.... You’ve got to rattle your cage door. You’ve got to let them know that you’re in there, and that you want out.

We have all seen or heard about the water crisis in Flint, Michigan: thousands of children and pregnant women have been exposed to lead poisoning after a series of questionable or, at best, very short-sighted decisions by various government entities caused lead to seep into their drinking water.

This is, pure and simple, the poisoning of a community. And it is mainly lower-income African-American children who are poisoned at higher rates than in predominantly white neighborhoods or suburbs and whose lives are in dire danger.

Recently, however, we are coming to learn that it is not just Flint and it is not just water. Consider what is happening right here in Ohio.

In Sebring, a small northeastern Ohio town of 4,300 in the Youngstown – Warren area, schools were closed three days in a row in February and pregnant women and children were advised not to drink the water after elevated levels of lead were found. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been asked to lead an investigation.

The Sebring crisis, itself, is not an isolated incident. In fact, across the entire state of Ohio between 2012 and 2015, 80 water systems serving more than 173,000 residents reported elevated levels of lead. Sebring was the fifth-largest system affected by higher-than-average lead levels; Canton, Ohio was the highest. Twelve of the 80 water systems served schools or day care centers.

And it’s not just an Ohio phenomenon.

A recent USA Today Network investigation revealed that almost 2,000 water systems spanning all 50 states have tested for excessive levels of lead contamination over the past four years. These water systems collectively supply water to six million Americans.

Furthermore, the source of public lead poisoning is not just confined to the water. Health experts and public housing advocates warn that 1.6 million households with children nationwide are at risk of exposure to lead-contaminated paint, a source of lead poisoning far more prevalent than water contamination.

Toledo has the second highest rate of lead poisoning in Ohio and in Cleveland, 14.2 percent of children have been exposed to poisonous lead – not in their water but rather in paint. The New York Times notes: “The poisoning of Flint’s children outraged the nation. But too much lead is finding its way into young brains, stunting intellectual growth and affecting cardiovascular, immune and hormone systems.

of the 20th century remains unfinished.”

More than 3,400 children in Toledo suffer from lead poisoning, the Kirwin Institute of the Ohio State University reports, “resulting in damage to brain development, loss of IQ points, shortened attention span, and disruptive behavior.” These effects are also permanent, according to the Toledo Lead Poisoning Prevention Coalitions, leading to staggering societal costs including special education needs, incarceration, personal and financial losses of crime victims, and lost opportunities for children to be successful.

For four decades now, we have known of the dangers of lead poisoning, particularly where our children are concerned. Even small amounts of lead have a pernicious impact on young brains, stunting intellectual growth and affecting cardiovascular, immune and hormone systems.

Joel Osteen Says.. Hell No to Hell!

Bible? descriptions of both a heaven and a hell; and the need for repentance not the guts or fortitude to preach a full gospel which includes graphic
You give alms to the poor and are not a gossip or a busybody like those wash your car at least every two weeks even when it does not need it.
You are someone who believes in the inherent goodness of mankind and that each person has a “spark” of God in them.

I mean, why not? If you can live any which way in this natural life and avoid any penalty or rebuke for living a dastardly lifestyle and with no eternal and lasting repercussions, isn’t it tempting to at least try something, wild and woolly and edgy?

I told you that you could engage in any illicit conduct of your own choosing and whim and you would not have to face any judgment about it after you die, what would you do? Would you become a serial fornicator? How about a thief and a cheat? A glutton? Consider scamming

The gospel according to Joel Osteen gives you permission to “do your thing” and without a proper and awe-inspiring fearful concern for the consequences possibly leading to an eternity in hell. Good ol’ Joel does not want to burden your already frazzled life with a biblical doctrine of hell. A doctrine that Jesus, the Son of God, repeated taught, explained and affirmed when he walked the earth. This Jesus, without reservation, described the nature of hell as being a place of anguish, torment, suffering and eternal separation from the presence of God.

