My Idol, My Father, Big Daddy

By Tanya Murphy

Sitting in a large recliner that leans back slightly with his feet up watching TV, he is a 5’11”, cocky, well-built, 78-year-old man we call “Big Daddy.” My father, my mentor, my best friend. Born here in Toledo, Ohio on March 31, 1939, he is known as a ‘pk kid’ (preacher’s kid). James Edward Murphy now attends Ararat Missionary Baptist Church where he plays the organ, but he had been a musician as a child playing for his father’s church up until his father passing in the late ’60s. Because of his church upbringing, he pursued his passion by joining another church, and playing the piano every single Sunday while also holding down a job at Toledo Edison.

Big Daddy’s values of serving a higher power are enormous. Why, you ask? Because of his upbringing. My father’s favorite quote is “It’s a real God out there.” This quote came when he was six-years-old and very sick, not being able to eat, drink nor keep anything down and also bed-ridden with no idea what was wrong with him. It was the scariest time in his life. He was attending 1st grade at Washington Elementary School located on Atwood and Detroit Avenue, (now torn down). He was out of school, losing weight day-by-day until his mother called on a “prayer warrior,” that is, a neighbor whom they trusted and who believed that prayer works. They prayed over my father along with other church-goers. The next day my father was up eating and drinking. He is still a true believer, and says, “If you wake up praying and pray when you go to bed, everything will be all right.”

My father met my mother at his father’s church while playing the piano. He was a junior at Scott High School, but he dropped out because my mother became pregnant; however, later he attended night school to obtain his high school diploma. My father did get into a lot of trouble at Scott due to hanging with his buddies. But, he was taught to be responsible and to “take care of your business”; thus my dad was forced to get a job at a gas station named ‘Johnson Ohio,’ where he fixed on cars and pumped gas instead of staying in school.

My parents married at a young age and starting a family was challenging. My older sister Selese was born. This forced my father to step his game up. When my sister turned one, my dad purchased his first home at 1017 Broer located near Dorr and Secor Road. Being a dad meant more bills and responsibilities, so my father had a couple of more jobs including driving an ambulance for Shirell Funeral Home. In addition my dad was working with a guy fixing cars and pumped gas instead of staying in school.

Being a dad meant more bills and responsibilities, so my father had a couple of more jobs including driving an ambulance for Shirell Funeral Home. In addition my dad was working with a guy fixing refrigerators, completing side jobs working on cars and appliances, along with being self-taught to complete plumbing jobs on the side. My father and my mother had more children, “girls that is,” and he needed to get a better paying job. My dad went to an electrician trading school for a better chance to get hired, and he was hired at Toledo Edison starting in 1966. My father, at this young age of 21, loved his job. He was so proud to be able to get a decent salary and provide for his family. He continued his profession by attending a school in Springfield, Ohio, and received his management certification.

He became a manager for Toledo Edison beginning in 1989. The only downfall with this job was that he was concerned about not getting promoted to a higher position as his colleagues. My dad tried going back to school to earn a degree so he could get promoted, but his boss put him on a schedule that kept him from continuing his education. This is one thing that hurts my father. He feels he was held back to succeed, and to move up the corporate ladder. My father says “education was the only way he could make more money” as his colleagues had done. He pushed for this goal for my three sisters and me, with the motto, “Be a man: be successful in all you do.”

My father’s biggest accomplishment was working for Toledo Edison, this providing my mother, my sisters and me a beautiful home located at 866 Independence Street near Dorr and Richards Road. We moved into this new beautiful neighborhood where only a few houses were on the block. We had a huge back yard overlooking a forest which as a child I thought was full of wildlife including snakes. Our family was well-off. My sisters and I had our own cars, a family boat, and we stayed in a neighborhood that provided great schools: Ryder Elementary, McTigue Junior High and Rogers High School.

While working at Toledo Edison he suffered the biggest loss ever. In the late ’70s my father had his little brother Charles Terry Murphy hired as a lineman. I cannot even imagine getting that call, as my father did, from his supervisor to identify his 21-year-old brother hanging from a pole, electrocuted to death. His brother had not been on the job for more than a month. My father said, “This was the saddest day of my life,” and he felt guilty of his brother’s death, because he got him hired as an inexperienced lineman. Again this brings to mind education: if Terry had been educated and trained on how to be a lineman, this would have never happened.

