Who should be afraid of black lives matter? A social movement continuing the spirit of the 1950s and 1960s!

The ability to excel and live to one’s full potential can be attributed to the preparations made.

A profound and objective reflection of the role and place of people in society shows that race is a critical factor, yet discussions on race are often avoided. It is like the proverbial elephant in the room; it is ignored and in most cases denied.

This can be attributed to historical and structural injustices that affect mostly minorities; therefore, it is convenient for the dominant culture to let it continue. This has grave cyclic implications to the earnings and the ability of the minorities to live to their capacity, as well as for intergenerational poverty. This failure is a high motivation for advocates such as Black Lives Matter (BLM).

The history of race in America is deeply rooted in the fabric of the society, recalling the condition of black people during slavery. The slaves were an economic resource to the owners and giving up that resource was such a huge risk that blood was shed to make it come to pass through the Civil War.

The emancipation amendment of President Abraham Lincoln in 1863 proclaimed slaves free. However, some states of the union refused implementation. This abnormal situation was to be corrected by the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, called the Civil War or Reconstruction Amendments, enacted between 1865 and 1870.

The vision was to integrate the free slaves into the society by banning involuntary servitude unless decreed by the state as a punishment. However, the various Jim Crow laws, including the separate but equal rules sanctioned by the U.S. Supreme Court in Plessy v. Ferguson, was a product of a lack of empathy and a lack of desire for integration of all races.

The 1954 landmark decision of Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas was a definite blow to the hegemony of the dominant group. It made segregation in schools illegal, marking the beginning of the reluctant acceptance of people of color into former all-white schools. The Montgomery bus boycott in 1955 by blacks that lasted 381 days started with the refusal of Rosa Parks to give up her seat on a bus in Montgomery. It was not an isolated case but a high point in a period of resistance.

The Civil Rights era of the 1950s and 1960s was a transformative period for people of color. Various passive and active, nonviolent methods led to a raising of awareness among the general population of the plight of blacks and other people of color. This became a national issue and movement that resulted in some changes. This movement was multiethnic and multicultural at all levels.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was one of the leaders of the movement. However, in the cause of history, there is always a moment that changes the trajectory of events. The phenomenon called BlackLivesMatters

So, Did It Have to Come to This?

To say I was amazed would be an understatement of the first degree. When I read the following, I was shell shocked. I was frozen in place. It was as if I was dipped by a giant, unseen hand into a vat of glacier ice. I was numb.

I was disoriented and then suddenly realized that others, unspecified others, were also commenting and watching what I have been watching for some time with the antics of those I have dubbed, “The Super Six” (which is composed of the mayor and the then-five minority city council members). But, I had no idea of the depth of the frustration that was dwelling in some people who were flummoxed by the torpid acts of the Super Six to the economic plight of residents in what is described as the “central” or “inner” city of Toledo.

I was alerted to this breaking news when I checked my smart phone for local news and POW!...there it was.

This is what I read:

“A secret, civil, grand jury was convened in Toledo regarding allegations of misfeasance of the mayor and several council members as to their actual or perceived inability to develop a strategy for the development of economically depressed areas.”

I must confess that as a lawyer, I had no idea such a civil grand jury could be convened simply by a signed petition of 200 registered voters and such a petition would, by law, require the city prosecutor’s office to present evidence against the mayor and the other minority members.

I learned that a Mr. Arnold Cranby, a lifelong resident on Batavia Street, initiated this petition drive. He comments to me were, “Enough is enough...do something!”

So, I went to the city prosecutor’s office and obtained a copy of their mandated authority to convene such a secret civil grand jury and the enabling city legislation that would allow such charges against the mayor and the other “Super Six” members.

This is what I found in the Toledo Municipal Code and the code section that originated in 1959 through the Herculean efforts of Toledo’s first minority vice mayor, the now deceased attorney and civil rights legend, J.B. Simmons Jr.

It appeared from the commentary explaining this code section that it was enacted to make sure that city funds were fairly apportioned to all sections of the city and if not, a secret civil grand jury could be convened and civil charges could be brought against the mayor and city council for failing to do their sworn duties.