I know....I know. Talking about hell and repentance may give you a bad case of the “hee-bee gee-bees”; and you want to believe that you are a good person. A nice person. A person who gives to charities and volunteers at the local food bank. You are someone who believes in the inherent goodness of mankind and that each person has a “spark” of God in them.

“We are the State of Ohio’s conduit for all state resources directed to minority-owned businesses,” says Jay Black, Jr, newly appointed director of the Minority Business Assistance Center (MBAC), located on the Scott Park Campus of the University of Toledo.

Black, who has spent the last four years as president of the Toledo African American Chamber of Commerce (TAACC), and still leads that organization, has greatly expanded his ability to assist minority business enterprises (MBE). As head of the State of Ohio’s MBAC Region 4 (four of seven offices), Black has the opportunity to assist minority-owned businesses within a 17-county, northwest Ohio area.

Minority-owned businesses include those owned by African Americans, Hispanic Americans, Asian Americans and Native Americans.

Black’s plans to enhance the impact his office has on those businesses fall into three categories.

“First, I want to take the show on the road,” he says of his desire to spread the word that his office is open and available to assist businesses, particularly in the southern reaches of the region such as Lima.

Secondly, Black wants public awareness of the MBAC workshops to increase, thereby increasing participation. On April 20, for example, MBAC is hosting a workshop – open to all – during which banks, state representatives and the Small Business Administration will be discussing the subject of access to capital. Earlier this year, MBAC hosted a workshop on Quick Books.

Third, the office will enhance its efforts at partnering with organizations such as TAACC, ASSETS Toledo, the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the NAACP in order to ensure that minority-owned businesses have access to the best possible resources while avoiding wasteful duplication of services.

“The more [such agencies] know about what we do here, the better they will feel about using us,” says Black. The goal is to work cooperatively with such organizations so that each group’s strengths are used for the best benefit of the client businesses. MBAC’s strengths are clearly providing business-focused services – accounting, marketing, bidding, financial, certification assistance. And at no cost.

If an individual walks into the MBAC offices with a dream of starting her own business but no idea of how to do so, Black would refer that person to ASSETS Toledo for “Business 101” training. When such an individual is prepared to start or grow her business, MBAC is prepared to assist.

MBAC offers access to state, local and micro-lender financial assistance programs and can connect small, minority and disadvantaged businesses with a host of services.

“We have a direct loan program, for example, that is explicitly designed for businesses that are ready to expand,” says Black. “When they are ready to expand, they are ready to hire more people. Typically MBE’s will hire people from the MBE community – it’s a win-win for everybody.”

Black’s message to the community, to those who know of MBE’s in the community, is to refer people to his office. “If I can’t help them, I can refer them to someone else.”

“The overall objective is to work with those businesses and get them to the next level of success and start to build wealth in our community.”

Breakfast with Lucas County Commissioner Pete Gerken

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

“I’m a guy doing a job, running against a guy looking for a job,” said Lucas County Commissioner Pete Gerken at a breakfast meeting in late March organized by Sylvester Gould and Johnetta McCollough, who are members of the Gerken re-election committee.

“I’m here to listen, take suggestions and learn something,” Gerken told the breakfast guests. “This is an opportunity and I need to learn what I am missing.”

The breakfast, held at Pam’s Corner, included Priscilla Brown, an entrepreneur specializing in construction supplies; Tracee Perryman, executive director of Center of Hope Family Services; Richard Mitchell, attorney; Rev. William James, pastor of St. James the Armory; Roderick Colbert, a boxing gym operator; Robert Smith, executive director of the African American Legacy Project; Earl Stevens, retired teacher and instructor at Penta; McCollough, executive director of TASC of Northwest Ohio; Donnetta Carter, travel agent and social worker; Tina Butts of T-Bonds.

