Embracing Uniqueness: Our Way With Food
By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.
The Truth Contributor

With the improvisational genius that gave the world jazz, we have cooked our way into the hearts, minds and stomachs of a country.

- Jessica B. Harris

What would America be like without soul food?
Soul, wrote famed writer Ralph Ellison, is “an expression of American diversity within unity, of blackness with whiteness (that) announces the presence of a creative struggle against the realities of struggle,” (1970).

As we enter year 2017, we are witnessing a powerful assault on difference and an attempt to silence alternative perspectives. Yet, diversity, in the words of Allan D. Callahan, PhD, “safeguards human creativity, potential and responsibility” and is “one of our most potent weapons against hegemony,” (2008, 158).

In the year ahead, we will need to embrace our uniqueness and values if we are going to successfully resist the looming winds of cultural and political domination.

How, you ask?

Nothing has survived the Middle Passage from Africa to America like our love affair with our food. Historically food, for our community, has been both a means of resistance and survival.

For the month of January, 2017 then, we can embrace our uniqueness and diversity through our love of soul food. The following is a list of my favorite soul food main and side dishes.

My Favorite Soul Food Main Dishes:

#1 – Iron-Skillet Deep Fried Chicken: No Southern dish is more beloved. Historically, it was a staple in the shoe-box lunches we carried on car trips to visit relatives living in the South. Currently fried chicken is a constant wherever black folk congregate - from church dinners to after-hours gatherings. Whether for a weekday or Sunday meal, the best fried chicken is crispy on the outside and completely cooked down to the bone.
#2 – Smothered Pork Chops: Comfort food extraordinaire! Smother shoulder chops using gravy and onions until tender. My recipe for this dish has been passed down from several generations on my wife’s side as well as my own.
#3 – Jambalaya: Created in the rice kitchens of South Carolina and migrating later (according to legend) to Louisiania, this dish makes your taste buds leap for joy and combines traditional vegetables, herbs and spices with exotic and/or international varieties along with Velveeta and domestics.
#4 – Fried Fish: Catfish or Rainbow Trout work well, as does Tilapia. Be sure to keep a bottle of Louisiana (The Perfect) Hot Sauce close by. I like my fish fried crispy and coated with seasoned cornmeal and flour style southern breading or with Cracker Meal for a contemporary take. Pair with southern hushpuppies or French fries and your favorite beverage.
#5 – Smothered Cube Steak: A nice weekday dish or for Sunday after church. Serve with gravy over plain white rice for a superlative winter comfort dish. Be sure to use fresh garlic (not powder) and onions.

Strahorn Comments on Vetoes of Energy Standards “Goals,” Government Shutdown Legislation

Ohio House Democratic Leader Fred Strahorn (D-Dayton) last week expressed support for vetoes of several bills, including legislation to change...
Ohio Legislature Threatens Job Growth with Energy Standard Redo

Bucks leading business movement to renewable energy sources

State Rep. Michael Ashford (D-Toledo) last month criticized the passage of House Bill (HB) 554, saying legislation that changes the state’s energy efficiency standards to unenforceable “goals” through 2019 will harm consumers and jeopardize thousands of manufacturing and development jobs in Ohio’s advanced energy industry.

“HB 554 freezes the energy efficient standards, stops Peak demand programs, and eliminates economic development. Since 2007 SB 221 implemented standards clearly stating that 25% will be dedicated to wind and solar. Based on utility reports, energy efficient programs would save customers $4 billion in reduced electric bills over the next decade”, said Ashford. “Approximately $15 billion have been invested in company infrastructures that provide wind and solar power to their communities. HB 554 sends a negative message to investors.”

Ohio’s energy efficiency standards were originally passed with overwhelming bipartisan support in 2008. According to various reports, the standards have since saved consumers over $1 billion in energy costs, helped create thousands of jobs in the state’s advanced energy industry, and were on track to reduce an estimated 23 million tons of annual carbon pollution by 2029, helping prevent thousands of lost work days, asthma attacks, heart attacks and premature deaths.