Again, I had no idea such an arcane municipal code section even existed, but here it is under the Section entitled: CITY FUNDING AND MUNICIPAL DEVELOPMENT:

T.M.C. section 403.21(A)(1)(c): BE IT ENACTED THAT: The elected Mayor of the City of Toledo and City Council shall be empowered to allocate city general funds in such a manner that each section of the City of Toledo is empowered to develop economic plans that will cause such affected section to achieve reasonable equalize economic parity with other sections of the City of Toledo without regard to race or ethnic backgrounds of the affected citizens in that section of the City of Toledo. The mayor and city council are to be affirmative in continuously monitoring the expenditure of said city funds to insure that the goals of this endeavor are met and they shall do so with reasonable dispatch. SO RESOLVED AND AFFIRMED ON THIS 19TH day of March 1959.

The failure of the mayor or city council to affirmatively undertake such programming and planning shall cause the city prosecutor to convene a civil grand jury for purposes of taking testimony from the affected citizens and the said grand jury, if so advised, shall issue summons and subpoenas to advance the intent of this section.

The penalty for willful violation of this code shall be a misdemeanor of the first degree and a personal fine against the mayor and each negligent member of city council of one thousand dollars. No jail time shall be imposed for a violation of this section.

Continuing disregard the implementation of this section shall cause a daily fine of one hundred dollars against said persons until a plan has been implemented and voted in the affirmative by city council and the mayor.

CIVIL GRAND JURY INDICTMENTS:

Count One: The Mayor has willfully failed to execute the functions of her office by her continuing disregard for the implementation of T.M.C. 403.21(A)(1)(c) and as amended.

Count Two: City Council person, Tyrone Riley has willfully failed to execute the functions of his office by his continuing disregard for the implementation of T.M.C. 403.21(A)(1)(c) and as amended.

House Dems Respond to GOP’s Proposed Budget Cuts of Close to $1 Billion Due to Slow Economy, Limited Growth

Special to The Truth

The lead Democrat on the House budget panel State Rep. Jack Cera (D-Bellaire) and Assistant Democratic Whip Emilia Sykes (D-Akron), also a budget committee member, issued the following statements in response to Ohio GOP leaders call for close to $1 billion in state budget cuts due to stagnant economic growth and opportunity in The Buckeye State after six years of unchecked Republican tax shifting and deep budget cuts:

“After six years of Ohio GOP policies that continue to shift taxes to working people and local communities to fund giveaways for the wealthiest one-percent, Ohio is now faced with a serious budget crisis, one that will force us all to pay the price for the failed economic policies of the past. We were promised that deep cuts to communities, deep cuts to schools, privatizing job creation and shifting taxes to give millionaires breaks would grow our economy and create jobs, but today’s announcement is proof Governor Kasich and other leaders have broken that promise.”

-State Rep. Jack Cera (D-Bellaire)

“Now - after having it their way without compromise for six years has brought us to the ‘verge of recession’ - schools, communities, the opioid fight, healthcare for developmentally disabled people and children, and other essential services will be defunded because politicians in Columbus don’t have the courage to do what’s needed to recession-proof our state. Instead of shoring up self-made shortfalls with Rainy Day money that was essentially stolen from schools and communities, Ohio will likely continue on it’s terrible economic trajectory with fewer resources to fend off this deteriorating economy.”

-State Rep. Emilia Sykes (D-Akron)

(BLM) is a product of the failure of the multicultural movement including the NAACP to continue the agitation.

The multicultural movement raised awareness of the problems of black people, but that did not lead to increased action to tackle the systemic and structural impediments that sustain and prevent blacks from greater progress in the society. It has not resulted in more social justice in the society.

The emphasis of pointing out the systemic and structural impediments to many black people seeking to reach their full potential should lead to solving the problems and making live better for blacks and people of color. The reality is that it did not change the situation on the ground; leading to the quest for new initiatives, which BLM is striving to fill. Will it succeed?

BLM strives to portray that certain lives are more valued in American society than others. The minimum is the freedom and liberty to be who blacks want and cherish to be.

The use of brutal force at the least provocation against people of color was born out of the perception that a particular group is a threat and their lives do not matter. This narrative might seem reasonable because society is gradually conditioned to see it that way. However, it is not the way it should be.

Before the rise of BLM, there was the multicultural movement, but with the success of the civil rights era, the momentum of the multicultural group started reducing.

