, shoe stitching machinery, biscuit cutter, dentures, stair climbing wheelchair, gate latch, folding chair and etc...etc.

Enough said. Of course the problem with coming forward and claiming monetary rights to the image of Aunt "J" will be a herculean task since it will depend upon credible evidence consisting of written documents since practically all of the witnesses to Aunt "J" signing any agreements have gone on to their final resting place.

The heirs of Aunt "J" indicate that they have credible evidence to bolster their claim that bucks, big bucks are due and owing to them from the manufacturers of the pancake mix and from any other product that used the image of the shiny black-faced woman who gave comfort to millions of Americans around the breakfast table.

You know what is next? I am waiting for the heirs of good ol' Uncle Ben to stake their claim and to make sure that their forebear gets the ship righted and they can go to the bank with some of the millions that white corporate America made off of the images of black folks.

Time does not allow for the myriad of other black images that populated toys and clothes and food items which were utilized to sell, even in a derogatory manner, the products that white America used.

Somehow the image of a black face on food products was a seal of "good eatin'" for white America, even the vile but paternalistic images of black kids smacking their over-inflated lips on juicy, red watermelons in a watermelon patch.

For white America, deriding and debasing black people knew no bounds...even the children were not safe from being pictured as docile and happy under the bonds of servitude.

White America did not dress their fabled Betty Crocker with a head rag as they did Aunt "J" because their Betty Crocker stood for all things that were wonderful and nice and lovely about Americana. An Americana in which black folks were of no regard but useful only for purposes of exploitation.

I have a cookbook at home on which the cover is graced by an oversized "mammy" with a head rag and a rolling pin. Of course she is featured with gigantic lips and puffy black cheeks. This is a period in American history in which such pictures made white America feel superior to anything not white and reinforced their stereotypical images that blacks were strictly cartoons, clowns or buffoons.

I hope that the heirs of Aunt "J" get a humongous financial windfall as a recompense for such economic chicanery imposed upon people of color.

I hope Uncle Ben's grandkids and great grandkids follow suit and make sure that all was in order and proper if their forebears likeness was not properly compensated for the millions and millions of dollars of sales that his "old and darkly but grand image" generated for the companies that used his image.

As a side note, on October 18, my college, Kent State University, is going to pay homage to my four years of photographic images that I took of black kids on that campus during the heyday of the black power movement and the tragic May 4 shootings.

I have donated hundreds and hundreds of photographic negatives to the university archives but I did so with the written and explicit agreement that any monies generated from that showing or from future usages of those images are to go my bank account and to my estate.

I reserved the copyrights to those images for posterity. Ain't no Aunt Jemima or Uncle Ben's up in here!

The Trick to Getting Your Tenants to Pay Rent Every Month

By Brian Rome, Program Director, Catholic Charities, Diocese of Toledo
Guest Column

Catholic Charities Diocese of Toledo's new pilot program: The Tenant Readiness Program, now in its second year, has taken out all of the "tricks" to help make sure families acquire exactly what they need to be able to pay rent every month.

The key, as oppose to a "trick," is expecting from new renters the same standards you would expect for yourself when leasing or purchasing a new home. Unfortunately, we see many cases where unprepared renters slip through the cracks and are approved for leases, when it was clear that they were not ready. It is a red flag to our program, when a renter is relying on agency services to support their move. To us it is translated- they are trying to move before they are legitimately ready.

The Tenant Readiness Program, in its first year, served 50 families in search of housing. One of the objectives of the program is to work with renters before they sign a lease, by accessing their vulnerability in six identified core areas.

These six areas, we believe are essential to be able to overcome the minor setbacks that prevent them from paying their rent on time.

At year end, 90 percent of the participants obtained one or more needed resources than they had before their Stability Assessment.

But just as important, our objective is to help renters avoid signing a lease if they realistically are not in a position to afford the financial responsibilities of their desired home. We were able to encourage 41 percent of the participants to delay their search to complete a plan to either improve their financial situation or to find more affordable housing.

The big picture of our success is that the program is potentially preventing those same renters from putting themselves in a position where they would need eviction assistance in the near future. By taking a proactive approach, this would save approximately $23,700 from our eviction assistance budget.