My father told me he was angry, so he turned his anger and depression into remodeling our three bedroom house into a five bedroom home with an extra bathroom, den and a step-down living room that was converted from a garage. His last project was building a 2 ½-car garage and making a circle driveway in front of our home. He added a little hill and added some beautiful landscaping. My dad says he planted a “stick” in the ground which was given to him by his mother from down South. We as kids couldn’t understand why he planted a stick. Now that stick is a huge tree that blooms with pink flower buds every spring. This also taught us girls “to be patient and to have faith.”

My father was so proud of my sisters and me, and he still is. My eldest sister passed in her sleep of heart failure. This devastated my father: he felt the parents are supposed to die first not their children. My middle sister drove a TARTA bus, retiring last year. My little sister, Jamesetta (she was supposed to be a boy), works at Buckeye Cable System. Her view had taught me “to know troubles he has had. This man has taught us girls “to be patient and to have faith.”

In writing this profile, I asked my dad questions, I listened to him, and I understand his accomplishments and disappointments. What I did not hear him speak about is how he almost died three times of heart attacks, the latest being this past May. I asked him, “Why didn’t you mention this, Dad?” He explained, “I asked God was he finished with me in this here life.” Then my father said, he told God, “If you want me to leave, I’m ready.” My father stressed to me, “If you have faith, ‘real faith’ and you trust in the Lord, you have nothing to worry about.” This brought tears to my eyes because I knew this interview had taught me a little more about my dad and the unknown troubles he has had. This man has taught us girls how to change a tire and change our oil in our cars. My dad’s main goal was to teach us to “trust only in God, not man.”

I love my father. God put him here and is keeping him here for a reason. What reason? His gift to gab, his strength never to give up despite the circumstances, and his ability to touch so many lives. If you call my father to ask him about plumbing, he’ll know what to do; electricity, he’ll know exactly how to troubleshoot; mechanics, yes, he can help; construction, yep! Politics, very active. And of course he knows about family, living for the Lord and for a purpose. If you want any consultation about the Bible? Hands down, he has that covered, too. I do not want to brag about how bright my father is, or how gifted this man has been, but I must! He is awesome!

I always tell my dad, “I LOVE YOU, BIG DADDY!”

His reply, “I LOVE YOU, TOO, BABY,” and then we hug.

Black Lives Matter Successfully Kicks Off the Provocateurs Series at California African American Museum

Walter Mosley, Staceyann Chin, Emory Douglas, Shamell Bell and More Shared Their Reflections on Art & Activism for The Provocateurs: Master Series

Black Lives Matter Global Network introduced its new arts and culture project, The Provocateurs: A Masters Series, last week at California African American Museum in conjunction with the museum's We Wanted a Revolution: Black Radical Women, 1965 – 85 exhibition. The evening opened with BLM co-founder and artist Patrisse Khan-Cullors reminding the full house of attendees that, “Every moment is a historical moment” and recalling the vital role art has always played in the black community and the movement.

The program featured 12 minute TED talk style performances, presentations and talks by a variety of multigenerational visual artists, dancers, spoken word artists, DJ’s and authors providing an array of personal experiences with radical art and activism. Dancer Shamell Bell reminded the audience to, “Use your talent for the movement,,” and Staceyann Chin affirmed that, “Rage is mighty important.”

The full list of presenters and panelists included:

• Emory Douglas, Artist/Former Black Panther Party Minister of Culture
• Lynnée Denise, DJ
• Maren Hassinger, Sculpture activist
• Miss Prissy, “Queen Krump” (Rize)
• Shamell Bell, Street dancer activist
• Staceyann Chin, Spoken word poet and performing artist
• Walter Mosley, Best-selling author

The Provocateurs was taped live and will be shown online later this year. For more information on the provocateurs please visit https://blacklivesmatter.com/the-provocateurs-a-master-series/.

ABOUT THE PROVOCATEURS

Local Organizations Help Neighbors with Thanksgiving Donations

By Jay Black
Guest Column

Numerous local charitable organizations stepped up once again this year to lend a helping hand to less-fortunate neighbors. A.N.G.E.L.S. Outreach, yet again and for the 22nd year, assembled dozens of Thanksgiving dinner baskets for those of the local community and, this year, enlisted the aid of Toledo Police Department Chief George Kral and his officers to deliver the meals within area.

