Bridging Cultural Differences

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.

The Truth Contributor

[We live in a world] where inclusion is critical and connection is inevitable.

- Jean Lipman-Blumen

It happened first to Jack Ford. Next it was Michael Bell. Paula Hicks-Hudson’s defeat for re-election makes it the third consecutive time that an incumbent African-American mayor has been defeated in a bid to keep his or her job. The common thread is that each black hopeful carried the majority African-American wards by a wide majority but received little support elsewhere.

My take on the 2017 mayor’s race?

No Votes/No Power

Obviously, after three consecutive defeats, what sticks out most prominently is that the African-American community will have to find a way to break what has become a type of “cultural winner-take-all” mentality or zero-sum approach to local elections.

Reality says that given our proclivity to hang out at home or somewhere else on election day, there are just not enough African-American votes in Toledo to elect a mayor on black votes alone.

Taking 95 percent of one-fourth of a pie while leaving the rest of the goodies on the table for somebody else just isn’t enough to connect across the cultural and generational differences that represent the reality that is Toledo, Ohio. Said differently, when we put all of our eggs in one basket, the math never works.

How do we pursue inclusiveness and racial diversity in Toledo city government given the results of the November 7 election?

African-American leadership will have to continually branch out, working at building partnerships with other branches of government, the business community, nonprofits and our regional neighbors such as suburban mayors. These relationships are in addition to those that need to be nurtured outside our community, nonprofits and our regional neighbors such as suburban mayors.

My take on the 2017 council races?

Put the People In The Right Seats

Cecelia Adams, comfortable in a wide variety of cultural settings, performed admirably. Larry Sykes survived and Harvey Savage did extremely well on city council to get them in the right seats. The task is to find a way to work positively with Mayor-elect Wade Kapszukiewicz. The choice of selecting the next city council president will be crucial if council is to write meaningful policy or legislation, get the votes needed to pass it rather than the gridlock that results from an acrimonious relationship with the mayor. Look for good soldier Matt Cherry to become the next council president.

“The second challenge for council, with its two new faces, is to find a way to work together as a group. Policy thinkers such as D’Adams and Sandy Spang (the top vote getter) will need to work collaboratively with policy doers such as Lindsay Webb, Gary Johnson or Nick Komives. The point is to eliminate obstructionists or those who might try to “box-in” the newcomers.

Where do we go from here?

Black Dots on White Rectangles

For certain, the appointment of Ashford could heal the fresh wounds of defeat for the black community and creates an opportunity for either Yvonne Harper, Mayor Hicks-Hudson or even a Tyrone Riley to step up immediately, which in turn will then create an opportunity to keep flowing. It also guarantees that Teresa Fedor goes to the Ohio Senate, which opens up her house seat for Lindsay Webb, and that opens up another new face on council (Savage?).

Ashford has skillfully climbed up the ladder, having performed well on city council and serving in a leadership capacity on the State level. He is currently a ranking committee member in the Ohio House of Representatives seat for Lindsay Webb, and that opens up another new face on council (Savage?).

Ashford’s appointment will accomplish three things potentially. With State Senator Edna Brown’s approaching retirement, Ashford and Teresa Fedor won’t have to slug it out for Brown’s seat. So it avoids a conflict and helps the party come back together from the hard feelings generated by Kapszukiewicz’s decision to run against the incumbent and endorsed mayor.

Secondly, an appointment to Lucas County Treasurer opens up Ashford’s House of Representatives seat for a variety of people, which might also heal the party. The 44th House District seems to be a perfect landing spot for say, Paula-Hicks Hudson.

For certain, the appointment of Ashford could heal the fresh wounds of defeat for the black community and creates an opportunity for either Yvonne Harper, Mayor Hicks-Hudson or even a Tyrone Riley to step up immediately, which in turn will then create an opportunity to keep flowing. It also guarantees that Teresa Fedor goes to the Ohio Senate, which opens up her house seat for Lindsay Webb, and that opens up another new face on council (Savage?).