Encouraging our clients to be "Legitimately ready" before signing a lease is a standard we encourage landlords or property managers to promote also. The questions we encourage you to answer for yourself are: 1) Do they actually have enough income to afford all of the

The Law and Leadership Institute – Preparing High School Students for College Success

By Fletcher Word

Sojourner's Truth Editor

The Law and Leadership Institute (LLI) is a collaborative program for high school students that is funded in part by the Ohio State Bar Foundation and involves all of Ohio's nine law schools as well as the State Bar Association, the Ohio Supreme Court and the Ohio Center for Law-Related Education.

"It's the best kept secret in education in the area," says Pariss Coleman, attorney, LLI board member and the program's head cheerleader in northwest Ohio.

The LLI's summer program is now being offered in Ohio's six largest cities – Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Toledo, Dayton and Akron – with a special emphasis on reaching out to minority students.

"We are looking to improve diversity in the legal profession and looking at under-served communities – that is our mission," said Marilyn Preston, LLI administrator of the Toledo LLI and a professor of Legal Writing at The University of Toledo College of Law.

LLI, a four-year college preparatory program that starts with instruction in criminal law and court procedures, is intended as a vehicle to help high school students gain critical academic skills in studying and test-taking. The program focuses on developing students' ability to write and express themselves, thereby building self-confidence, positive peer group relations and excitement about a professional career.

Steve Jemison, retired chief legal officer for Proctor & Gamble, is the CEO and board president of the Ohio LLI and Heather Creed is the chief operations officer. The organization is overseen by a board of directors. Each of the cities has a site administrator.

The Toledo LLI began five years ago with a single ninth-grade class. Every year another ninth-grade class of students enter the Toledo LLI. Two graduations have been held thus far – 2013 and 2014 – and all of the graduates have entered colleges.

The students undergo four rigorous weeks during the summer and then commit to spending 12 weekends a year during the school year during their first year.

As students advance through the program, they will experience law-related seminars and field trips, a four-day paid summer internship, and participation in a law debate (moot court) program while paired with an attorney or law student.

"My goal is to graduate with a degree in political science, go on to law school, eventually become a government official and an advocate for students in urban areas with high poverty," said one 2014 Toledo LLI graduate.

History of the Blum

Special to The Truth

The Blum Street Café dates back to the 1920's. From 1925 – 1941, it was owned and operated by John Krolak as "Krolak's Café", a confectionery store. In 1945, it became a local bar known as the "Blum Café" under the ownership of John Jesionowski.

Jesionowski maintained ownership of the building and business until 1964 when purchased by Pete and Dahlia Lyle.

In 1964, the customer base was primarily a German and Polish mix. Operating hours were 8 a.m. – 1 a.m., six days a week. Soon after, a 2:30 a.m. permit was purchased under which we still operate today.

The new "Blum Café" inherited the previous owner's philosophy of "a shot and a beer" otherwise known as a "boilermaker." Liquor was approximately 35 cents per shot, draft beer was 10 cents per glass and canned beer was 15 cents per can. The original hosts and bartenders included Dahlia Lyle, Evans Lyle and Ethel Thomas.

The "Blum Café" has a rich history. In the late 60's - early 70's, the Blum Café became the home of the Gypsy Angels. The book I'll Take You There by Matthew A. Donahue mentions them in reference to the history of Hine's Farm.

Jemison, whose career as an educator began with Toledo Public Schools, brings 21 years experience to her new position. Jemison said that her experience as an educator for 21 years is not uncommon, but the richness of her diverse background is what's important.

"Having taught at TPS and experienced the dynamics of that district, then moving to Bedford for seven years which is a completely different demographic and now at Springfield which is so rich in diversity for seven years has enhanced my ability to deal with everybody and see different perspectives," she said.

Guests were treated to a buffet-style meal as heartfelt sentiments, well wishes and expressions of appreciation were offered from friends, family, colleagues. Close friend Robin Reeves served as mistress of ceremonies and music was provided by DJ Damage.

He writes: "The highlight of the calendar was Motorcycle Sunday, when local bike chapters The Atomic Pirates and The Gypsy Angels would impress the crowds with acts of derring-do after a weekend-long bout of jollification which started with a Friday Night hog roast."