Andrew Kinsey of WTOL TV and founder of “Andrew Cares” spent part of his Thanksgiving holiday at Martin Luther King, Jr. Academy for Boys where he donated turkeys and desserts to families of the students. Andrew Cares also helps students during the year with tutoring, school supplies and occasional entertainment treats, such as trips to football games.

What Fros Are In Fashion and Where Can You Find Them?

Holiday parties still happen during this time of year. From swanky soirees to corporate dinners and PJ Parties by the fireside, the holidays are here, and, well, quickly passing. Tis the season for sequins, velvet, cute boots and fro-tastic hair.

What are the style trends of the 2017 holidays? It looks like #BigHair #Braids and #BoldColor are the hashtags to follow this season. The old school 80’s and 90’s Patra or Poetic Justice Braids (also known as box braids or “individuals”) are also back and here to stay a while. Needless to say, natural hairstyles have evolved right back to our roots. From intricate cornrows, now called the “Iversons” or “Lemonade Braids”, to the mini bun-tus that are now created with the “dread sponge”, natural hair is more versatile today than ever before!

The Big Hair Don’t Care awards go to those rocking Crochet Braids. Crochet braids are braids mainly because of their braided base.

Typically, loose hair is looped into cornrows to create a super full, shaped crown that looks like it is growing from one’s own head. The hair used for crochet braids ranges from tight coils to “perm straight” and now box braids or twists. Just a couple of years ago, these “braids” were looped in by hand, and now they come pre-looped for faster installation times and fewer loops around the cornrow base. Crochet braids are a great way to change the color or texture of your natural hair without altering it with heat or chemicals. They aren’t recommended for people with very weak hair, unless the person installing them understands how to cover those areas without stressing them further. This style is fairly simple for the DIY home beauty guru.

For a Black Owned company to purchase the hair, check out Powell’s Beauty Supply in Toledo or Curlkalon.com which was founded by Shavonne Riggins.

The Color Me Bold trophy goes to the current trending colors purple, pink, green and blue and there’s even a rainbow effect many are going for—the options are endless. The most popular brands for DIYers (Do it yourself) are Textures and Tones, Adore and Manic Panic. There are also colored chalks and spray on color that are temporary and work well for short-term color goals. But if you’re looking for a drastic color change that is more permanent, enlist the services of a licensed professional who can customize a color blend for you and remember don’t mix brands and types of dyes as they may lead to the wrong results (often green) or a bad reaction.

Check out some of these local colorists on Instagram or Facebook: Parebear25 (IG), Maria Powell, Ma’Shalla Bourne, Charmella Coiffeuse, Ryan Taylor, Larry Walker, Chawone Ar-drey or visit the newly-opened Blessed Hands Beauty Bar located at 1028 N. Holland-Sylvania Rd. and the newly renovated Studio 329 located at 1244 Flaire Dr. both off Dorr Street.

Local Business Owner Expands Services

By Tricia Hall
Sojourner’s Truth reporter

In the arts community, CC’s Lyricist Lounge is one of the well-known supporters of entrepreneurs, musicians and poets. Owned and operated by Chawone Ardrey for over 10 years, the business has expanded into the special events and workshop area.

“We have different events each week and I like to support other entrepreneurs. Especially if you’re looking for a service or business partner, then you can make connections,” said Ardrey.

Ten years ago, the lounge hosted open mic nights for poets, singers and musicians at the Peacock Lounge located in UpTown Toledo. Over the years, the business has moved and expanded to where it is today. In addition to hosting poetry and musical open mic nights, the lounge plans to offer almost 10 various workshops ranging from drumming lessons, paint classes, sewing lessons, and entrepreneurship workshops. The lounge also provides an intimate venue to host private events or parties.

The lounge periodically hosts special networking or social events for different audiences. In November the lounge hosted Meeting of the Minds, and also Speed Dating, Networking and Musical Chairs; both were networking events that invited participants to either consider speed dating or networking.

On Saturday, November 18, TUFCU President, CEO and Founder, Suzette Cowell, and her staff brought together hundreds of guests to celebrate the accomplishments of the credit union, to honor those in the community who have been critical to that success and to listen to the vocal stylings of The Manhattans Featuring Gerald Alston.