Gerken reminded the guests of his background in elected office, particularly of his time on Toledo City Council when, in 1998, Council, with Gerken taking the lead, passed the living wage ordinance. “It took one and a half years to do that,” he recalled. “And I’m more proud of that than anything else.”

These days, the two most pressing issues facing Lucas County, said Gerken, are a broken criminal justice system and the water distribution problem.

“We need to get going on building the new jail because of the inhumane conditions,” he said. “But we need to reform the system ahead of that. Jack Ford, my mentor, sat me down once and said to me ‘if you build the jail bigger and not smaller, I’m going to be watching you.’

“Seventy percent [of the prisoners] are mentally ill or addicted to something – they don’t need to be there,” said Gerken of the present inmate population.

As a result, Gerken said, he is asking the courts to think about other ways of handling some of the cases. Such measures, he said, may not be popular with the public but may be the right thing for the offenders.

Gerken noted that suburban towns, weary of dealing with the City of Toledo and buying water from its supply, “are contemplating creating their own water systems – that will be a policy mistake that will take 50 years to correct.

“We have to regionalize the water system; we have to fix the distrust between...”

The Power of a Fitness Sisterhood

By Angela Steward, Fitness Motivator

We women carry the weight of the world on our shoulders. When our responsibilities include career, taking care of the family and somehow making time for ourselves, we become bogged down with feelings of stress, anxiety and even depression. We become so involved in taking care of others, we forget about our own needs.

I feel comfortable in betting that when others suggest you take time for yourself (while the laundry is backed-up, and dirty dishes are in the sink), you answer defensively: “How, When?”...immediately followed by: “Well if I had more help, maybe I could find some time for myself.” I know this situation sounds familiar because I've been there. I once felt that way! I carried the heavy weight of responsibility on my shoulders – but the weight rested not only on my shoulders, it sat on my hips and thighs – 240 pounds of responsibility.

I would often say to myself (in private, of course): If and when I find time for myself, the first thing I’m going to do is call a friend and spend the afternoon getting a mani and pedi, do a little shopping, and have lunch or dinner, or both.

The thought of using my “free” time to exercise was non-existent. At that time, exercise was one of my “least favorite things” to do. Of course sharing my free time with a friend would have been one of my “favorite things” to do – to experience something with a friend is what makes things “fun.”

Well, guess what? Exercise ain’t what it used to be. We could all take a cue from our children. Combining social play with exercise comes naturally to most kids – relay racing, roller skating, football, basketball, etc. I remember as a kid getting up early in the morning, running to my friends’ house to play tag, to jump rope, to roll down hills or ice skate at Ottawa Park, to go swimming at Willys Park, and sled down Jermain Park’s snowy hills.

These memories are a strong part of my childhood and are “care-free” memories that I love! I'm sure most of you have stayed in touch with childhood friends because you share “care-free” memories. Those “care-free” memories play an important part in who we are today and how we live our everyday lives.

Starting today, open your memory gates and allow friendship, fun and laughter to enter in your adult life. No matter what age you are, there are ways of tapping into those childhood feelings again. You’re never too old to be “happy and fulfilled.” So...tap into the Power of a Fitness Sisterhood.

When I created “Fabulously Fit,” I wanted to share my passion for dance and fitness. Combining my two favorite passions brought back fun memories of friendship, laughter, of high-school cheerleading and parties where I would dance for hours non-stop. I wanted to reclaim those “care-free” memories, and that’s what “Fabulously Fit” offers - a fitness program that gives you permission to feel young and energized.

My combination of cardio dance and weight-bearing exercises is designed for women of all sizes, ages and fitness levels. For one hour, leave your troubles at home, release the stress, move your body, laugh, sweat, and shake what your Ma-Ma gave ya. Be filled with “care-free” fun-loving spirit for one hour. We work hard, we lift weights and we sweat. We also laugh and love reaping the benefits of a good workout.