The nation and world’s leading companies are increasingly turning to renewable energy sources to power their businesses. Some of the largest corporate brands – including Apple, Coca-Cola Enterprises, Facebook, General Motors, Google, Microsoft, Nike, Cincinnati-based Proctor & Gamble, Starbucks, Walmart and more – have all publicly pledged to procure 100 percent of their electricity from renewable energy sources by a certain date in the near future.

Amazon Web Services, Inc., an Amazon.com subsidiary, recently announced plans to build a $300 million wind farm in Hardin County, Ohio, in addition to their 100-megawatt wind farm in nearby Paulding County that is expected to start producing electricity next May.

“Our neighboring states like Michigan, Indiana, and Pennsylvania have increased their energy efficient requirements.” Rep Ashford states “We are very proud that the Ohio State University program is one of the four best football teams in the country; however, we should work on improving our status as the 30th state in the country when it comes to implementing quality requirements for energy efficient programs.”

Thanks to the state energy efficiency standards, Ohio had an opportunity to position itself as a leader in the burgeoning renewable energy industry. The future of the roughly 7,200 Ohio businesses and approximately 89,000 Ohio workers currently supported by Ohio’s clean energy industry is now uncertain following the passage of SB 554.

Lucas County Commissioners Sworn In ... Again

Sojourner’s Truth Staff

Democrats Pete Gerken and Tina Skeldon Wozniak both won re-election in November and were sworn in last week to start their next terms on the Lucas County Board of Commissioners.

Skeldon Wozniak took her oath of office on December 29 at the J. Frank Troy Senior Center; Gerken on December 30 in the Lucas County Commissioners boardroom at One Government Center.

Both commissioners noted the challenges ahead and their key concerns for the next four years.

“The Board of Lucas County Commissioners aren’t afraid to fight for clean water,” said Skeldon Wozniak on Thursday at the J. Frank Troy Center. “We aren’t afraid to fight for economic development and jobs. The bottom line is, it’s all about all of us. These seniors have raised families and helped make this community strong. I’m here to show respect because you can’t lead if you don’t know what people need.”

Gerken took a moment to salute the Commissioner’s staff, many of whom were in attendance the following day. “My commitment to this staff is to support you as you have supported me,” said Gerken. “We will continue to battle poverty; we will continue to create jobs; we will continue to work on clean water; we will continue to work on criminal justice reform.”

Skeldon Wozniak was sworn in by her friend, Lucas County Juvenile Court Judge Denise Cub-

The seven principles celebrated each year are Umoja (Unity); Kujichagulia (Self-determin-ination); Ujima (Collective work and responsibility); Ujamaa (Cooperative Economics); Nia (Purpose); Kuumba (Creativity) and Imani (Faith).

This is the 50th year of Kwanzaa, a holiday created by Maulana Karenga in 1966 as an African-American holiday. For decades now, Toledoans have carried forth the tradition. The current Kwanzaa Committee includes: Diane Gordon, Donald Lynn, Rev. Kenneth Peterson, Oscar Shaheer, Rolita Noble, Ruth Ashford, Earnestine Harris, Washington Muhammad and Alisha Smith.

Joining the celebration this year were the international students of American Cultural Exchange Service (ACES).

ACES is a non-profit organization dedicated to global education through secondary level exchange and is designated by the Office of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the U.S. State Department. The students visit Toledo for one academic year, living with host families, attending school and becoming involved in extracurricular and community activities.

ACES has a relationship with more than 60 countries and the local international coordinator is Tracee Ellis who encourages a diversity of American host families to experience the opportunity, particularly minority families.

Ellis can be reached at TraceeEllis.goglobal@aol.com or 419-450-0631. The ACES website is exploreteworld.org.

WE ARE A FULL SERVICE BUSINESS
Happy New Year! It’s a good time for reflection, a new start and rededication to healthy living. Why not go for the best health you can reach? Kathi Kemper, the director of Center for Integrative Health and Wellness at Ohio State University’s Wexner Medical Center suggests six strategies to employ for optimal health.

This article will focus on nutrition for health and wellness but nutrition alone does not dictate a healthy lifestyle. To paraphrase Kemper’s list, here are six integrated tactics for a healthy year.