Ashford has skillfully climbed up the leadership ladder, having performed well on city council and serving in a leadership capacity on the State level. He is currently a ranking committee member in the Ohio House of Representatives seat for Michael Ashford. So it makes a lot of political sense for Michael Ashford to succeed Wade, not only because of his record of service, but also because it avoids a fight and creates additional opportunities for others.

Is it enough to bring more inclusion and diversity to the Democratic Party?

“It’s going to keep an open mind,” says Jimmie Snodgrass, a longtime Democratic Party official. “There’s gonna be change, but if they don’t have any color in the new administration I’m gonna call it for what it is.”

Amen on that.

Some Things I Will Never Understand

By Lafe Tolliver

The Truth Contributor

(1) I will never understand why black, mayoral candidates have a penchant to take photo opps with clusters of smiling and grinning black pastors standing behind him or her.

Is it as if somehow their credibility or prestige will “rub off”….or on” the candidate and thus their congregants will vote for the candidate simply because their pastor is in the photograph?

That assumes that the pastors in the photo have enough political heft to sway their voting members to vote for the candidate and as the recent past elections have shown, voting in the “inner city” wards is not at respectable levels to say the least.

So much for black political power when residents of the “inner city” either are not registered to vote or do not vote on Election Day. It goes without saying that if the “inner city” wards do not come out in gangbuster numbers, the “white suburban” voters can rule the day and negate any smiley photo opps of black preachers and black mayoral candidates.

As I have said in past guest opinions, do the smiley preachers, in those worthless photo ops, have the power to get the mayor on the phone and get instant perks for their community, even if it is just a pack of summer jobs for their teen members?

Somebody throw a custard pie in my face but for all the years I have been commenting on politics in Toledo, I have not seen smiley black preachers getting any bang for their photo-op bucks from City Hall.

It is as if by the sheer dint of the presence of such photographs of dozens of black pastors standing behind a black mayoral candidate that somehow that bespeaks of:

“We got the numbers to get this done!”

No…it only says that you were courteous enough to agree to be in a photograph of smiley black preachers and for your graciousness you may have thought that maybe, just maybe, my congregation or the conglomerate black community would benefit from our collective stance with the mayor.

So sorry for your losses! Next time when the photo bus rolls around and you are solicited to stand tall in the photo opp, that you have the political savvy to make sure that you are getting something for your tried and true fidelity.

The unendorsed Democratic Mayor Elect…Wade…opted out of the smiley black photo spread and probably said to himself, “Naw…don’t need it. I can win without it!”

The moral of the story? If you and your black mayoral candidate have not run a tight and robust voter registration drive, going door to door, and also having means of delivering thousands of people to the polls, winning the mayor’s office will just be a smiley photo opportunity that will become scrapbook history in a few months.

(2) Why? When you consider that murdering or shooting some one is a desecration of life and an affront to God, why would not the affected neighborhoods cooperate with other affected neighborhoods and start a 10-year campaign to reduce or eradicate senseless black-on-black violence?

The best resource for such an extended campaign and which has the various locations already in place to launch such an ambitious attack is….wait for it…..the ever present black church.

My hunch is this: If each black church, be it the kind that has maybe five persons that show up for Sunday worship or 500 that show up, there are enough resources to undertake a campaign to reclaim the affected and downtrodden neighborhoods that suffer from gun play and other sorts of crime. No, you will not eliminate it but you can reduce it, if the will is there to reduce it.

I know…I know there are “start and stop” campaigns both in the past and the present that have the mission statement do such an worthy endeavor, BUT until both David and Goliath come together and each offers his unique resources and talents, nothing will be done.

Now, remember I said that this will be a 10-year campaign at least because you have to change aberrant generational habits and thinking and, without such a commitment, why start it in the first place?

I offered the black church as the focal point of such an initiative because the black church is the biggest but temporary banker in the black community due to the wealth that it accumulates on Sundays and Wednesdays before it dutifully turns its weekly collection offerings over to white folks and their banking system so that white folks can get rich off of those weekly tithes and offerings.