There used to be a time when parents looked forward to an empty nest. The children are gone; the tears are wiped away; plans are made for the empty room; vacations are planned with all the extra money and time you’ll have…then you find yourself with the responsibility of caring for an ill or dependent relative or dear family friend. It seems that in my circle, everyone is currently providing some level of care for a relative.

According to the National Alliance for Caregiving, 29 percent of the adult population (65.7 million Americans) have served as caregivers for an ill or disabled relative in the past year. This doesn’t include non-relatives. The care provided ranges from just helping with a few things such as rides to appointments and checking in, to total care of the loved one. The time involved ranges from a few hours per week to over 40 hours per week.

Many of those caregivers are working full-time jobs and still caring for children not quite ready to leave home yet. Women make up the majority of caregivers. Adding caregiving responsibilities to a person with a full plate makes for a recipe for burnout. Who helps and cares for the caregiver?

Often, the caregiver doesn’t even think of him, or herself, as one needing care. The focus has been so far away from self, that self is forgotten. There needs to be balance. The focus needs to shift to include care of the self. If not, person needing care will outlive the caregiver. The Family Caregiver Alliance reports that the risk of dying is 63 percent higher for a caregiving spouse aged 66 to 96, than people of the same age who are not caregivers.

Why does this happen? Stress and poor lifestyle habits end up wearing down the immune system and increase risk for chronic illnesses. Caregivers tend to neglect their own needs, to make sure their loved one’s needs are met. If you aren’t around anymore, or can’t make it out of your own sick bed, who will take over? Anyone who has been on a plane has heard the flight attendant instruct you to put the oxygen mask on yourself first before helping another in case of loss of cabin pressure. You can’t help another if you are ill, stressed, depressed, or in the intensive care unit with a stroke or a heart attack.

If you are a caregiver, make a promise to yourself to take good care of yourself as well. You are not allowed to feel guilty at all for taking some time to care for yourself. Taking care of yourself includes:

- Getting more sleep – start with getting at least one more hour per night than you currently do now.
- Eating a more nutritious diet, that includes less sugar.
- Relaxation techniques, such as mediation, praying, deep breathing, yoga, reading, and hobbies
- Reaching out for support – ask for help
- Avoiding isolating yourself; talk to people; “hang-out” with your friends
- Exercise – even for 10-15 minutes per day
- Keeping up with your own preventive health care
- Getting access to resources – reach out to the Ohio Department of Aging; Area Office on Aging of Northwestern Ohio at 419-382-0624 or www.areaofficenaging.com. There may also be Meet Up caregiver groups in your area.
- Recognizing that “This too shall pass.”

So what must we do?

This is a time of extreme peril and not a time for smiles and passivity. The Senate has a bipartisan measure pending called the Drinking Water Safety and Infrastructure Act. It would provide $242 million in seed money not just for Flint, but also for other communities with water contamination, including communities in Ohio. Both of Ohio’s senators, Rob Portman and Sherrod Brown, are co-sponsors of the legislation. We should contact them to ask them to prod Senate leadership to bring this measure up for an immediate vote.

Also, Mayor Paula Hicks Hudson and the Toledo City Council are urged to put our children first by approving the prevention ordinance sponsored by the Toledo Lead Poisoning Prevention Coalition.

These steps are a start, but we need more to fix our infrastructure and heal our children.

It’s not just Flint and it’s not just water. The lives of our children are in jeopardy and it affects us all. We need to demand that we put a stop to the poisoning of our children.

That is why I encourage you to find a group fitness class – like Fabulously Fit. A group fitness class allows you to meet new people; the classes usually have a consistent schedule, and the same group of women often attend those classes. I often announce in my classes - if you don’t know the name of the person to your left or right, chances are they don’t know your name either – so how can you make a new friend if you don’t speak to each other – reach out and attempt to connect with others.

A very good friend often tells me – the bigger the circle, the bigger the view – and I’ve found this to be so true! When you reach out to others in class, chances are that person to your left or right – looks forward to you showing up and will even reserve your spot in class until you arrive….hint-hint , FabFit back row!