Last Minute Holiday Gift Ideas

Holiday shopping can be a source of stress for anyone, but particularly for procrastinators. Need some last-minute gift ideas? Think about readily accessible, yet thoughtful items that don’t require a lengthy shipping process.

Let these five ideas help solve your eleventh-hour gift-giving woes.

1. DIY-It. DIY gifts can be heartfelt, and many items can be made in a pinch. Bake a tray of Christmas cookies and tie them up with a bow; make seasonally scented homemade candles; or knit a scarf. The possibilities for crafty folks are endless.

2. Get Accessorized. Don’t get stumped. Consider a classic fashion accessory, such as a Casio Vintage Watch, which can be found in many national retailers, in a range of affordable prices. Functional and fashionable, these water-resistant timepieces that feature both an alarm and stopwatch will complement an array of style preferences.

3. Head to the Box Office. Quickly check the schedule of your gift recipient’s favorite band, team or theater company for tickets to an experience, such as a musical, concert or game. This thoughtful gift can be purchased and received in an instant, thanks to e-ticketing.

4. Pamper Them. The holidays are stressful. Help your loved ones unwind during a busy time of year. Consider a gift certificate for a spa or beauty treatment somewhere local to your recipient. The gift can be enjoyed exactly when it’s needed most.

5. Let Them Pick. When you’re really in a pinch and you’ve waited until the last minute, don’t stress. A gift card can be a great way to show you thought of someone, without having to spend too much time or energy in search of the perfect item.

The Social Butterfly’s Annual Christmas Bazaar

On Saturday, November 11, 2017 from 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. the Annual Christmas Bazaar was held at the Indiana Avenue Missinary Baptist Church’s Stephenson-Roberts Fellowship Hall. The event is coordinated by Donnetta Carter a/k/a “The Social Butterfly” and there were numerous vendors in attendance displaying arts and crafts, desserts, women’s and men’s apparel, jewelry, natural products, handmade Christmas Reefs, Greek paraphernalia and delicious food entrees.

Thanks were extended to the sponsors: the Leona Group, LLC, Paramount, The Truth Newspaper and Molina Healthcare and, finally, all the guests and volunteers in attendance and Shawnterra Glasgow, executive manager.

The next event will be “The 7th Annual Business & Health Expo” Saturday, April 28, 2018 at the Indiana MB Church. For more information contact donnetta_c@msn.com or (419) 367-9765. You can follow her on Facebook for upcoming events: “The Social Butterfly - Donnetta Carter”
The holiday season is all about giving. This year, consider combining thoughtful gifts for loved ones with charitable efforts that benefit the larger community. There are many great ways to do so. Here are a few.

Give Books and Donate

Shopping for a bibliophile? Along with the gift of a book, consider honoring your gift recipient while promoting literacy and a love of reading in the wider community. Libraries often have programs that offer gift givers an opportunity to donate a book in someone’s name. Or, you may consider donating books or a magazine subscription to a homeless shelter or school.

Give Clean Water

Unfortunately, these days, safe tap water is not always a given, no matter where one lives. With the incidence of natural disasters like hurricanes and earthquakes on the rise that may displace families and create uncertainty about water quality, consider gifting something essential -- safe hydration on-the-go.

Refillable water bottles that feature built-in filters can give recipients access to safe drinking water from virtually anywhere. Those from LifeStraw remove 99.999999 percent of waterborne bacteria (including E. coli and salmonella) and 99.99 percent of waterborne protozoa (including Giardia and Cryptosporidium), while reducing chlorine, organic chemical matter, bad taste, and odor.

For kids, LifeStraw Play is a good choice and will offer parents greater peace of mind. It’s the first water bottle with a two-stage filter designed for children. The 10 oz. bottle is dishwasher safe, and its sturdy leak-proof design makes safer drinking convenient at home, school, on camping trips or during emergencies. For adults, consider LifeStraw Go with two-stage filtration that ensures safe hydration during travel, at home, in the office, at the gym, and outdoors.

For those thinking charitably this season, consider that for every LifeStraw product purchased, one child in a developing community is provided with clean drinking water for an entire school year through the company’s Follow the Liters program. As of now, Follow the Liters has provided safe drinking water to 633,000 students at 1,000 schools, and plans to reach one million students by early 2018. LifeStraw products are available for purchase at specialty retailers and online at www.lifestraw.com.