You know and I know that black wealth does not tarry long in the black church community but leaves rather quickly and finds a warm reception in white banks, credit unions and merchants who are as pleased as punch to get those bags of money come Monday morning bank counting time.

But…that is how we roll in Toledo.

The black church has the goods and the talents and the skills to take a vibrant and powerful message of hope and change and education to its surrounding communities but will it or will it cling to its stained glass windows as a refuge from the secular storm?

Imagine if you can, that once a month EACH black church selects a day in the week where congregants, among other activities, walk the streets and with both a personal presence and a lit drop, begin to re shape the community into a model that will eschew drugs and violence and adhere to positive community and spiritual values that would advance the current and next generation.

And as to the prior comment about black dollars escaping the black community, recall if in the past 30 days you spent any of your hard-earned money on any of the following services IN the black community: (1) floral shops (2) barber shops (3) beauty parlors (4) credit unions (5) car dealers (6) restaurants (7) carry outs (8) real estate

Diversity and Progressive Values Win “Bigly” on Tuesday!

By Dominique Warren
The Truth Contributor

Last Tuesday, Toledo had its own slew of diverse candidates win in City Council! An Afro-Latino man in Gary Johnson, our first openly gay candidate since Louis Escobar in millennial Nick Komives, and two black experienced candidates in Cecelia Adams and Larry Sykes.

From Virginia, New Jersey to St. Paul’s in Minnesota, and all the way in Montana, we saw diverse and progressive democrats win elections. No doubt, their candidacies and victories across the nationwide was in response to President Trump and his white populism that came to power in 2016.

Trump and his band of white populists quieted Democrats in 2016 and beat back the notion of a New American Majority that would lead politics and government in the future. Victories in 2017 and strong candidates in 2018 are sure to bring back the idea that the New American Majority had an off year, but is here to stay.

On the east coast, Virginians and residents of New Jersey decided to buck tradition and elect two black Lieutenant Governors in 38-year old Justin Fairfax of Virginia and the New Jersey Assembly Speaker, Sheila Oliver. Fairfax’s win in Virginia signaled that the country is ready for young and qualified candidates to run for major races and the electorate will put them in Office.

In Charlotte and St. Paul, voters elected the several “first.” The first black mayors for St. Paul and the first black female mayor for Charlotte. Hoboken, New Jersey elected the first Sikh mayor in Ravinder Bhalia. As progressive candidates, they sought to mend divisions in their campaign, and ran on progressive values of inclusiveness and innovation in governance. With political messaging that signaled forward progress, these local candidates changed the face of leadership in their communities.

Perhaps Election Day’s most remarkable result was the election of Wilmot Collins as mayor of Helena, Montana. Collins, a refugee from Liberia, who settled in nearly all-white Helena two decades ago, decried the anti-immigration policies of Trump and still managed to win in a city with a black population of .4 percent.

In state legislatures and city councils, we saw a number of firsts hap-
Local 2017 Election Day Results

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

Locally, the 2017 Election Day results brought a few new Democrats into office to replace departing Democrats. Not exactly the sort of upheaval that so many communities around the country witnessed in the midst of a Trump backlash. Locally, Democrats ruled as they so often do.

Mayor Pula Hicks-Hudson’s bid for re-election was thwarted by fellow Democrat, Lucas County Treasurer Wade Kapszukiewicz, who ran without the endorsement of his party and defeated the incumbent by a double digits margin. Incumbent mayors running for re-election in Toledo have not met much success over the past 12 years. Mayors Jack Ford and Mike Bell, both African-American as well, also lost their re-election bids. Kapszukiewicz, the ultimate political insider having served almost two decades in elected office on the city and council level, ran as an outsider promising change. It was a strategy that proved effective against a mayor who rose to office upon the death of then-Mayor D. Michael Collins.