A strong fitness sisterhood will hold you accountable for your actions. Everyone experiences a time where they need to take a break – but just know – when you open your heart to a Fabulously Fit sisterhood, your sisters already know what you’re going through, and have already put a plan of support in place to help you get to where you need to be.

Our sisterhood has visited each other’s homes. We know each other’s families, we know each others likes and dislikes, strengths and weaknesses. We not only exercise together, we celebrate together, we pray together, we praise together and we mourn together. We are connected through exercise, and we reach out to others to encourage them to live a healthier, happy, care-free lifestyle.

I encourage women of all ages, cultures, sizes, and fitness levels to: Leave the dishes in the sink; the laundry can wait! Get off the couch! Through exercise, and we reach out to others to encourage them to live a healthier, happy, care-free lifestyle.

I encourage women of all ages, cultures, sizes, and fitness levels to: Leave the dishes in the sink; the laundry can wait! Get off the couch! Leave the comfort of your four walls! Make new friends! Reclaim your “care free” spirit! Reach out to a group of women who have fun working out and have similar lifestyle goals and needs! We all have one goal in common – to be strong, healthy and fit women who strive to live “care free” spirit! Reach out to a group of women who have fun working out and have similar lifestyle goals and needs! “FLip That Stock Founder and CEO, J.R. Fenwick to launch National Tour in hometown of Toledo, Ohio”

Toledo Native, Founder and CEO of FLip That Stock, J.R. Fenwick is coming home to launch the National “Empowerment and Lifestyle Tour” Saturday April 23, 2016 at University of Toledo, Scott Park Campus Auditorium, 2200 Nebraska Ave, 10am to 12 noon.

FLip That Stock is a leading education and technology company that teaches people how the stock market works and how to “actively” buy and sell stocks using the latest technology.

Fenwick, a graduate of St. Francis DeSales High School 82 and Hampton University started FLip That Stock in 2013 after friends and even strangers began constantly asking him to teach them to trade stocks.

15 years ago, Fenwick was introduced to trading stocks by someone he was buying a keyboard from for his music recording and production studio. The two became fast friends and literally, “one day out of the blue my friend ask me did I trade in the stock market. I knew nothing about the stock market and really wasn’t interested, but my friend’s persistence eventually won me over. I became fascinated and borderline obsessed with learning the stock market. My friend began to teach me, I attended seminars and even hired a personal coach to accelerate my learning” Fenwick says.

Being an entrepreneur at heart, stemming from his days as a youth in Toledo running his own lawn cutting and newspaper delivery service, Fenwick lived the life of an entrepreneur turning his passions for playing guitar, music recording and production, martial arts and marketing and sales into high six figure profits after quitting his 6 figure corporate job. He even wrote an Award Winning Book entitled, “How I Quit My $100,000 A Year Job” to encourage, inspire and educate others to pursue their passions.

The book caught the attention of “The Washington Post” and they did a feature story entitled, “Don’t Let Your Boss See You Reading This!” This article lead to more articles and Fenwick being invited to speak at entrepreneur’s conferences and being a frequent guest on numerous radio shows across the country.

Fenwick’s main passion is teaching people about the stock market and designing stock trading software that utilizes the most advanced technology for trading stocks. “The first part of teaching people is debunking all the myths and misconceptions that many people have about the stock market. Once that’s done, I teach people how the stock market works and how to use the latest technology to find, analyze and buy and sell stocks in a very short period of time. Ultimately, I teach people a new skill that empowers them.”

FLip That Stock and The Empowerment and Lifestyle Tour are sure to impact and change many lives.

Accelerating Health Equity for the Nation

By Patrice Powers-Barker, OSU Extension, Lucas County

The Truth Contributor

“Accelerating Health Equity for the Nation” is the theme for April, National Minority Health Month 2016. The American Public Health Association defines health equity as everyone having the opportunity to attain their highest level of health.