Give a Local Experience

When shopping for a loved one or friend who seems to have everything, planning an experience may have a greater, longer-lasting impact than a gift card, video game, or flowers.

Consider giving tickets to an art gallery, a play at a nearby theater, or a local museum. Many of these venues are non-profit and donate revenues from ticket sales to charitable foundations. At the same time, you’ll be supporting your local community.

This holiday season, you can spread cheer to loved ones and beyond with thoughtful gifts that make the world a better place.

“The speed dating and networking event, you never know, you may find a mate or business partner. I’m newly single and heard about this type of networking event before, and decided to bring it here,” shared Ardrey.

The lounge already has its list of December events available on the Facebook page, search for CC’s Lyricist Lounge. On December 8, the lounge will host Apollo style Junior, an open mic night for kids between two-17 years of age, admission is $5 and the event starts at 8:00 p.m. On December 16, the lounge will welcome a Bridal Expo featuring vendor and wedding dress models. The lounge will also host a poetry event on December 9 and December 29 starting at 8:00 p.m.

The events are leading up to the one year anniversary of the lounge in the current location, there will be a planned celebration on January 21, which is Ardrey’s birthday.

“I enjoy this current location. Less is more, some people have their opinion. Some say it’s too small, while others say just right,” explained Ardrey.

The name CC, celebrates the three generations of women associated with the lounge: Chawone, her oldest daughter, and three granddaughters. In addition to owning the lounge, she also owns a beauty salon located just four buildings down from the lounge. The salon is called, Transformations natural hair salon, located at 1000 S Reynolds Road. The salon was opened on her mother’s birthday, 10 years ago.

For information about booking your special event, workshops or upcoming events, call 419-810-1341. CC’s Lyricist Lounge is located at 958 S. Reynolds Road between Angola Road and Airport Highway in Toledo. The lounge has a Facebook page, search for ‘CC’s Lyricist Lounge.’
Congresswoman Marcy Kaptur (OH-09), co-chair of the House Great Lakes Task Force and Congressman David Joyce (OH-14) led a bipartisan group of 53 lawmakers in a letter to the Office of Management and Budget Director, Mick Mulvaney urging robust funding in the President’s fiscal year 2019 budget for programs that address harmful algal blooms.

“We write to respectfully request that you allocate robust funding in the President’s Fiscal Year 2019 budget request for programs that address a widespread and ever-increasing problem affecting every state and territory in the nation: toxic algae blooms, also called harmful algal blooms (HABs),” the Members wrote to Director Mulvaney.

““Toxic blooms harm human health and cause several billion dollars in economic losses each year. While we have made significant advances in our understanding of where, when and why blooms occur, we must improve our ability to mitigate their impacts on our communities. We strongly support investment in science, research, and management to increase our capacity to forecast, detect, and prevent HABs, as well as to lessen their impacts on human health and economies across the country,” the Members continued.

“To make the necessary progress toward understanding and addressing the significant and expanding threats that toxic algae pose to human health and our national economy, we ask that you prioritize a strong and coordinated federal response in this year’s budget request with robust funding allocated for HAB-related work,” the Members concluded.
Encyclopedia of Black Comics by Sheena C. Howard, foreword by Henry Louis Gates, Jr., afterword by Christopher Priest

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

“Draw, Sheriff.”

Oh, how you loved to do that. It started with spider-legged people and crooked houses. As you got better, you replicated and created worlds, invented characters, and expanded your tool use. Even today, with sharp pencil or fine pen, you can still make a respectable doodle; in the new book Encyclopedia of Black Comics by Sheena C. Howard, you’ll see how you’re right in ‘toon.

One-hundred-four years ago, the country was captivated by a cat and a mouse. The cat was appropriately called “Kat,” and he lived with the Dingbat family in the comic strip, Krazy Kat. His nemesis was Ignatz, and in each episode, Ignatz the mouse threw a brick at Krazy Kat. It was an “incredibly simple” strip but it became “one of the most respected and influential works in comics history…”

The artist was a black man named George Herriman who was the first major cartoonist of color. He would be far from the last. Today, countless black cartoonists, inkers, illustrators, and writers toil behind-the-scenes to create comic strips and comic books, as well as TV shows and movies. In this book, Howard celebrates the firsts, the bests, the noteworthies, and the historic.