From the 70's until the 90's, Thomas "TC" Grisham manned the bar with the addition of Eva (Snodgrass) Lyle. In those days, the Blum co-founded the "Inner City Pool League" with many of the local black-owned bars, including the H&H, Jordan's, the A&G, the Eureka, the Shadowbox, the Savoy and Mil's. For many years, you could come to the Blum for a game of Bid Whist, Coon Cane, Dirty Hearts and Tunk.

Over the years, the Blum has been home to many, including: Ford, Jeep and Hydromatic Nights; The Alley Cats; the Inner City Car and Motorcycle Club and many bowling, pool and softball leagues.

household expense? There are currently more families on fixed incomes, than I have seen in over 10 plus years of service. This means, after paying their rent, there is very little left over to handle setbacks. Guess what expense gets neglected first?

2) Do they have a plan for potential setbacks? Trust and believe one is certain to occur. This is probably one of the most important questions a landlord could ask. Receiving your rent every month will be determined by their answer. Unfortunately, many of our renters are willing to allow the landlord to assume they would be able to pay the rent every month. Their only focus is being approved and hoping your mercy will prevail in the case of a setback. Talk about trick!

What's even more vital to this housing problem, is the need to work together with both landlords and tenants. There cannot be a better deal than having a third party working closely with you and your tenants to help assure that they maintain the resources needed to pay their rent on time every month.

Whether you call it a trick or just simply a strategy, it is Catholic Charities' mission to impact not only the need, but also the root cause of their problem. If you are a property manager or landlord facing difficulties receiving your rent each month, we would like to partner with you. Refer your new tenants or the ones you had to reject due to financial vulnerability.

A referral from you could save you the hassle of chasing them down for rent each month or elevating the standard for new renters. The cycle of rent avoidance tricks will continue if the expectations never changes. Contact us at brome@toledodiocese.org for more information.

The Fashion Book by DK Publishing

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

There's never been a seat for you on the bandwagon.

When everybody was wearing skinny jeans, you put on your crinoline. When they were all into Daisy Dukes, you loved daisy print. You don't own leggings, jeggings, or fat boots, up-to-the-minute skirts or scarves. No, you've got a style all your own, which is why you need The Fashion Book.

At least four times a year (sometimes more), designers come out with new haute couture and magazines howl about must-haves. We're supposed to change the content of our closet every few months, then – but why?

To understand, you need to know the history of fashion.

You might think that women in long-ago times could just wear the same old robe evcised in bikinis.

Medieval men had it much better than their female counterparts: men donned lightweight tights, while women were stuck wearing four mandatory layers of clothing. If they looked pregnant, that was even better: the Black Plague killed a lot of people, and babies were "prized."

During the Renaissance, fashion started to stink. Seriously stink, because hygiene wasn't important to our 15th and 16th century ancestors. Furs were de rigueur because they were thought to re-route fleas and lice. Hair was rarely washed, baths were infrequent. Plus, with then-trendy skirts wider than most doorways, trying to reach the potty ery day, right? No, all-the-rage Ancients took fashion seriously. Minoan women some 5,000 years ago used corsets. Greek girls demanded that their peplos were personalized and Roman women exerwasn't pretty.

You might think them crazy, but women in the late 1700s wore clothing that made their butts look big, on purpose.

Fashionistas on and off through the 1800s did that, too, and they sometimes changed clothes several times a day. But while butts were big then, shoes sported dozens of teensy buttons to fasten, which took time and probably made lots of women late. In the early 1800s, by the way, men wore corsets, too.

By the early 1900s, women were happy to turn to Hollywood for a new look. Sumptuous gowns caused undies to go smaller, push-up bras were invented, heels went higher, and glamour was golden. Practicality ruled the 1930s; Rosie the Riveter needed work clothes in the '40s; and in the 1950s, teenagers like you stepped into the fashion scene...

As a basic history of what we wore, The Fashion Book is exactly perfect.

There's just enough information in this book to get future clothing designers started on ideas, with bios on famous fashionistas and interviews with experts and students in various roles in the industry. Readers learn intriguing bits and pieces about ye olde clothing via illustrations and lighthearted sidebars that are easy to read, then we're taken even further with ideas for using old-fashioned fashions in new ways that won't bust a girl's budget.

There's no reason in the world that a grown-up can't enjoy this book, but it's really meant for young adults. If that's you and you're looking for new ways of stylin', The Fashion Book will suit you well.