1. Choose a healthy eating pattern and avoid consuming toxins like tobacco, excessive alcohol or misuse of prescription medications.
2. Balance physical exercise and rest throughout a 24 hour day. Make an effort to workout 30-60 minutes most days of the week and to sleep seven to nine hours each night.
3. Build healthy, supportive relationships with family, friends, neighbors and colleagues.
4. Find meaning, purpose and connection with something greater than the individual self.
5. Seek out healthy, supportive physical and social environments.
6. Practice mind-body exercises for healthy emotions.

Please keep in mind that all six strategies are essential for optimal health, resilience, and effectiveness. While this article focuses on nutrition, this does not mean that any of the other five points are less important. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans promotes healthy eating as one of the most powerful tools we have to reduce the onset of diet related diseases. And when we combine healthy eating with other healthy habits, we can reach our optimal health easier.

For general health (and not necessarily weight loss) the Department of Health and Human Services’ Physical Activity Guidelines for Americans, suggest that adults need at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity physical activity each week and should perform muscle-strengthening exercises on two or more days each week.

Children ages six to 17 years need at least 60 minutes of physical activity per day, including aerobic, muscle-strengthening, and bone-strengthening activities. Balance this exercise goal with a healthy diet and celebrate a healthy new year.

Healthy, supportive relationships are good for both our disposition as well as our physical health. Who we eat with can have an important influence on our food choices. Are your friends and loved ones choosing more healthful food over less healthy options? It’s a good time to either appreciate their good influence on you or you can decide to be the one who influences others in a positive way.

Talk with your loved ones and discover ways to support one another in healthy lifestyle choices. Can you meet to exercise together? Can you share healthy meals? Can you help encourage one another when you ever feel like giving up on your new healthy habits?

As important as individual choices are in regards to health, everyone has a role to create healthy community spaces to support those individual choices. Strategy number five promotes “seek out healthy, supportive physical and social environments.” The Dietary Guidelines for Americans reminds us to think about healthier environments in all of the spaces we visit throughout the week.

• Home can be a great place to find out what works for you. Is your family willing to try some new foods or recipes? How can you help one another live your optimal health?
• Many students each lunch and breakfast at school during the week. Schools have the goal of providing healthy meals based on guidelines to meet the nutritional needs of students. Encourage stu...
Essential Oils 101

By Dianne Pettis, CRNP

The Truth Contributor

I was inspired to write this month about pure essential oils after having some swelling and joint pain in my hand, which rendered me near tears and unable to work effectively in examining patients.

I have used certified pure therapeutic grade (CPTG) essential oils for several years now; about the only thing in my medicine cabinet is ibuprofen. Ibuprofen wasn’t helping at all. I applied a blend of juniper berry, rosemary, and lemon oils to my hand before I went to sleep. The next day, the redness was gone; the pain was gone; and the swelling was barely noticeable. Amazing!

Essential oils have been around since the beginning of early civilization. They were used as a part of religious ceremonies, in healing, embalming, in cosmetics, and in perfumes. They began to regain popularity in the mid-19th century for use as fragrances in various products. Since then, there has been a great amount of research to investigate how best to use the oils, and to determine safety.

Essential oils are easily evaporating liquids that are distilled from all parts of a plant. Their chemical and therapeutic properties are determined by many variables; such as the part of the plant used, the season, the climate, the country grown in and the type of distillation process.

Not all brands of oils are the same. I use doTERRA certified pure therapeutic grade essential oils because I want to have confidence in the safety and benefits. CPTG oils can be more costly than what you may find in a drug store or a discount store. This is because getting the purest oils may require using hundreds of pounds of plant material just to extract one pound of pure essential oil.

Essential oils have many beneficial properties. They are powerful anti-oxidents. Anti-oxidents neutralize the action of free radicals; substances that are produced by the body during normal metabolic processes. The body uses the presence of free radicals as a signal to perform many regulatory functions. Free radicals are also created by pollution and radiation. When free radicals outnumber the body’s natural anti-oxidents, cell injury occurs – such as damage to proteins, tissues and DNA.

Other properties of essential oils are antibacterial, antifungal, antitumor, antiparasitic, antiviral, and antiseptic. This is why I reached for my oils as help for my hand. Research has shown pure essential oils to destroy harmful bacteria, viruses and provide immune support. They also support the liver in detoxification of the blood.