There was confusion within the field as Christine Sleeter, college professor and education reformer, stated that most of the advocates of multiculturalism do not agree on the same sets of issues nor do they agree on the same practice for issues on which they happen to agree.

Community Group Voices Support for Victims, Urges Actions

Sojourner’s Truth Staff

The Community Solidarity Response Network held a rally at the Frederick Douglass Community Association on Saturday, April 15 to voice support for victims of sexual abuse.

“As a community we are outraged,” said L.J. Hamilton, one of the organizers. “It is time to turn that outrage into action. It is time for the people to do what the churches refuse to do. It is time for the people to do what the government will never do.”

Washington Muhammad urged the audience to volunteer at local community centers, at local schools and at blockwatch events in order to be more active in addressing the problem of violence and sexual abuse.

The event, dubbed the “Find Our Women, Save Our Girls” Rally drew several dozen supporters to listen to community activists address the issue of how to save black girls (and boys) from the type of sexual abuse that has galvanized the attention of the community in recent weeks.

In addition to Hamilton and Muhammad speakers included; Yvette Muhammad; Celia Williamson, PhD; Cece Norwood; Carter Thomas; Ruth Courtney and Cyrus Jones, II.

Brian McCarty and his children Peter and Maura; as well as Michael Jones and his son Michael Jones, Jr. participated in the press conference. Both families have been involved with RESTORE for seven years.

“The walk has been beneficial because of the exposure to other fathers who have the same challenges,” said Jones.

The Fatherhood Walk draws people from all races, creeds, and socio-economic backgrounds.

“You see all kinds of people showing up. In addition to fathers, you’ll see grandparents, uncles, cousins, who all play a role in the life of a child. The Fatherhood Walk has become almost like a family reunion,” said McCarty.

Those interested in participating in the walk can register on-line at RestoreFathers.org or the day of the walk. Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur and Toledo Library Present Open Book with Timothy Snyder

Special to The Truth

Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur and the Toledo Lucas County Public Library are partnering to welcome Yale Professor, and one of America’s leading historians and public intellectuals, Timothy Snyder. His new book, On Tyranny: Twenty Lessons from the Twentieth Century, has received high praise as an essential guide to survival and resistance for our time. Mr. Snyder will be introduced by Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur, who worked with the Library on arranging this visit.

On Tyranny, offers today’s reader a guide to identifying and understanding the frightening parallels that exist between our current reality and the reality faced by Europeans of the twentieth century. But Snyder goes further, using history to show us how to effectively resist and bring about change. On Tyranny offers invaluable ideas for how we can preserve our freedoms in the uncertain years to come through a series of twenty lessons.

Snyder first introduced these lessons in a Facebook post in November 2016 just days after the presidential election. The post has since received more than one million views, having been reposted, republished, and retweeted countless times. Snyder’s lessons have resonated with a world-wide audience and On Tyranny will be published in fourteen countries in addition to its simultaneous U.S. and UK release.

Timothy Snyder is the Housum Professor and Levin Chair of History at Yale University. He is the author of Bloodlands: Europe between Hitler and Stalin and Black Earth: The Holocaust as History and Warning. Snyder is a member of the Committee on Conscience of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum and a permanent fellow of the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna. Black Lives Matter... continued from page 4

There are many reasons for this situation in the field including links to diversity, diversity of approach, to the subject matter and the effect of the ‘single study group’ like black studies, women studies, Gay and Lesbian Studies, etc.

There is also the question of advocates who address multiple issues at the same time; these many supporters do not always agree. The expectation that multicultural education will solve all problems led to the amalgamation of different fields, ideas, and concepts, leading to what Gloria Ladson-Billings and William Tate called a ‘unity of difference,’ in their book Education Research in the Public Interest: Social Justice, Action, and Policy.

The nonalignment of the various groups is a contributing factor to the present situation of the multicultural movement that made BLM possible. Christine Sleeter claims that multicultural education was initially part of the social movement but lost steam and was subsequently hijacked by conservative elements and as a result the focus changed from group empowerment to individual advancement.

The political system is not open to movements but, rather, controlled by the elite and wealthy who do not allow social movements to rock the boat. With the transition in the leadership of the multicultural education in the 1980s and the increased diversity in social class, more European Americans took ownership of the movement and directed it from its activist past to a more accommodating phase of cultural accommodation through celebrating diversity and folklore.