Kapszukiewicz’s candidacy was based on what he sees as a lack of progress in the city. He spoke during his campaign of indications that urban cores, both regionally and nationally are generally on the rebound – increasing population and job growth at a faster rate over the last decade than their suburban counterparts. Unfortunately, Toledo has not been part of this trend, he noted.

He ran a campaign decrying a declining population; a loss of “four percent of our jobs over the past five years;” “ranked one of the sixth worst for children living in poverty” and a city that was recently named “one of the most distressed” in the nation. Moreover, he spoke of his fears that Toledo was losing the opportunity to catch up with other urban areas – Milwaukee; Grand Rapids, MI; Dayton; Indianapolis. To cite a few examples – if city leaders wait too long to act.

There are two new-comers on Toledo City Council – Gary Johnson and Nick Komives – who finished fourth and fifth respectively. Both are endorsed Democrats who will be holding elected office for the first time. Johnson, a business owner, who emphasized the importance of fostering economic growth through small businesses, and Komives, a community organizer and executive director of Equality Toledo, who addressed issues of fairness and equality, will be replacing incumbents Steve Steel, who was term limited from running again, and Kurt Young, who had been appointed to Council in the spring but failed to finish in the top six.

Independent Councilwoman Sandy Spang finished in first place on Election Day, followed by Republican Rob Ludeman, Democrat Cecelia Adam, PhD, Johnson, Komives and Democrat Larry Sykes – rounding out the top six.

In the race for Toledo’s Board of Education, incumbents Bob Vasquez, Polly Taylor-Gerken and Chris Varwig, all Democrats, were re-elected. In the Washington Local School Board competition, ousted former Superintendent Patrick Hickey – who had been banned from entering the district’s schools’ premises by the board, was elected to the board. Presumably the ban will be lifted.

Democrat Joe Howe, a prosecutor with the Toledo Municipal Court was elected, in a tight race, to fill the seat of judge of the Toledo Housing Court to replace Judge C. Allen McConnell, who was aged-barred from running for re-election. Howe’s margin of 144 votes – out of over 40,000 cast may yet be subjected to scrutiny via re-count.

Toledo Public Schools and Metroparks won the approval of voters for renewal levies by wide margins, 69 and 75 percent approvals, respectively.

SSOE Donates $10,000 to Family House and Challenges Community during Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week

Bob Howell, CEO, SSOE Group, presented a check for $10,000 on Thursday, November 9, to Family House and announced that the SSOE Group will help sponsor the first Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week in Toledo to benefit Family House, a unique non-profit organization dedicated to helping homeless families find housing.

The check presentation took place at Family House, 669 Indiana Ave. in Toledo.

SSOE contacted Family House after media reports that nearly 2,700, or 10 percent, of the Toledo Public School students are homeless. This represents the highest number among state of Ohio schools.

Family House is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing homeless families in crisis with professional, comprehensive housing and social services in a safe, caring environment. The goal at Family House is to help families in their time of crisis find permanent housing, help them regain control over their lives, and reclaim their independence through education, community resources and compassion.

Faced with an immediate need to raise $60,000, Family House asked SSOE to help sponsor the first local Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week.

“The statistics speak for themselves - especially when you consider that every one of those statistics represents a child in crisis. A child for whom school has taken second place to simple survival. When we saw the report of the challenges local students within our own community were facing, we were immediately on the phone asking Superintendent Dr. Romulus Durant how we could help. The first organization he mentioned was Family House because of the unique void they fill within the community --- Keeping homeless families together and successfully transitioning them into housing so that students can get back to focusing on learning,” said Howell.

“We are extremely honored that Family House has asked SSOE to be a part of their first local Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week. We want to ensure even the most vulnerable among us will do better in Toledo!”

“SSOE agreed to help us during Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week by issuing a challenge to the individuals and businesses in our community to help raise money,” said Renée Palacios, executive director, Family House Toledo. “We cannot thank SSOE enough for their donation and for proactively stepping forward to issue a challenge to our community. We hope to raise $60,000 during this month to invest in homeless facilities.”