The oils have systemic (throughout the body) effects and local effects at the site of application. Systemically, the oils are absorbed into the blood stream and distributed throughout the body via the circulatory system. They are then metabolized by the liver and excreted from the body by the kidneys, lungs, and intestines.

The oil molecules get into the body by three routes: inhalation, topically and internally. When you breathe in the fragrance of an oil, the molecules are sensed by the olfactory nerve cells and surrounding tissues. The receptors in these tissues (cilia) bind to specific odor molecules and send signals to five different structures in the brain. This chemical process ends up producing physiological and psychological effects.

When the oils are placed or rubbed directly onto the skin, they cross the top layer, and are absorbed into the capillaries of the tissues below. Massages, compresses or placement into bath water are ways the oils can be used topically.

Unison Behavioral Health Group, in partnership with Mercy Health and support from the Mental Health & Recovery Services Board, is announcing the creation of a treatment facility to address the growing opioid addiction issue in Toledo. Unison will open a subacute detoxification unit to provide needed medically supervised detoxification services. Unison will develop space at 1212 Cherry Street to support an inpatient subacute detoxification unit which will complement already existing outpatient treatment services at this facility. Unison will enhance its clinical partnership with Mercy Health to develop clinical programs and services to serve adult, chemically dependent men and women. The new 16 resident unit will include both private and two-person rooms.

According to Jeff De Lay, Unison’s president and CEO, “Ohio’s number one ranking in deaths related to opioid overdoses underscores the urgency of the project and our collective desire to move forward.” Addressing the public health epidemic associated with heroin and prescription drug abuse is a top priority for Unison, Mercy Health, and the Mental Health and Recovery Services Board of Lucas County. Support and collaboration with Jeff Dempsey, president and CEO at Mercy Health, and Scott Sylak, executive director at the Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Lucas County, are integral to the success of this project and to improve the overall health of our community.

The facility will be accredited by The Joint Commission and certified by the Ohio Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services and will include both medical and behavioral health support, including 24/7/365 nursing and primary care services. Set to open in the spring of 2017, the expansion is expected to create 19 full-time jobs.

“At Mercy Health, our 161-year mission guides us to care for the whole patient – mind, body and spirit – and we are honored to build on our clinical partnership with Unison at this new facility, which is critically needed in our community to care for those struggling with opiate addiction,” said Jeff Dempsey, president and CEO for Mercy Health – St. Charles Hospital. “Our Behavioral Health Institute leaders and clinical experts at St. Vincent and St. Charles will work in partnership with Unison to enhance the health and well-being of our community.”

Six Easy Ways to Take Better Care of Your Health

Special to The Truth

A new year is an excellent opportunity to assess your health and resolve to make positive lifestyle changes.

“Many people work hard to establish healthy habits at the beginning of the year. But for those with busy schedules and tight budgets, maintaining these habits over time can be a challenge,” says Jill Turner-Mitchael, senior vice president of Sam’s Club, Consumables and Health and Wellness.

To help people prioritize and maintain their health in 2017, Turner-Mitchael and Sam’s Club pharmacists are offering tips that are practical and affordable.

• Secure Regular Screenings: It is important to get regular health screenings to keep track of the state of your health. Routine tests are often the first to get postponed when people get busy, but they are crucial for ensuring any potential medical issues are identified and addressed as early as possible.

Resist the urge to let cost or time constraints prevent you from getting regular check-ups. For example, free health screenings are often available at Sam’s Club, which offers a full suite of affordable health care offerings. These screenings are open to both members and the public at no cost, covering a wide range of tests to assess various health factors. Don’t forget regular vision and hearing tests, as well.

• Ask Questions: Don’t be afraid to ask questions and seek out advice for improving your health. One easily accessible professional resource that is often overlooked is your local pharmacist. Before visiting the pharmacy, consider whether you have any health questions and jot them down. Pharmacists are eager to help people understand their medications and health, and you don’t need to go through the hassle of making an appointment.