It becomes an aid to teaching diversity. It is this same group that is afraid and scared of BLM. I contend that the multicultural movement has lost its bearing by being a ‘jack of trade’ and master of none. The victims of this situation were people of color.

The BLM is striving to change this narrative by bringing to national discourse the plight of blacks and people of color. It is reshaping the society by actively confronting and shaking up the system.

Therefore, BLM is the continuation of the civil rights movement era of the 1950s and 1960’s! They are only continuing where the struggle stopped. What should they do, will form the concluding part of this three-part essay!

Groomed for Greatness Introduces Girls to Role Models

Special to The Truth

Groomed for Greatness is 501(c)3 non-profit organization dedicated to introducing girls in the Toledo and surrounding area to positive female role models, providing them with the tools to be successful in life and inspiring them to do great things. Founded on February 1, 2017 by Toledo native Michelle McCaster, the organization serves girls ages four-18 and is focused on providing etiquette training, mentoring, self-esteem building, community service opportunities, financial literacy and leadership skills.

On Saturday, April 8, Groomed for Greatness hosted its first big event -- appropriately titled, the Big Reveal Event -- at the Garden Lake Hall. Twenty-eight members of the group attended along with about 175 family members and friends to hear keynote speaker Diana Patton and listen to music provided by DJ Keith Success.

Also in attendance were Council Members Larry Sykes, Cecelia Adams, PhD; Yvonne Harper, Council candidate Gary Johnson and Mayor Paula Hicks Hudson.

It is McCaster’s vision to be the mentor she wishes she had when she was younger. Her objective is to provide the young ladies she mentors to embrace who they are, to be leaders in their community and become confident and self-sufficient.

To date, the organization has been involved in various activities such as:

- The Robert Easter Parade and 12th Annual African-American Festival Parade
- Attended Author-Author series with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar sponsored by the Lucas County Library (all attendees received autographed books and met the author)
- Volunteered at the Laurels of Toledo and spent time with residents
- Participated in etiquette, photography, sewing and financial literacy courses
- Held and participated in a coupons class with the Frugalicious Divas in which donated items were sent to Mom’s House.
- Adopted five girls from Flint, Michigan and provided Christmas gifts and a party on Christmas Eve in which the young ladies fellowshipped;
- Attended the Dance Theatre of Harlem and met with performers;
- Attended the Imagination Station “Girl Power” and Bowling Green State University STEM programs;
- Attended a private showing of the movie Hidden Figures and held an essay contest about the movie;
- Made the opportunity to meet with important political figures including the Mayor Paula Hicks-Hudson, Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur, Municipal Clerk of Court Valarie Bowman-English, and members of the Toledo City Council.

In the future, the club will participate in an array of activities and cultural experiences that will foster new friendships and a true sense of self such as visits to cultural centers and events such as the Charles H. Wright Museum, Univer-Soul Circus, plays and performances, participate in workshops that will focus on etiquette, self-esteem building and life skills and engage in fun activities such as sleepovers, bonding with college mentors and family oriented programs.

Checklist: 5 Camping Essentials for a Safe and Enjoyable Adventure

More than 30 million Americans camp in tents yearly, according to the Outdoor Foundation. As with any outdoor adventure, having the necessary equipment is crucial.

Whether you’re hiking through backcountry or headed to an established campsite, this checklist will help you prepare for your expedition.

1. Navigation

Approximately nine million campers backpack to outdoor destinations, making navigation a top safety necessity. Remember that camping often means leaving behind cell coverage, Internet access or a GPS signal, making such low-tech gear as a compass and map mandatory. Other potential tools include a topographic map combined with an altimeter to help gauge your journey’s terrain and altitude.

2. Insulation

Knowing climate and weather conditions is vital. According to Backpacker.com, clothing is just as important as a tent or sleeping bag to stay insulated. Outerwear should repel rain and snow, but also breathe so you don’t get wet from perspiration. Your base layer should be made of moisture-wicking fabric -- not cotton -- to prevent chafing. Consider that day and night temperatures can differ greatly, so layer clothing, and choose materials and thicknesses appropriate for your destination -- and don’t forget a hat and extra socks.

Bring along T-Rex Clear Repair Tape to mend holes or tears in tents or clothing. It sticks to both wet and dry surfaces, ensuring an easy and instant fix to keep gear insulated in any weather condition.