Family House is the second largest homeless shelter for families in Ohio, noted Palacios. The facility houses 36 families every day, typically including 65 children.

Carty Finkbeiner, former Toledo mayor and current vice president of the Family House Board of Directors, also thanked SSOE for their donation and praised their participation.

“The SSOE Group is one of Toledo’s sleeping giants. While internationally known, their donation and participation shows that they care about our community,” Finkbeiner said.

Those wishing to make a donation as part of Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week have several options. They including visiting familyhousetoledo.org, and clicking on the “donate” icon to make an on-line donation; or mailing a check to Family House Toledo, 669 Indiana Ave., Toledo, OH 43604.

Those interested in a tour of Family House or with questions on donations and donated items, can contact Renée Palacios, Executive Director, at 419.242.5505 or E-mail: rpalacios@familyhousetoledo.org

Ohio again Exceeds 15 Percent Minority Business State Purchasing Standard

For the third consecutive year, the State of Ohio has exceeded the goal of its Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) program by purchasing 23.65 percent of eligible goods and services through certified minority-owned businesses, while spending just over $305 million. Ohio’s MBE program mandates that state agencies set aside 15 percent of its annual purchases for goods and services for certified minority-owned businesses.

“During the current administration, Ohio has made diversity among its suppliers standard business, meeting set-aside goals for the first time since the program was established in 1980, when Governor Kasich was a member of the Ohio General Assembly,” said Gregory L. Williams, state equal employment opportunity coordinator and deputy director of the Equal Opportunity Division of the Ohio Department of Administrative Services, which certifies businesses into the MBE program.

“Our goal is to assist entrepreneurs, through this program and others, to develop their businesses to compete in the broader marketplace,” Williams added.

Out of the eligible expenditures for goods and services purchased during Fiscal Year (FY) 2017, a total of 20.80 percent was set aside for MBE-certified businesses. Another 2.85 percent of eligible goods and services was purchased from MBE-certified businesses through open-market contracts.

Ohio’s Equal Opportunity Division oversees the MBE program and helps to ensure equal opportunity access to and fair treatment in government contracting. It strives to maximize contracting opportunities through certification of minority-owned, women-owned and socially and economically disadvantaged businesses.

“It’s about sustainability and creating more opportunities for all Ohioans,” said Jeffrey L. Johnson, chief of the Minority Business Development Division at the Ohio Development Services Agency. “By meeting the law, we continue to move Ohio forward in diversity and inclusion while growing minority businesses across the state.”

Background

On Dec. 17, 1980, House Bill 584 was signed into law, establishing the MBE program, which mandated that state agencies set aside 15 percent of their annual purchases for goods and services for certified minority-owned businesses.

As a member of the General Assembly in 1980, Governor Kasich voted to support House Bill 584 and after becoming Ohio’s governor made its achievement a priority of his administration.

Since 2011, the state has made steady progress in identifying set-aside opportunities, certifying minority-owned businesses and matching them with state contract opportunities. State agencies, boards and commissions now produce annual spending plans that project set-aside contract and procurement opportunities for qualified MBE-certified businesses, the aggregate value for which is at least 15 percent. In 2015, Ohio reached the 15 percent goal for the first time and has continued to do so.

In addition to MBE set-aside contracts, many minority-owned firms have secured state contracts through the open market by bidding against non-minority firms.

With approximately 2,000 adult branches, youth councils, and college chapters in 49 states, five countries and the District of Columbia, the NAACP is actively engaged in increasing the African-American responsiveness of citizens to be fully engaged in the democratic process.

• On Saturday Nov 4, the Toledo Branch NAACCP was part of the signing for the Code of Conduct Agreement for the Black/Brown Coalition. This agreement spells out and illustrates ways in which the Hispanic and black communities engage and interact with the Toledo Police and Law enforcement agencies.

    In the four-page document, the Toledo Police Department agrees that “officers will be encouraged to spend a minimum of one hour on foot patrol to know members of the community.” It also guarantees citizens the right to request a police officer’s name and badge numbers and to record a stop on their cell phones.