• Focus on Fresh Foods: Incorporating fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean protein and legumes into your meals can help you maintain a healthy weight, while also building your immunity and muscles. Smoothies, leafy green salads, vegetable stews and grilled fish are all great choices. You can also boost flavor with low-calorie ingredients that offer nutritional benefits, such as garlic, onion, spices and herbs.

Some retailers today make it easy for shoppers to identify nutritious items. For example, Sam’s Club highlights healthy, organic foods with green tags.

• Select Supplements: Even the best diet can fall short of nutritional guidelines. Consider consulting with your healthcare professional about boosting your diet with a daily multivitamin or supplement tailored to your individual health needs.

• Verify Your Vaccinations: Immunizations can help prevent illness and save lives. Make sure you are current on all necessary vaccinations. Talk to your pharmacist about what vaccines you might need, which varies by age.

• Enjoy Winter Workouts: You don’t have to become a world class body builder or competitive triathlete to reap the health benefits of exercise. Exercise can help everyone boost immunity, improve cardiovascular fitness and speed up metabolism.

Even just committing to a midday walk or opting to take the stairs can make a big difference.

Some people find they are more likely to stick to a workout plan if they enlist friends or coworkers to join them. Many people also find it helpful to track their fitness goals and progress using wearable technology and smart scales, which can provide information on everything from your heart rate to your body mass index.

For more tips and information about affordable health care services and free screenings, visit SamsClub.com.

Start 2017 off right by committing to better health.

Some books and internet sites state that oils can never be taken internally. This is true for oils that are not certified pure. Only CPTG oils that are approved by the FDA and classified GRAS (Generally Recognized As Safe) may be taken internally. Approved oils can be taken in capsules, placed under the tongue, and used in cooking. I use lemon oil in my drinking water all the time. There is caution for some groups; as certain oils may not be used in pregnancy, for children, if you taking certain medications, or used internally as mentioned. Contact a certified aromatherapist if you have questions regarding use and safety.

The Best Books of 2016

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

Got books?
Yep, if you were me, the answer would be, “Ohhh, yeah!” Shelves of them, in fact, over the last 52 weeks, and here are some of the better choices I read in 2016, in no particular order:

FICTION:
I’m not sure why, but I couldn’t stop touching I Will Send Rain by Rae Meadows when I first got it. The cover pulled at me, but the story? Oh, my, it’s the tale of a family of four during the Dust Bowl years. The mother, Annie Bell, is trying desperately to hold her family together while her daughter dreams a dangerous dream, her son is mute, and her husband slowly goes mad. There’s a surprise in here, a fifth main character, and that’s the dust. Do. Not. Miss. This. Book.

Not normally a big fan of fictionalized biographies, Mrs. Houdini by Victoria Kelly nonetheless captivated me with its magic. It’s a tale of love and illusion, believing, trust, and it includes a gauzy ending that might seem implausible but who knows? Hint: if you can bear it, save your gift card. This book comes out in paperback in March.

Generally speaking, I’ll read anything by Emma Donoghue. She has a way of turning a tiny, true event into a novel that sticks in your head, and The Wonder is no exception. It’s the story of a very confident, almost haughty nurse who served with Florence Nightingale and seems to think that stint confers some sort of specialness. When she’s hired to watch a child who claims not to eat or drink, the nurse thinks the girl is a scammer – but, of course, there’s so much more to the story and an ending that’s so perfect, it’s stunning. Write this title down. It’s another book you can’t miss.

A vision of the apocalypse is at root in The Fireman by Joe Hill. It’s a novel about a virus that’s infected the world, and if you catch it, you burn. Poof, up in flames, and it’s pitting neighbor against neighbor and husband against wife. There’s a surprising romance in this book, thrills, a chase, humor, and horror, and here’s a hint: there are shades of Hill’s father in here. Guess who?

For my fifth pick, I debated: Britt-Marie Was Here or And Every Morning the Way Home Gets Longer and Longer, both by Fredrik Backman? I finally decided on the latter, the story of life and loss, forgetting around won’t make much sense. Turn around and read it again – it’s really short, so no problem – and bring tissues that time. It’s truly a lovely book.