3. Illumination

Campers should always bring enough illumination to be able to safely see and move after sundown, especially in case you get delayed, lost or separated from the group. While flashlights are obvious choices, headlamps are popular, as they allow for hands-free operation, and are typically small and lightweight. Another feature to consider is a strobe lighting mode for emergency situations.

Extra batteries are essential as battery lighting was the most popular purchase among adult campers in 2014, according to the Outdoor Foundation. Available in single-use or rechargeable models, ideally the batteries should offer a balance of long duration, high performance and environmental friendliness.

4. Emergency/First Aid Kit

Accidents happen to even the most experienced and best prepared campers. Your kit can prove invaluable if you, or another member of your group, are in a first-aid situation, need gear repaired or are under other tense conditions.

SectionHiker.com proposes supplies such as a pre-assembled first-aid kit, a multi-tool, knife, scissors, screwdriver and safety pins. You can then add other items based on preference and experience. A useful addition is a high-quality tape, like T-Rex Tape, as it can be used to repair hiking poles, patch sleeping bags, make a rope, temporarily stabilize an injury or broken boot, and more. T-Rex Clear Repair Tape can even be used to fix cracked GPS or phone screens and flashlights.

5. Hydration and Nutrition

Food is an enjoyable part of camping, but deciding what to bring will depend on whether you’re backpacking miles to your site or camping near your car, as well as how many days you’ll be gone. If you’re trekking far, be prepared with lightweight and nourishing options.

Water is essential but heavy, so check the area for potential natural sources. “Mountaineering” suggests carrying a collapsible water reservoir and purification tablets to ensure water safety. Freeze-dried meals are popular selections, however, no-cook meals with long shelf lives are better in arid regions. Other possibilities include energy bars, nuts, dried fruits or jerky. Never leave out animal-attracting leftovers, as that could attract unwanted intruders.

“Essentials” are called so for a reason. Don’t be caught camping without proper supplies. With these necessities, it will be easy to prepare for and enjoy your next adventure in the great outdoors.

Social Security Questions and Answers

Question:
What should I do if an employee gives me a Social Security number but cannot produce the card?
Answer:
Seeing the card is not as important as putting the correct information on the worker’s Form W-2. You can verify employee Social Security numbers by using the Social Security Number Verification Service. Just go to www.socialsecurity.gov/bso. This online service allows registered employers to verify employee Social Security numbers against Social Security records for wage reporting purposes.

Question:
I received a notice from Social Security recently. It said my name and Social Security number do not match Social Security’s records. What should I do?
Answer:
It’s critical that your name and Social Security number, as shown on your Social Security card, match your employer’s payroll records and your W-2 form. If they don’t, here is what you need to do:
Give your employer the correct information exactly as shown on your Social Security card or your corrected card; or
Contact your local Social Security office (www.socialsecurity.gov/locator) or call 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) if your Social Security card does not show your correct name or Social Security number.
For more information, visit our website at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Question:
How do I report a lost Social Security card?
Answer:
You do not have to report a lost Social Security card. In fact, reporting a lost or stolen card to Social Security will not prevent misuse of your Social Security number. You should let us know if someone is using your number to work (call 1-800-772-1213; TTY 1-800-325-0778).
If you think someone is using your number, there are several other actions you should take:
• Contact the Federal Trade Commission online at www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/microsites/idtheft or call 1-877-ID-THEFT (1-877-438-4338);
• File an online complaint with the Internet Crime Complaint Center at www.ic3.gov;
• Contact the IRS Identity Protection Specialized Unit by calling 1-800-908-4490, Monday – Friday, 8 a.m. – 8 p.m.; and
• Monitor your credit report.

Question:
Will my son be eligible to receive benefits on his retired father’s record while going to college?
Answer:
No. At one time, Social Security did pay benefits to eligible college students. But the law changed in 1981. We now pay benefits only to students taking courses at grade 12 or below. Normally, benefits stop when children reach age 18 unless they are disabled. However, if children are still full-time students at a secondary (or elementary) school at age 18, benefits generally can continue until they graduate or until two months after they reach age 19, whichever is first.

Question:
When a person who has worked and paid Social Security taxes dies, are benefits payable on that person’s record?