    After nearly two years of negotiations, an agreement was reached and presented to the mayor’s office. This agreement allows for Toledo to be proactive and progressive in our relationship and interaction with each other.

Other groups involved in the signing were the Toledo Community Coalition, the AFL/CIO, Local 500, FLOC and many other Latino and Hispanic groups. We expect this agreement to be precedent setting around the State! Many thanks to all for their sincere efforts... Stay tuned for more to come from the Black/Brown Coalition!

Supporting veterans and active duty members of the military is a key part of Social Security’s mission. Our disability program has helped countless wounded warriors and their loved ones. Every Veterans Day, the nation collectively honors the brave people who risk their lives to protect our country. For those who return home with injuries, Social Security is a resource they can turn to for disability benefits. Social Security’s Wounded Warriors website is at www.socialsecurity.gov/woundedwarriors.

The Wounded Warriors website has answers to many commonly asked questions, and provides other useful information about disability benefits, including how veterans can receive expedited processing of disability claims. Benefits available through Social Security are different from those available from the Department of Veterans Affairs; they require a separate application.

Social Security’s expedited process is available to military service members who become disabled while on active military service on or after October 1, 2001, regardless of where the disability occurs. Even active duty military who continue to receive pay while in a hospital or on medical leave should consider applying for disability benefits if they’re unable to work due to a disabling condition. Active duty status and receipt of military pay doesn’t necessarily prevent payment of Social Security disability benefits. Although a person can’t receive Social Security disability benefits while engaging in substantial work for pay or profit, receipt of military payments should never stop someone from applying for disability benefits from Social Security. You can learn more by visiting our veterans page at www.socialsecurity.gov/people/veterans.

Kaptur Urges Trump Administration to Listen to the Voices of Ohioans While Renegotiating NAFTA

In letter to USTR, Kaptur urges action to protect workers and submits testimony from recent field hearing in Brook Park, Ohio

Amidst ongoing NAFTA renegotiations with Canada and Mexico, Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur (OH-09) sent a letter, along with pages of testimony from Ohioans, to U.S. Trade Ambassador Robert Lighthizer urging that real labor standards and enforcement be included in any new continental trade agreement.

“Millions of Americans have endured relentless job outsourcing and significant downward wage and benefit pressures under NAFTA’s rigid provisions. Significant as well, our nation has never achieved a trade balance with our NAFTA competitors in over a quarter century. Indeed, since 1993, America’s cumulative deficit with NAFTA partners now totals nearly $2 trillion. This negative result represents an astounding abdication of economic growth,” Kaptur wrote in the letter.

The letter included testimony from Kaptur’s August town hall on NAFTA, trade, and jobs in Brook Park, Ohio. This included analysis and perspectives from the National Farmers Union, Teamsters Local 416 in Cleveland, Blue Green Alliance, Sierra Club, Policy Matters Ohio, United Steelworkers, and the United Auto Workers.

“To drive through our district and speak to our constituents provides a daily reminder of the plight these workers face: shuttered factories, hollowed out neighborhoods, chronic economic stress due to diminished employment opportunities in quality jobs. Time and again during the field hearing, participants called for increased worker protections, improved environmental provisions, and elimination of special courts that further enhance already bloated transnational interests. You now have [a great] opportunity to rectify these troubles by focusing on the American worker as you negotiate with Canada and Mexico. To amplify the concerns of the hearing’s participants, I am including their prepared testimony so you can read their stories and understand their experiences,” Kaptur continued.

Kaptur again called for the inclusion of a tri-party Independent Labor Secretariat, to ensure the labor standards are enforced. An idea that is supported and outlined by the AFL-CIO here.

“Ultimately, the American worker demands fair trade and a level playing field with workers in Canada and Mexico. I have little doubt that you will have the votes from Congress to support your achievement if you negotiate a deal that puts American workers’ interests first,” Kaptur concluded.