Not only is health equity an important topic for our nation, but National Minority Health Month is also celebrated locally and it’s a personal issue. Individual health is a very personal topic and it is also a community and national matter. For individuals and families to achieve their optimal health, social and environmental conditions must be lined up to support healthy choices and lifestyles.

In 1915 Booker T. Washington stated, “Without health and long life, all else fails.” To accelerate health equity for the nation, both national and personal health goals must happen at the same time. As individuals and families work to make healthy choices including food and physical activity it is vital that community sites such as schools, worksites, community centers, doctor’s offices, houses of worship, etc. have wellness and health equity as a priority for all.

If a site is not fostering opportunities for optimal health for all, that needs to be addressed. If a community program or site is working to promote health equity, please recognize their hard work!

The Ohio Commission of Minority Health has published a 30 Day Wellness Campaign Calendar online for the month of April and there are many events happening in Toledo. Local opportunities to participate in National Minority Health Month range from health screenings, community summit, community clean-up and a health expo at the end of the month.

The topics for health and wellness at the different events range from general health screenings to colon health, diabetic health, recovery addiction and healthy moms and babies. Be sure to check out the entire list of events in Toledo as well as around the state of Ohio at http://www.lucascountyhealth.com/wp-content/uploads/2016/03/2016-MH-Calendar-1.pdf. Tips to Get More Nutrients in Your Daily Diet

Getting all the nutrients you need each day to function or even thrive can be a challenge. After all, there are only so many meals in a day.

Here are some creative ways to pack the necessary nutrients into your day, without going over your tight calorie budget.

Make Each Bite Count

It’s tempting to sneak in “empty calories,” with foods and beverages that have little in the way of nutritional value. Don’t give in to sugary treats or easy fixes. You will ultimately feel more satisfied by foods that work to fuel your body.

Plan meals ahead to ensure they each include a healthful balance of proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins, amino acids and minerals. Eating colorfully with each meal can help, because fresh fruits, vegetables, beans, nuts and seeds of different colors can provide a rich mix of these valuable nutrients and antioxidants.

Also, don’t let unhealthy snacking be your downfall. Snacking doesn’t have to carry the connotation of mindless consumption in front of a television. Carefully planned bites between meals can be just what the nutritionist ordered.

For instance, consider a cup of high fiber cereal mixed with a few nuts or pumpkin seeds to tide you over between meals, a piece of whole wheat toast with a little nut butter also can do the trick, as can a piece of fruit with a slice of cheese.

Get to know the healthful options on restaurant menus and take the time to chew and enjoy your food.

Easy Replacements

Some of the most essential nutritional components include protein, good carbohydrates, healthy fats, vitamins, minerals, fiber, enzymes and probiotics. While many foods contain some of these important nutrients, landing on the right formula can be an ongoing and time-consuming challenge. It doesn’t have to be.

Consider fast tracking your way to all eight of these core nutrients with a high-quality meal replacement. For example, Illumin8, a plant-based USDA Certified Organic powder from Sunwarrior goes well beyond a traditional protein supplement and can be used as a meal replacement, snack or pre/post workout shake. Available in three flavors, Vanilla Bean, Aztec Chocolate and Mocha, clean eating can also taste good.

Healthy Lifestyle

Match your nutrient-filled diet with a healthy lifestyle. Get plenty of sleep each night, at least eight hours, and move more during the day, with at least 20 minutes of activity.

Be sure to stay hydrated all day long with glasses of clean, clear liquids. Water aids digestion and helps you skip the sugary soft drinks, which are high in calories but offer no nutritional value. Opt for water and green tea instead.

Ohio Democratic Party Celebrates Sixth Anniversary of Obamacare

The Ohio Democratic Party in March celebrated the sixth anniversary of President Barack Obama signing the Affordable Care Act into law, with a news conference featuring Columbus City Council President Pro Tempore Priscilla Tyson.