In the early days, for example, many comic writers worked through the Black Press; that included Jackie Ormes, “the first published female African-American cartoonist.” Ormes was the creator of Torchy Brown, a strong black cartoon woman; and fashionista Ginger, whose little sister, Patti-Jo offered wisecracks. In 1947, one of Ormes’ characters was made into an “upscale” doll; in 2014, Ormes was posthumously inducted into the National Association of Black Journalists’ Hall of Fame.

The first African-American cartoonist with “two nationally syndicated comic strips” is in this book. Political and social-commentary cartoonists are represented. The first black woman to own a comic book store is profiled here, as is America’s first black comic book publisher; the “first and only black editor at King Features Syndicate;” an animator and writer whose credits include Thundercats; a 12-time Pulitzer Prize nominee; and many people who use their talents to enhance your favorite superhero comic books...

In his afterword, comics writer-editor Christopher Priest points out that, to many African Americans, the Man of Steel isn’t Superman, he’s “SuperWhiteMan.” That’s just one reason, as Priest indicates, that a book like this is needed. The other reasons fill up these pages with a wide range of biographies, achievements, and examples of many cartoonists’ work, in bite-sized articles that make quick reading. While there’s a chance that you’ve heard of many of the people included in this book, author Sheena C. Howard didn’t just keep things familiar: she dug back into history for several of her profiles, and she also includes people who are on the periphery of – but important to – today’s comic book world.

Quick-minded readers may note some absences inside here, but Encyclopedia of Black Comics is a good start for this genre. For those who love the funnies, cartoons, or pen-and-ink art, this book will be a big draw.

This week includes Giving Tuesday! You have enjoyed Thanksgiving and all your many blessings. It is time to share. Can you give a little or a lot to The Padua Center? We continue to help young people. We continue to teaching care of Mother Earth. We continue to work in our neighborhood.

Can you help us?

Go to our website: paduacenter.org and make a donation today! The Toledo Community Foundation will match the first $500 given. Let’s not let this $500 slip away...a little or big donation...it doesn’t matter...it all helps.

Sprinkle This, Sprinkle That

Making memories that lasts a lifetime.

Thank you for your interest in participating in this special holiday event. My goal is for families to come together and create lasting memories through crafting. The event shall take place at 1811 Adams St Toledo, OH 43604 on Dec 9th and 16th from Noon-4pm. All participants should be able to assist with the following task:

- Check-in
- Santa helper
- Craft helpers
- Host assistant
- Co-host assistant

I’m currently looking for someone to be Santa and to take photos. Entry fee for this is $7 per person, children 5 & under are free. Feel free to promote how you like to gain more interest in this event. There is also an Facebook page you can direct everyone to or visit Eventbrite link https://www.eventbrite.com/e/sprinkle-this-sprinkle-that-holiday-keep-sake-ornaments-tickets-39677640892

I would also like to promote each participant, so in a return email, may I have the name of the organizations and/or product and services you can direct everyone to or visit Eventbrite link https://www.eventbrite.com/e/sprinkle-this-sprinkle-that-holiday-keep-sake-ornaments-tickets-39677640892

Another note: Moms House of Toledo may join us. Hoping to hear from them soon.

Thanks,

The Toledo Branch NAACP 103rd Freedom Fund Banquet

The Toledo Branch NAACP held its 102nd Freedom Fund Banquet on October 28 at the Stranahan Great Hall. The Freedom Fund Banquet is held annually to provide funding for both the local and national NAACP operating expenses. And in addition the funds from the banquet also helps fund the Toledo chapter’s ACT-SO program for local youth giving them an experience of a lifetime as they compete for bronze, silver, and gold awards, potential scholarships and other great opportunities.

This year’s guest speaker was Ben Jealous, former president and CEO of the National NAACP and a Democratic candidate for governor of Maryland.

The foundation for the child’s future begins now. Toledo Public Schools offers high quality programs that help children Newborn to 5 years prepare for kindergarten and beyond. Led by a team of caring professionals, the TPS Early Head Start, Head Start, and Preschool programs provide students with the basics that will set them above the rest as they begin their education.

- Enrolling Students Year Round
- Half and Full Day classes available
- Family Support services provided
- Over 30 locations available across the district