Your co-worker is an idiot. All day long, he’s blah-blah-blah, telling you how great he is, the coolest guy ever. If you’ve done something, he’s done it better. Twice. You’d love it if the boss fired the jerk, but then you’d be short-handed and that’s no good, either. So read The Schmuck in My Office by Jody J. Foster, MD MBA (with Michelle Joy, MD) and find out a better way of dealing with him.

When she was in business school, Foster, a psychiatrist, was often amused and pleased to be a go-to person when conflicts arose. Classmates constantly asked for help in dealing with others who rankled them, and she was usually successful in smoothing ruffled feathers and feelings. So what are her secrets?

First of all, she says, don’t assume that people are being jerks on purpose. Most folks act one way or other when they think they’re doing the right thing, or because they haven’t been told any differently. Often-times, they don’t know they’re bugging someone with their behavior, so Foster advocates compassion when dealing with conflicts. Consider the other person’s story and way of thinking. It helps to step into their shoes.

Then, and though Foster very strongly stresses that this book is not a psychiatry manual and that you shouldn’t make armchair diagnoses, understand that there are several basic kinds of office schmucks you might encounter in your worklife.

Narcissists – up to 75 percent of which are men – thrive on compliments and hate being ignored. The “Venus Flytrap” loves chaotic and unstable relationships (think: Fatal Attraction). The Swindler only cares about the deal, and only if it benefits himself. “The Bean Counter” is obsessive and has difficulty letting things go, while Distracted people let go too easily. And then there are those with serious substance abuse problems, undiagnosed illnesses, true cultural differences, or just plain eccentricities.

Finally, says Foster, when you’re angry and digging for any possible reason to lend a shrewd of compassion, don’t forget to look inside.

“Go get the mirror,” she says. “Hurry.” And then go back and read the chapter entitled “Important Disclaimers.” As you’re reading The Schmuck in My Office, you can’t keep them in mind enough.

That’s because using real psychiatric diagnoses to battle an office pest can be fraught with danger, and author Jody J. Foster (with Michelle Joy) is careful to repeatedly warn readers of this. Yes, the possibilities are undeniably interesting and can explain so much, and it’s the rare person who hasn’t smugly rattled off a layman’s diagnosis for an office bother, but remembering that “There is an important distinction between personality traits… and personality disorders” is the key to using this book. It helps that the authors also offer end-of-chapter hints for both workers and bosses, too.

Though it’s not a handbook, this is fascinating. It may even teach you some compassion, so it’s recommended for anyone who works with others, shares an office, or is a supervisor. The Schmuck in My Office may get you fired… up.

RESTORE’s Seventh Annual Fatherhood Walk Scheduled for June 10

Mark Robinson, founder and executive director, RESTORE, Inc., announced last week that the Seventh Annual Fatherhood Walk, an event aimed at creating awareness of the roles fathers play in the lives of their children, will be held on Saturday, June 10, 2017, from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., at Central Catholic High School, 2550 Cherry St., near Downtown Toledo.

Robinson made the announcement at a press conference in front of Central Catholic High School, along with two families who have participated in the six previous Fatherhood Walks.

RESTORE, a non-profit, 501(c) 3 organization founded in 2006, hosts the annual community event which last year drew over 200 participants. Over 2,000 people have participated in the event over the last six years.

The two-mile walk through the surrounding neighborhoods will start and end at Central Catholic High School’s parking lot. In addition to the walk, there will be family fun activities taking place immediately following on the school’s lawn.

Sponsors and supporters for the 2017 Fatherhood Walk include The City of Toledo, McDonalds, Seaway Marketplace, Lucas County Family and Children First Council, House of Day Funeral Home, Systems Dynamics Communications, Buckeye Health Plan, Molina HealthCare, Walmart, Target, and TPS Head Start. Media sponsors are Buckeye Broadband, Lamar Advertising, WIMX 95.7 FM, and WTOL.

“We want to draw attention to the significant roles fathers play in the lives of their children,” said Robinson. “Research confirms that children do better in every measure of development when there is a responsible father in their lives. The Fatherhood Walk is free to the community to show support of fathers, father figures, & mentors, and to strengthen families and the community.”

Former Toledo City Councilwoman Theresa M. Gabriel who is part of an honorary committee for the Fatherhood Walk echoed Robinson’s comment.