“There are many benefits to the Affordable Care Act, and they are certainly worth celebrating,” said Tyson. “We must stop fighting partisan battles over health care. There’s too much at stake to go backward. Let’s focus on the future and getting even more Ohioans covered.?

Here are the facts on how Obamacare has benefited our nation and our state:
• Thanks to the ACA, 20 million previously uninsured people had gained coverage prior to this year’s open enrollment period
• The law has driven the uninsured rate below 10 percent – for the first time since we started keeping records.

Earth Lyons to Compete for The Miss Teen Title

Special to The Truth

Earth Lyons of Holland was recently selected to participate in the 2016 Miss Teen pageant competition that will take place on Sunday, April 10, 2016. Earth learned of her acceptance into this year’s competition when the pageant announced their selections following interviewing in the local Toledo area. Earth submitted an application and took part in an interview session that was conducted by this year’s Toledo Pageant Coordinator.

Earth will be competing for her share of thousands of dollars in prizes and specialty gifts that will be distributed to contestants. Earth will be competing in the Miss Teen division, one of two divisions that will have young ladies ages of 13 through 19 competing in modeling routines, which include Casual Wear and Formal Wear. Most importantly, Earth will display her personality and interviewing skills while interviewing with this year’s judging panel. Personality is the number one aspect that each contestant is judged on during all phases of competition.

If Earth were to win the title of Miss Teen, she would represent Toledo and the surrounding communities at the National Competition that will take place in Orlando, Florida. Over $30,000.00 in prizes and awards will be presented at the National Competition while each winner enjoys this expense paid trip of five nights and six days in Orlando, Florida.

Community businesses, organizations, and private individuals will assist Earth in participating in this year’s competition by becoming an official sponsor to her. Through sponsorship, each contestant receives all the necessary training, rehearsals, and financial support which will allow Earth to become a very confident and well-prepared contestant in this year’s Pageant.

Any business, organization, or private individual who may be interested in becoming a sponsor to Earth may contact J. Lyons at 419-870-4949.

• Here in Ohio, more than 240,000 of our citizens signed up and got covered through the ACA’s Health Insurance Marketplace in the past two years.

• Through the ACA’s expansion of Medicaid, nearly 650,000 Ohioans have gained coverage through Medicaid and the Children’s Health Insurance Program.

In addition, Obamacare is benefiting the African-American community in the following ways:

• Last year, an estimated 6 in 10 uninsured African Americans qualified for Medicaid, the Children’s Health Insurance Plan (CHIP), or lower costs on monthly premiums through the Health Insurance Marketplace.

• 7.8 million African Americans with private insurance now have access to preventive services like mammograms or flu shots with no co-pay or deductible

• More than 500,000 African-American young adults between the ages of 19 and 26 who would have been uninsured now have coverage under their parents’ plan.

• 2.3 million African Americans (ages 18-64) gained health insurance coverage, lowering the uninsured rate among African Americans by 6.8 percentage points.
Incarceration Nations: A Journey to Justice in Prisons Around the World by Baz Dreisinger

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

You do the crime, you do the time.
If you’re willing, in other words, to misbehave or break the law, you need to be willing to face consequences. But what if the crime doesn’t match the punishment? What if your sentence doesn’t have a period at the end? Or what if, as you’ll see in Incarceration Nations by Baz Dreisinger, you didn’t commit a crime at all?

As a white Jewish English professor who focuses on African-American cultural studies and is passionate about working with about-to-be-released prisoners, Baz Dreisinger says she’s used to surprising people. Her “peculiar blend of identities” is unique – and so was her idea of a two-year journey to visit prisons around the world.

The statistics that spurred her are “devastating.” More than two million people are behind bars in America, making the U.S. the “world’s largest jailer.” There are more African Americans in jail today than were enslaved 166 years ago; one in 14 black men is incarcerated in the States. American prisons hold 160,000 “lifers,” as compared to fewer than sixty lifers in Australia.