Financial Aid Season for College Students is Here: What to Know

Special to The Truth

It’s not only football season. For current and incoming college students, it’s financial aid season, too, and that means completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The FAFSA should be the first step families take in the planning-for-college process; it’s used by schools to put together financial aid packages, states use it to determine eligibility for state aid, and some scholarships require it as part of their applications.

“Regardless of whether you think you will qualify for funding, don’t fumble by simply not completing the application,” says Martha Holler, senior vice president, Sallie Mae.

By just completing the FAFSA, students can gain access to more than $120 billion in grants, work-study funds, and federal student loans.

Sallie Mae is offering six key points to help families move the ball down the field this FAFSA season:

• Get season tickets in advance. Complete the FAFSA as a high school senior — and every year in college, even graduate school. It’s the only way to remain eligible for federal student aid, and the amount of aid can vary year-over-year.

• Review the playbook before the game. Before beginning the application, both parents and students should create a username and password, a Federal Student Aid ID, and gather Social Security numbers, driver’s license numbers, bank statements, tax returns and W-2 forms. Having this information ready can expedite the process.

• Don’t miss the opening kick-off. Some financial aid is awarded on a first-come, first-served basis, or from programs with limited funds, so the earlier families fill out the FAFSA, the better their chances for aid. Additionally, submitting the FAFSA earlier could mean receiving financial aid award letters earlier. Timing varies by school, so families should check with financial aid offices and school websites for specifics.

• Go for the two-point conversion. Take advantage of the IRS Data Retrieval Tool to import and convert tax information directly into the FAFSA. After some critical changes were made to address privacy and security issues, the tool is back, and more applicants will be eligible to use it this year.

• Watch out for trick plays. The only way to fill out a FAFSA is at fafsa.gov. Filing the FAFSA is always free, so watch out for sites that charge fees or make promises that sound too good to be true. Students can reduce the risk of identity theft by keeping their Federal Student Aid ID confidential and reporting any suspected fraudulent account activity immediately.

• Don’t be a Monday morning quarterback. Completing the FAFSA earlier means receiving critical information like the Student Aid Report (SAR) sooner. The SAR provides basic information about student eligibility for federal student aid and answers to the FAFSA questions. The SAR also includes the Expected Family Contribution (EFC), which provides a clearer picture about eligibility for financial aid as families begin applying to colleges. Families who complete the FAFSA online typically receive their SAR within three to five days.

• Make your final draft picks. Families should list at least one school on the FAFSA. Some state aid is based on the order of how schools are listed, so families should consider listing state schools first.

Don’t drop the ball this season. Take steps to secure financial aid for your college future.

With the help of these scholarships my family can maintain stability in an otherwise tumultuous time of our lives, and we are so thankful for that.”

Interested families can find more information about the program and apply online on the NOSF website at www.nosf.org. For more information please contact Ann Riddle, Executive Director of the Northwest Ohio Scholarship Fund at (419) 720-7048.

NOSF is a partner with the Children’s Scholarship Fund (CSF). CSF provides scholarships to families in need so they can choose the private school that best meets their children’s needs. Every dollar raised locally gets matched by CSF which provides additional dollars for scholarships. Since the program began, more than 14,000 students have been awarded a NOSF Scholarship.

If you have noticed by now, some of those categories do not even exist in our community or, we do not even know who is who is some categories and which shows the need for a black directory of businesses including all black churches; and the dire need to channel our youth into entrepreneurial businesses...or we will simply continue to exist as a conquered colony for the merchants who live in Perrysburg, Ottawa Hills and Maumee. We export our money and we import their goods and services!

Some things I will never understand.

You’ve been cooking up a storm for days.

Soon, the whole family will be sitting at your table, which will be loaded down with everybody’s favorites. The turkey will be golden. The bread, warm and soft. Pies line your kitchen counter because you’ve cooked for days. At least, as you’ll see in Bound to the Fire by Kelley Fanto Deetz, you didn’t cook ‘round the clock, too.

Most of us, says Deetz, are used to seeing black faces on boxes of our breakfast foods. We might not notice them much anymore, but those trademarked figures hide an often misunderstood truth.