NONFICTION
As I was looking over the list of things I read, I was surprised to remember how much I enjoyed Neither Snow nor Rain by Devin Leonard. Overall, this book is about the U.S. Postal Service and its history. The thing that makes this book so much fun, though, is that Leonard also includes so many side-stories that it becomes more of a general history that’s light and fun. Fans of Bill Bryson, take note and find this book.

Hint: Britt-Marie is a close, very close second-pick.

Another something that’s informative and a little on the light side is Playing Dead by Elizabeth Greenwood. I mean, how many times a week does the average person wish they could chuck it all and disappear somewhere? Greenwood looks into that: how it’s done, what it’s like, and the impacts it has on loved ones. You might change your mind. Or you might want to disappear even more. Either way, this is a can’t-miss.

As a Baby Boomer, They Left Us Everything by Plum Johnson particularly resonated with me, which is why it really has to be on this list. Johnson’s parents were both elderly and had lived in their oversized house for decades. When they died relatively close in time, Johnson and her brothers were tasked with cleaning up, but not just the house. They also had memories to examine and scrub. This is a book for daughters, particularly, but also for anyone who’s facing the downsizing of a home or end-of-life caretaking.

In a political year, you might guess that an abundance of political books might be published – and you’d be right. My pick for the best in that category is Nixon’s Gamble by Ray Locker, who takes a brief look at Nixon’s early career before digging into the moves that the President made, starting on the day of his inauguration. Even if you think you know what happened nearly half a century ago… you don’t. For history lovers of any age or place, this is an eye-opener.

I don’t think I would have liked Another Day in the Death of America by Gary Younge quite as much if it had been laser-focused. Nope, Younge took one random day in recent years, and he writes about the 10 children who died of gunshot wounds in the U.S. on that day. It’s that randomness that’s so shocking, especially when you consider the statistic he cites: an average of seven children die by gun every day in America – and the circumstances Younge found make this book even more impactful.

CHILDREN/YOUNG ADULT BOOKS

Putting The Bill the Cat Story by Berkley Breathed on the kids’ Best Of list might be cheating a little bit because this book is only partly something for kids. True, the kiddoes will love the illustrations and older children might laugh at the storyline, but this book is every bit for adults as it is for the younger set. Grown-ups will love the message inside this book; fans of Breathed’s Bloom County will appreciate knowing about Binkley’s first days with Bill, and the insider peek at Opus’ home. I don’t say this lightly: it’s a book for the whole family.

I’m not sure if I was ready for its light breeziness, but Being Jazz by Jazz Jennings was the right book at the right time when I read it last summer. You might have seen Jennings on the news; as a transgender teen, she’s become somewhat of a spokesperson for trans rights and acceptance. Her book is gossipy, bubbly, and truthful – she proactively answers questions that teens want to know, without embarrassment. Hint: this is a great book for adults, too.

Another book that caught me by surprise (because I loved it so much) was Mama Loved to Worry by Maryann Weidt, illustrated by Rachael Balsaitis. In the same vein as the Pecos Bill, Sue-Foot Sue, and Paul Bunyan stories you loved as a kid, this is a book set on a farm, with a Mama whose tasks grow larger in both action and in fable.

The pictures are as much fun as the story, and you’ll love it just as much as does your child – especially when it’s read aloud. There’s a lot of cleverness inside The Night Parade by Kathryn Tanquary – enough to keep a lover of darkness up all night. It’s the story of a Japanese-American girl who tries to fit in with the “in” crowd by disrespecting her ancestors, and yes, her actions have scary repercussions. Older middle schoolers not prone to nightmares will love this, as will younger adults who are just stepping into this genre. Hint: save your gift cards. This book comes out in paperback in January.

And finally, This is Where It Ends by Marieke Nijkamp is a chillingly unexpected tale of a school shooting and heroism, with realism and timeliness that will shock you. That’s not counting the story itself, told in minute-by-minute increments that will make you forget you’re not reading a real account of a tragedy. Again, this isn’t just a YA book. It’s something adults should also want to read.

And now the paperwork: look for these books at your local library or bookstore. If you can’t find them, ask your favorite bookseller or librarian, who is surely wearing a Super Hero cape beneath his or her clothing.