America’s prison model, says Dreisinger, is exported around the world. But the world, as she discovered, altered those plans.

In Rwanda, where violence between Hutus and Tutsis horrified us a generation ago, she discovered that bribery and corruption are “rampant” but prison programs bring criminals and victims together to attempt forgiveness.

In South Africa, in the prison where Nelson Mandela was held, she learned that apologies are nice, but a phone call to a prisoner’s mother does even more.

In Uganda, where overcrowding leads to horrific conditions and corruption is “endemic,” she learns that prisoners are hungry for beauty in words. In Thailand, she toured women’s prisons where guards are required to know women by their names and faces, not their numbers. She visited Australia, which began as a penal colony; Singapore, a “Disneyland with a death penalty” and an exciting re-entry program; and Norway, where prisoners can “spend up to half” their sentences off-premises.

When Incarceration Nations first crossed my desk, I expected to read horror story after horror story but, surprisingly, that’s not at all what I got. Instead, there’s a lot in here about recidivism, reentry, and forgiveness.

While I suppose one could argue that, in the making of this book, author Baz Dreisinger saw only what officials wanted her to see, there’s much more to this story: Dreisinger was nevertheless still able to draw statistical parallels between American prisons and, say, Singapore’s, where recidivism rates are far less than in the U.S.; or Norway’s, where prisoners are jailed near their home communities.

Furthermore, Dreisinger uses her experiences as the founder of the Prison-to-College Pipeline program in New York to show how punishment is more effective if there’s a glint of hope tied up in it.

This is not a soft-on-crime book; instead, it’s more a meditation on making prisons more productive, instead of merely a warehouse for individuals. And if that’s a concern of yours, then Incarceration Nations is truly worth your time.

He then spoke to his supporters of his dismay at the general mean-spiritedness of today’s politics, both on a state and national level.

He noted that Republicans in the Ohio General Assembly have crusaded to reduce unemployment benefits from the 26-week level. “Twenty-six weeks of unemployment benefits gives you a sense of dignity. Republicans say 26 weeks is too long. They want 12 weeks,” explained Ashford.

On a national level, with contentious contests in both major parties, Ashford, a Hillary Clinton supporter, added: “this is just as important as the last two presidential elections.”

Ashford will be facing relatively token opposition in the fall against Republican John Insco.

the city and communities or your water bill will triple; we have to bring everyone in as investors and not just as customers,” said Gerken.

Others at the breakfast table mentioned their concerns about major issues facing their community. Butts, a bail bondsman, spoke of the pressing issue of juvenile crime. McCollough spoke of the problems facing adolescents and adults re-entering society after incarceration. Colbert touched on the subject of the prevalence of drugs among adolescents, particular prescription drugs.

“We are not social workers by degree, but we all are social workers,” said Brown, addressing the fact that those in the African-American community have to possess a heightened awareness of the need for such social services around the clock.

Stevens voiced his concern for increasing the opportunities for vocational training such as Penta offers but has generally not been as available to students since Macomber High closed years ago.

“We have to give these kids an opportunity to develop skills and do something else besides either going to college OR doing drugs.”

Pastor James emphasized the need the basic necessities of life such as food, the type of assistance his church and congregation focus on.

Perryman, whose Center of Hope agency operates a Fatherhood Initiative program, spoke of the fact that those organizations providing services should not have to operate in a vacuum and pretend that “you are going to meet everyone’s needs.” She praised Gerken for his vision over the years and his assistance in helping community programs such as hers.

Gerken, a Democrat and long-time union official, was appointed to Toledo City Council in 1996, won election to Council in his own right twice and has held the commissioner’s office since 2005. He is being challenged in November’s general election by former Toledo Mayor Mike Bell, who is running as a Republican.