The “black community” in Virginia, says Deetz, “is almost as old as the colony itself.” In 1619, some 20 “negroes” lived in Jamestown; by 1625, there were 23 “Africans” in all of Virginia. Once slavery took firm hold in the state, there were tens of thousands of enslaved people but Deetz focuses on cooks, beginning with plantation homes.

As slavery expanded, kitchens began to be set apart from the main house, probably because white plantation owners didn’t want slaves under their roofs. For enslaved cooks and their families, that was both good and bad: more privacy was gained by living in the building where the kitchen was, and accommodations were usually larger than in the slave cabins— but that proximity meant that cooks were constantly on-call.

It took “a network of enslaved folks” to put food on the table, not only in growing the food, but also in what may have been a house-staff of dozens. Cooks cooked, but they were also bakers, butchers, brewers, distillers, and sometimes, laundresses. A cook was likely taught to read and do “basic math,” and she (sometimes, he) taught kitchen chores to new slaves. Despite a constant likelihood of abuse and brutality, cooks often had surprising power over their mistresses and may’ve even negotiated their own circumstances.

And if things went really bad, there was always the danger-filled chance for a cook to tamper with the food...

There are, as author Kelley Fanto Deetz indicates in her introduction, several myths and misunderstandings related to enslaved cooks. There were, until now, many unknowns. Bound to the Fire sets things straight, but cooking isn’t the only focus here.

What would “Southern hospitality” be without the influence of enslaved cooks? Not much, as Deetz indicates—and Southern architecture would be the lesser, too. Using documents and research, Deetz explains how this is so, which leads to a fascinating look at day-to-day work of Virginia cooks, the power they wielded, and how they influenced what you’ll eat this holiday season. You’ll come to eagerly anticipate those tales, and they serve to underscore Deetz’s final point: Americans must look beyond stereotypes and be mindful of those who literally nourished a nation.

Be aware that this is not a cookbook. Instead, this is a book of history and a chance to set it straight. Yes, there are old-timey half-recipes in here but really, Bound to the Fire is meant for opening eyes, rather than mouths.

One of those producers, Angela Dunlap, will not be coming from too far away to bring the dinner theater extravaganza to Toledo. Dunlap, a Detroit native and resident, has been involved with theater ever since, as a very young girl, her mother entered her in a Little Miss Michigan talent show. As Dunlap recalls, she went home after the show upset that she had no talent to display. Her mother corrected that situation immediately by writing for young Angela a dramatic monologue.

“I won,” says Dunlap. And an actress was born. The writer, producer, director would develop over time. Dunlap attended Southview Public Schools where she had the opportunity to receive extensive drama instruction, then on to Wayne State University, where she studied but briefly before leaving to go on the road with a professional show. It’s a profession that has kept her active for 30 years now.

Over the last two decades, Dunlap has risen to the top of the African-American urban theater world s the creator and producer of multi-million dollar grossing stage plays such as My Brother Marvin, It These Hips Could Talk, Why Do Good Girls Like Bad Boys, Real Men Pray, Gossip Lies & Secrets, Church Girl, among others. If These Hips Could Talk was one of the longest-running shows in urban theater history – a two-year run starring some well-known Hollywood actors such as Billy Dee Williams, Robin Givens, Tichina Arnold, among other. It is currently being turned into a feature film.

Her current project, Murder, is one she’s especially proud of. “It’s the most fun you will ever have,” she says. “We invite the audience to talk back and become part of the show. Each table becomes an investigative team and the cast members are on the stage, then in the audience.”

Murder at the Carver High Reunion, starring actor/singer D’tra Hicks (Black Tank) from Tyler Perry’s Madea’s Family Reunion, will be at the Aria Banquet Hall, 5969 Telegraph Road on Saturday, November 18, at 5 p.m. For ticket information, to enjoy an evening of theater, dinner and dancing, call 833-MYSHOWS or go online at www.mystiquedinnershows.com.
